The amount awarded to Great Britain by the mixed commission organized under the provisions of the treaty of Washington in settlement of the claims of British subjects, arising from acts committed between April 13, 1861, and April 9, 1865, became payable under the terms of the treaty within the past year, and was paid upon the 21st day of September, 1874. In this connection I renew my recommendation made at the opening of the last session of Congress, that a special court be created to hear and determine all claims of aliens against the United States, arising from acts committed against their persons and property during the insurrection. It appears suitable that an opportunity should be offered to the citizens of other States to present their claims, as well as those of British subjects, whose claims were not admissible under the late commission to the early decision of some competent tribunal. To this end I recommend the necessary legislation to organize a court to dispose of all claims of aliens of the nature referred to in an equitable and satisfactory manner, and to relieve Congress and other departments of these questions.

The legislation necessary to extend to the colony of Newfoundland certain articles of the treaty of Washington of the 8th day of May, 1871, having been had, a protocol to that effect was signed in behalf of the United States and Great Britain on the 28th day of May last, and was duly proclaimed on the following day. A copy of the proclamation is submitted herewith.

A copy of the report of the commissioner appointed under the act of March 9, 1871, surveying and making the boundary between the United States and the British possessions from the Lake of the Woods to the summit of the Rocky Mountains, is herewith transmitted. I am happy to announce that the field of work of the commission has been completed, and the entire line from the northwest corner of the Lake of the Woods to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has been run and marked upon the surface of the earth. It is believed that the amount remaining unexpended of the appropriation made at the last session of Congress will be sufficient to complete the office work. I recommend that the authority of Congress be given to the use of the appropriation in the completion of the work of the commission in making its report and preparing the necessary papers.

The court known as the court of commissioners of Alabama claims, created by an act of Congress at the last session, has organized and commenced its work and it is to be hoped that the claims admissible under the provision of the act may be speedily ascertained and paid.

TURKEY.

It has been deemed advisable to exercise the discretion conferred upon the Executive at the last session of Congress by accepting the conditions required by the government of Turkey for the privilege of allowing citizens of the United States to hold real estate in the former country, and by assenting to a certain change in the jurisdiction of the courts in the latter. A copy of the proclamation upon these subjects is herewith communicated.

MEXICO.

There has been no material change in our relations with the independent States of this hemisphere which were formerly under the dominion of Spain. Marauding on the frontiers between Mexico and Texas still frequently takes place, despite the vigilance of the civil and military authorities in that quarter. The difficulty of checking such trespasses along the course of a river of such length as the Rio Grande and so often fordable is obvious. It is hoped that the efforts of this government will be seconded by those of Mexico to the effectual suppression of the acts of wrong. From a report upon the condition of the business before the American and Mexican joint claims commission, made by the agent on the part of the United States and dated October 28, 1874, it appears that of the 1017 claims filed on the part of citizens of the United States 483 had been finally decided and 75 were in the hands of the umpire, leaving 462 to be disposed of; and of the 998 claims filed against the United States 726 had been disposed of finally, and one was before the umpire and 271 remained to be disposed of. Since the date of such report other claims have been disposed of, reducing somewhat the number still pending and others have been passed upon by the arbitrators. It has become apparent in view of these figures and of the fact that the work devolving on the umpire is particularly laborious, that the commission will be unable to dispose of the entire number of claims pending prior to the first day of Febuary, 1875, the date fixed for its expiration. Negotiations are pending looking to the securing of the results of the decisions which have been reached, and to a further extension of the commission for a limited time, which it is confidently hoped will suffice to bring all the business now before it to a final conclusion.

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

The strife in the Argentine confederation is to be deplored, both on account of the parties thereto and from the probable effect on the interest of those engaged in the trade to that quarter, of whom the United States are among the principal. As yet, so far as I am aware, there has been no violation of our neutrality, which, as well as our duties in this respect, it shall be my endeavor to maintain and observe.

THE VENEZUELA CLAIMS.

It is with regret I announce that no further payment has been received from the government of Venezuela on account of awards in favor of citizens of the United States. Hopes have been entertained that the republic would escape both foreign and civil war for a few years, as its great natural resources would enable it to honor its obligations. Though it is now understood to be at peace with other countries, a serious insurrection is reported to be in progress in an important section of that republic. This may be taken advantage of as another reason to delay the payment of the dues of our citizens.

SPAIN AND CUBA.

The deplorable strife in Cuba continues without any marked change in the relative advantage of the contending forces. The insurrection continues, but Spain has gained no superiority. Six years of insurrection gives the insurrection a significance which cannot be denied. Its duration and the tenacity of its adherents, together with the absence of manifested power of suppression, on the part of Spain, cannot be controlled and may make some positive steps on the part of other powers a matter of self-necessity. I had confidently hoped at this time to be able to announce the arrangement of some of the important questions between this government and that of Spain, but the negotiations have been protracted. The unhappy intestine dissensions of Spain command our profound sympathy, and must be accepted as perhaps a cause of some delay. An early settlement in part, at least, of the questions between the governments is hoped. In the meantime, awaiting the results of immediately pending negotiations, I defer a further and fuller communication on the subject of the relations of this country and Spain.

EXPATRIATION AND ELECTION OF NATIONALITY—FRAUDULENT NATURALIZATION.

I have again to call the attention of Congress to the unsatisfactory condition of existing laws with reference to expatriation and the election of nationality. Formerly, amid conflicting opinions and decisions, it was difficult to exactly determine how far the doctrine of perpetual allegiance was applicable to citizens of the United States. Congress, by the act of the 27th of July, 1868, asserted the abstract right of expatriation as a fundamental principle of this government. Notwithstanding such assertions and the necessity of frequent applications of the principles, no legislation has been had defining what acts or formalities shall work expatriation, or when a citizen has been doomed to have renounced, or to have lost his citizenship. The importance of such definition is obvious. The representatives of the United States in foreign countries are continually called upon to lend their aid and the protection of the United States to persons, concerning the good faith or reality of whose citizenship there is at least great question. In some cases the provisions of treaties furnish some guides, in others it is left to benefit persons claiming citizenship while living abroad contributing in no manner to the performance of the duties of a citizen of the United States; and without the intention at any time to return and undertake those duties, they use the claims of citizenship of the United States simply as a shield from the performance of the obligations of a citizen elsewhere. The status of children born of American parents residing in a foreign country; of American women who have married aliens; of American citizens residing abroad where such question is not regulated by treaty, are all sources of frequent difficulty and discussion. Legislation on these and similar questions, and particularly defining when and under what circumstances expatriation can be accomplished, it is to be presumed is especially needed.

In this connection I earnestly call the attention of Congress to the difficulties arising from fraudulent naturalization. The United States wisely, freely and liberally offers its citizenship to all who may come in good faith to reside within the limits, on their compliance with certain prescribed reasonable and simple formalities and conditions. Among the highest duties of the government is that to afford firm, efficient and equal protection to all its citizens, whether native born or naturalized. Care should be taken that a right, carrying with it such support from the government, should not be fraudulently obtained, and should be bestowed only upon full proof of a compliance with the law. And yet frequent instances of illegal and fraudulent naturalization, and of the unauthorized use of certificates are thus improperly obtained. In some cases the fraudulent character of the naturalization has appeared upon the face of the certificate itself. In others, examination discloses that the holder had not complied with the law, and in others, certificates have been obtained where the persons holding them were not only not entitled to be naturalized, but had not been within the United States at the time of the pretended naturalization. Instances of each of these classes of fraud are discovered at our legations, where the certificates of naturalization are presented, either for the purposes of obtaining passports or in demanding the protection of the legation. When the fraud is apparent on the faces of such certificates, they are taken up by the representatives of the government and forwarded to the department of State. But even then the record of the court in which the fraudulent naturalization occurred remains, and duplicate certificates are readily obtainable. Upon the presentation of these for the issue of passports or demanding protection of the government, the fraud sometimes escapes notice, and such certificates are not unfrequently used in the transaction of business to the deception and injury of innocent parties. Without placing any additional obstacles in the way of the obtainment of citzenship by the worthy and well-intentioned foreigner who comes in good faith to cast his lot with ours, I earnestly recommend further legislation to punish fraudulent naturalization and to secure the ready cancellation of the record of every naturalization made in fraud.

NEW TREATIES.

Since my last annual message the exchange has been made of the ratification of the treaties of extradition with Belgium, Ecuador, Peru and Salvador; also of a treaty of commerce and navigation with Peru, and one of commerce and consular privileges with Salvador, all of which have been duly proclaimed, as has also a declaration with Russia with reference to trade-marks.

THE TREASURY—THE COLLECTION OF REVENUES.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, which by law is made directly to Congress and forms no part of this message, will show the receipts and expenditures of the government for the last fiscal year; the amount received from each source of revenue, and the amount paid out for each of the departments of the government. It will be observed from this report that the amount of receipts over expenditures has been $2,344,822 30 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1874, and that for the current fiscal year the estimated receipts over expenditures will not much exceed $9,000,000. In view of the large national debt existing and the obligation to add one per cent. per annum to the sinking fund, a sum amounting now to over $34,000,000 per annum, I submit whether the revenues should not be increased or expenditures diminished to reach this amount of surplus. Not to provide for the sinking fund is a partial failure to comply with the contracts and obligations of the government. At the last session of Congress a very considerable reduction was made in the rates of taxation and in the number of articles submitted to taxation, and the question may well be asked whether or not in some instances unwisely. In connection with this subject, too, I venture the opinion that the means of collecting the revenues, especially from imports, have been so embarrassed by legislation as to make it questionable whether or not large amounts are not lost by failure to collect, to the direct loss of the Treasury and to the prejudice of the interest of honest importers and tax-payers.

The Secretary of the Treasury in his report favors legislation looking to an early return to specie payments, thus supporting the views previously expressed in this message. He also recommends economy in appropriations; calls attention to the loss of revenue from repealing the tax of tea and coffee without benefit to consumers; recommends an increase of ten cents a gallon on whiskey, and further, that no modification be made in the currency and banking bill passed at the last session of Congress, unless modification should become necessary by reason of the adoption of measures for returning to specie payments. In these recommendations I cordially join. I would suggest to Congress the propriety of readjusting the tariff, so as to increase the revenue, and at the same time decrease the number of articles upon which duties are levied. Those articles which enter into our manufactures and are not produced at home, it seems to me, should be entered free. Those articles of manufacture which we produce a constituent part of, but do not produce the whole, that part which we do not produce should enter free also. I will instance fine wool dyes, etc. These articles must be imported to form a part of the higher grades of woolen goods. Chemicals used as dye, compounded in medicines, and used in various ways in manufacture, come under this class. The introduction free of duty of such wools as we do not produce should stimulate the manufacture of goods requiring the use of those we do produce, and therefore would be a benefit to home production. There are many articles entering into home manufactures which we do not produce, ourselves, the tariff upon which increases the cost of producing the manufactured article. All corrections in this regard are in the direction of bringing labor and capital in harmony with each other, and of supplying one of the elements of prosperity so much needed.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT—IMPORTANT RECOMMENDATIONS.

The report of the Secretary of War, herewith attached and forming a part of this message, gives all the information concerning the operations, wants and necessities of the army, and contains many suggestions and recommendations which I commend to your special attention. There is no class of government employes who are harder worked than the army officers and men, none who perform their tasks more cheerfully or efficiently and under circumstances of greater privations and hardships. Legislation is desirable to render more efficient this branch of the public service. All the recommendations of the Secretary of War I regard as judicious, and especially commend to your attention the following: The consolidation of government arsenals; the restoration of mileage to officers travelling under orders; the exemption of money received from the sale of subsistence stores from being covered into the Treasury; the use of appropriations for the purchase of subsistence stores without waiting for the beginning of the fiscal year for which the appropriation is made; for additional appropriation for the collection of torpedo material; for increased appropriation for the manufacture of arms; for relieving the various States from indebtedness for arms charged to them during the rebellion; for dropping officers from the rolls of the army without trial; the offence of drawing pay more than once for the same period; for the discouragement of the plan to pay soldiers by checks, and for the establishment of a professorship of rhetoric and English literature at West Point. The reasons for these recommendations are obvious, and are set forth sufficiently in the report attached. I also recommend that the status of the staff corps of the army be fixed where this has not already been done, so that promotions may be made and vacancies filled as they occur in each grade, when reduced below the number to be fixed by law. The necessity for such legislation is specially felt now in the pay department. The number of officers in that department is below the number adequate to the performance of the duties required of them by law.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

The efficiency of the navy has been largely increased during the last year. Under the impulse of the foreign complications which threatened us at the commencement of the last session of Congress, many of our efficient wooden ships were put in condition for immediate service, and the repairs of our ironclad fleet were pushed with the utmost vigor. The result is that most of these are now in an effective state, and need only to be manned and put into commission to go at once into service. Some of the new sloops authorized by Congress are already in commission, and more of the remainder are launched and await only the completion of their machinery to enable them to take their places as part of our effective force. Two iron torpedo ships have been completed during the last year, and four of our large double-turreted ironclads are now undergoing repair. When these are finished, everything that is useful of our navy, as now authorized, will be in condition for service, and, with the advance in the science of torpedo warfare, the American navy, comparatively small as it is, will be found at any time powerful for the purposes of a peaceful nation. Much has also been accomplished during the year in aid of science and to increase the sum of general knowledge and further the interests of commerce and civilization. Extensive and much-needed soundings have been made for hydrographic purposes and to fix the proper route of ocean telegraphs. Further surveys of the great isthmus have been undertaken and completed, and two vessels of the navy are now employed in conjunction with those of England, France, Germany and Russia, in observations connected with the transit of Venus, so useful and interesting to the scientific world. The estimates for this branch of the public service do not differ materially from those of last year, those for the general support of the service being somewhat less, and those for permanent improvements at the various stations rather larger than the corresponding estimates made a year ago. The regular maintenance and a steady increase in the efficiency of this most important arm, in proportion to the growth of our maritime intercourse and interests, is recommended to the attention of Congress. The use of the navy in time of peace might be further utilized by a direct authorization of the employment of naval vessels in explorations and surveys of the supposed navigable waters of other nationalities on this continent, especially the tributaries of the two great rivers of South America, the Orinoco and the Amazon. Nothing prevents, under existing law, such exploration, except that expenditures must be made in such expeditions beyond those usually provided for by the appropriations. The field designated is unquestionably one of interest, and one capable of large development of commercial interests advantageous to the people reached, and to those who may establish relations with them.

THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The education of the people entitled to exercise the right of franchise, I regard as essential to general prosperity everywhere, and especially so in republics, where education and previous condition does not enter into account in giving suffrage. Next to the public school, the post-office is the great agent of education over our vast territory. The rapidity with which the new sections are being settled, thus increasing the carrying of the mails in a more rapid ratio than the increase of receipts, is alarming. The report of the Postmaster-General, herewith attached, shows that there was an increase of revenue in his department in 1873, over the previous year, of $1,647,411, and an increase of cost of carrying the mails and paying employes, of $3,041,468.91. The report of the Postmaster-General gives interesting statistics of the department, and compares them with the corresponding statistics of a year ago, showing a growth in every branch of the department. A postal convention has been concluded with New South Wales, an exchange of postal cards established with Switzerland, and the negotiations pending several years past with France have terminated in a convention with that country, which went into effect last August. An international postal congress was convened in Berne, Switzerland, in September last, at which the United States was represented by an officer of the Post-Office department of much experience and of qualifications for the position. A convention for the establishment of an international and postal union was agreed upon and signed by the delegates of the countries represented, subject to the approval of the proper authorities of those countries. I respectfully direct your attention to the report of the Postmaster-General, and to his suggestions in regard to an equitable adjustment of the question of compensations to railroads for carrying the mails.

THE SOUTHERN TROUBLES.

Some attention will be drawn to the unsettled condition of affairs in some of the southern States. On the 14th of September last the governor of Louisiana called upon me as provided by the Constitution and laws of the United States, to aid in suppressing domestic violence in that State. This call was made in view of a proclamation issued on that day, D. B. Penn claiming that he was elected lieutenant-governor in 1872, and calling upon the militia of the State to arm, assemble and drive from power the usurpers, as he designated the officers of the State government. On the next day I issued my proclamation, commanded the insurgents to disperse within five days from the date thereof, and subsequently learned that on the day they had taken forcible possession of the State house. Troops were taken by me to support the existing and recognized State government. But before the expiration of the five days the insurrectionary movement was practically abandoned, and the officers of the State government with some minor exceptions, resumed their powers and duties. Considering that the present State administration of Louisiana has been the only government in that State for nearly two years; that it has been tacitly acknowledged and acquiesced in as such by Congress, and more than once recognized by me, I regarded it as my clear duty, when legally called on for that purpose, to prevent its overthrow by an armed mob, under the pretence of fraud and irregularity in the election of 1872. I have heretofore called the attention of Congress to this subject, stating that on account of frauds and forgeries committed at said elections, and because it appears that the returns thereof were never legally canvassed, it was impossible to tell thereby who were chosen; but from the best sources at my command I have always believed the present State officers received a majority of the legal votes actually cast. I repeat what I said in my special message of February 13, 1873, that in the event of no action by Congress I must continue to recognize the government heretofore recognized by me.

I regret to say that with preparations for the election decided indications appeared in some localities in the southern States of a determination, by acts of violence and intimidation, to deprive citizens of the freedom of the ballot because of their political opinions. Bands of men, masked and armed, made their appearance, while leagues and other societies were formed, large quantities of arms and ammunition were imported and distributed to the organizations, military drills with menacing demonstrations were held, and with all these murders enough were committed to spread terror among those whose political action was to be suppressed, if possible, by these proceedings. In some places colored laborers were compelled to vote according to the views of their employers, under threats of discharge if they acted otherwise, and there are too many instances in which where these threats were disregarded, they were remorselessly executed by those who made them. I understand the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution was made to prevent the like state of things, and the act of May 31, 1870, with amendments, was passed to enforce its provisions, the object of this being to guarantee to all citizens the right to vote and protect them in the full enjoyment of that right. Enjoined by the constitution to take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and convinced by undoubted evidence that violations of the said act have been committed, and that a widespread and flagrant disregard of it was contemplated, the proper officers were instructed to prosecute the offenders, and troops were stationed at convenient points to aid them, if necessary, in the performance of their official duties. Complaints are made of this interference by federal authority, but if said amendment and act do not provide for such interference under the circumstances above stated, then they are without meaning, force and effect, and the whole scheme of colored enfranchisement is worse than mockery and little better than a crime. Possibly Congress may find it due to truth and justice to ascertain by means of a committee whether all the alleged wrongs of colored citizens for political reasons are real, or whether the reports thereof were manufactured for the occasion. The whole number of troops in the States of Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Maryland and Virginia, at the time of the election, was 4032, and these embrace the garrisons of all the forts from the Delaware to the Gulf of Mexico. Another trouble has arisen in Arkansas. Article 13 of the constitution of that State, which was adopted in 1868, and upon the approval of which by Congress the State was restored representation as one of the States of the Union, provides in effect that before any amendments proposed to this constitution shall become a part of it, they shall be passed by two successive assemblies, and then submitted to and ratified by a majority of the electors of the State, voting thereon the 11th of May, 1874. The government convened an extra session of the general assembly of the State, which on the 18th of the same month passed an act providing for a convention to frame a new constitution pursuant to this act, and at an election held June 30, 1874, the convention was approved and delegates were chosen there, who assembled on the 9th of last July and formed a new constitution, the schedule of which provided for the election of an entire set of State officers in a manner contrary to the then existing election laws of the State. On October 13, 1874, this constitution as therein provided was submitted to the people for their approval or rejection, and according to the election returns it was approved by a large majority of those qualified to vote thereon. At the same election persons were chosen to fill all the State, county and township offices. The governor elected in 1872 for the term of four years turned over his office to the governor chosen under the new constitution, whereupon the lieutenant-governor, also elected in 1872 for a term of four years, claiming to act as governor, and alleging that said proceedings by which the new constitution was made and a new set of officers elected, were unconstitutional, illegal and void, called upon me, as provided in section 4, of the Constitution, to protect the State against domestic violence. As Congress is now investigating the political affairs of Arkansas, I have declined to interfere. The whole subject of executive interference with the affairs of a State is repugnant to public opinion and to the feelings of those who from their official capacity must be used in such interposition, and to him or those who must direct. Unless most clearly on the side of the laws, such interference becomes a crime. With the law to support it, it is condemned without a hearing. I desire, therefore, that all necessity for executive direction in local affairs may become unnecessary and obsolete.

I invite the attention, not only of Congress, but of the people of the United States, to the causes and effects of these unhappy questions. Is there not a disposition on one side to magnify wrongs and outrages, and on the other to belittle them? If public opinion could be directed to a correct survey of what is and to rebuking wrong, and aiding the proper authorities in punishing it, a better state of feeling would be inculcated, and the sooner we would have that peace which would leave the States free indeed to regulate their own affairs. I believe on the part of our citizens of the southern States, the better part of them, there is a disposition to be law-abiding and do no violence, either to individuals or to the laws existing; but do they do right in ignoring the existence of violence and bloodshed in resistance to constituted authority? I sympathize with their prostrate condition, and would do all in my power to relieve them, acknowledging that in some instances they have had most trying governments to live under and very oppressive ones in the way of taxation for nominal improvements, not giving benefits equal to the hardships imposed; but can they proclaim themselves entirely irresponsible for this condition? They cannot. Violence has been rampant in some localities, and has either been justified or denied by those who could have prevented it. The theory is even raised that there is to be no further interference, on the part of the general government, to protect citizens within a State where the State authorities fail to give protection. This is a great mistake. While I remain executive, all the laws of Congress and the provisions of the Constitution including the recent amendments added thereto, will be enforced with rigor, but with regret that they should have added one jot or title to the executive duties or powers. Let there be fairness in the discussion of southern questions, the advocates of both or all political parties giving honest, truthful reports of occurrences, condemning the wrong and upholding the right, and soon all will be well. Under the existing conditions the negro votes the republican ticket because he knows his friends are of the party. Many a good citizen votes the opposite, not because he agrees with the great principles of state which separate parties, but because generally he is opposed to the negro rule. This is a most delusive cry. Treat the negro as a citizen and voter, as he is and must remain, and soon parties will be divided, not on the color line, but on principle. Then we shall have no complaint of sectional interference.

AN INCREASE OF JUDICIAL DISTRICTS SUGGESTED.

The report of the Attorney-General contains valuable recommendations relating to the administration of justice in the courts of the United States, to which I invite your attention. I respectfully suggest to Congress the propriety of increasing the number of judicial districts in the United States to eleven, the present number being nine, and the creation of two additional judgeships. The territory to be traversed by the circuit judges is so great, and the business of the courts is so steadily increasing, that it is growing more and more impossible for them to keep up with the business requiring their attention. Whether this would involve the necessity of adding two more justices of the Supreme Court to the present number, I submit to the judgment of Congress.

AFFAIRS OF THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

The attention of Congress is invited to the report of the Secretary of the Interior, to the legislation asked for by him. The domestic interests of the people are more intimately connected with this department than with either of the other departments of the goverment. Its duties have been added to until they have become so onerous that without the most perfect system and order it will be impossible for any Secretary of the Interior to keep track of all official transactions having his sanction and done in his name, and for which he is held personally responsible. The policy adopted for the management of Indian affairs, known as the peace policy, has been adhered to with the most beneficial results. It is confidently hoped that a few years more will relieve our frontiers from danger of Indian depredations. I commend the recommendation of the Secretary for the extension of the homestead laws to the Indians, and for some sort of territorial government for the Indian Territory. A great majority of the Indians occupying this Territory are believed to be incapable of maintaining their rights against the more civilized and enlightened white man. Any territorial form of government given them, therefore, should protect them in their homes and property for a period of at least twenty years, and before its final adoption should be ratified by a majority of those affected.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior, herewith attached, gives much interesting statistical information which I abstain from giving an abstract of, but refer you to the report itself. The act of Congress providing the oath which pensioners must subscribe before drawing their pensions, cuts off from this bounty a few survivors of the war of 1812, residing in the southern States. I recommend the restoration of this bounty to all such. The number of persons whose names would thus be restored to the list of pensioners is not large. They are all old persons who could have taken no part in the rebellion, and the services for which they were awarded pensions were in defence of the whole country.

THE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.

The report of the commissioner of agriculture, herewith submitted, contains suggestions of much interest to the general public, and refers to the approaching Centennial and the part his department is ready to take in it. I feel that the nation at large is interested in having this exposition a success, and commend to Congress, such action as will secure a greater general interest in it. Already many foreign nations have signified their intentions to be represented at it, and it may be expected that every civilized nation will be represented.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM—IMMEDIATE ACTION ASKED FOR.

The rules adopted to improve the civil service to the government have been adhered to as closely as have been practicable with the opposition with which they meet. The effect, I believe, has been beneficial on the whole, and has tended to the elevation of the service; but it is impracticable to maintain them without direct and positive support of Congress. Generally the support which this reform receives is from those who give it their support only to find fault when the rules are apparently departed from. The removal from office, without preferring charges against the parties removed, are frequently cited as a departure from the rules adopted, and the retention of those against whom charges are made by irresponsible persons and without good grounds. It is also often condemned as a violation of them under these circumstances, therefore, I announce that if Congress adjourns without positive legislation on the subject of civil service reform, I will regard such action as a disapproval of the system, and will abandon it except so far as to require examinations for certain appointees to determine their fitness. Competitive examinations will be abandoned. The gentlemen who have given their services without compensation as members of the board, to devise rules and regulations for the government of the civil service of the country, have shown much zeal and earnestness in this work, and to them as well as to myself it will be a source of mortification if it is to be thrown away. But I repeat that it is impossible to carry the system to a successful issue without the general approval and assistance and positive law to support it.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

I have stated that three elements of prosperity to the nation—capital, labor skilled and unskilled, and the products of the soil still remain with us. To direct the employment of these is a problem deserving the most serious attention of Congress. If employment can be given to all labor offering itself, prosperity necessarily follows. I have expressed the opinion, and repeat it, that the first requisite to the accomplishment of this end is the substitution of a sound currency in place of one of a fluctuating value. This secured, there are many interests that might be fostered to the great profit of both labor and capital. How to induce capital to employ labor is the question.

TRANSPORTATION OF MAIL SUBSIDIES.

The subject of cheap transportation has occupied the attention of Congress. Much new light on this question will without doubt be given by the committee appointed by the last Congress to investigate and report upon this subject. A revival of shipbuilding, particularly of iron steamship building, is of vast importance to our national prosperity. The United States is now paying over $100,000,000 per annum for freights and passage on foreign ships to be carried abroad and expended in the employment and support of other peoples, beyond a fair percentage of what should go to foreign vessels, estimating on the tonnage and travel of each respectively. It is to be regretted that this disparity in the carrying trade exists, and to correct it I would be willing to see a great departure from the usual course of the government in supporting what might usually be termed a private enterprise. I would not suggest as a remedy direct subsidy to American steamship lines, but I would suggest a direct offer of ample compensation for carrying the mails between the Atlantic seaboard cities and the continent on American owned and American built steamers, and would extend this liberality to vessels carrying the mails to the South American states and to Central America and Mexico, and would pursue the same policy from our Pacific seaports on the Pacific. It might be demanded that vessels built for this service should come to a standard fixed by legislation in tonnage, speed, and all other qualities, looking to the possibility of the government requiring them at some time for war purposes. The right also of taking possession of them in such emergeney should be guarded. I offer these suggestions, believing them worthy of consideration in all seriousness, affecting all sections and all interests alike. If anything better can be done to direct the country into a course of general prosperity, no one will be more ready than I to second the plan.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Forwarded herewith will be found the report of the commissioners appointed under an act of Congress approved June 20, 1874, to wind up the affairs of the District government. It will be seen from the report that the net debt of the District of Columbia, less securities on hand available, is: Bonded debt issued prior to July 1, 1874, $8,883,940 43; 3-65 bonds, act of Congress, June 20, 1874, $2,088,168 73; certificates of the board of audit, $4,770,558 45; total, $15,742,667 61; less special improvement assessments, chargeable to private property in excess of any demand against such assessments, $1,614,054 37; less Chesapeake and Ohio Canal bonds, $75,000, and Washington and Alexandria Railroad bonds, $59,000; in the hands of the commissioner of the sinking fund, $8,748,054 37; leaving the actual debt, less assets, $13,994,613 24. In addition to this, there are claims preferred against the government of the district, amounting, in the estimated aggregate reported by the board of auditors, to $3,417,787 48, of which the greater part will probably be rejected.

This sum can with no more propriety be included in the debt accounts of the District government than can the thousands of claims against the general government be included as a portion of the national debt; but the aggregate sum thus stated includes something more than the funded debt, chargeable exclusively to the District of Columbia. The act of Congress of June 28, 1864, contemplates an apportionment between the United States government and the District of Columbia in respect to the payment of the principal and interest of 3-65 bonds. Therefore, computing with precision the bond debt of the District, the aggregate sums above stated as respects the 3-65 bonds now issued, the outstanding certificates of the board of audit and the unadjusted claims pending before that board should be reduced to the extent of the amount to be apportioned to the United States government. I especially invite your attention to the commissioner of the sinking fund, relative to the ambiguity of the act of June 20, 1874, the interest on the District bonds, and the consolidation of the indebtedness of the District. I feel much indebted to the gentlemen who consented to leave their private affairs and come from a distance to attend the business of this district, and for the satisfactory and able manner in which it has been conducted. I am sure their services will be equally appreciated by the entire country.

It will be seen from the accompanying full report of the board of health that the sanitary condition of the District is very satisfactory. In my opinion the District of Columbia should be regarded as the grounds of the national capital, in which the entire people are interested. I do not allude to this to urge generous appropriations to the District, but to draw the attention of Congress in framing a law for the government of the District, to the magnificent scale on which the city was planned by the founders of the government, the manner in which for ornamental purposes the reservations of streets and avenues were laid out, and the proportion of the property actually possessed by the general government. I think the proportion of the expenses of the government and the improvements to be borne by the general government, the cities of Washington and Georgetown, and the country, should be carefully and equitably defined.

THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

In accordance with section 3, act approved June 23, 1874, I appointed a board to make a survey of the Mississippi River, with a view to determine the best method of obtaining and maintaining depth of water sufficient for the purposes of commerce, etc., and in accordance with an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a commission of engineers to investigate and report a permanent plan for the excavation of the alluvial basin of the Mississippi, now subject to inundation," I appointed a commission of engineers. Neither board has yet completed it labors. When their reports are received they will be forwarded to Congress without delay.

The winter of editorial discontent reaches a climax when the President's message and his secretaries' reports absorb too much space.

Major Philip R. Fendall of the U. S. Marine Corps at this station, is to be detached Dec. 10th and ordered to report for duty as Fleet Marine Officer of the European Squadron, on board the U. S. S. Franklin. While we congratulate Major Fendall upon succeeding to a more important position, we can but regret that we are to lose from our midst so good an officer, and such a courteous gentleman.

Hon. Ezra A. Stevens, formerly of this city, is superintendent of the Sunday school of Dr. Wellman's church, Malden, Mass.

Tramps become more impudent with good treatment. Nearly a score of them slept in the station house, Monday night, and one was so impudent that Marshal Marden would have been justified if he had lifted him out of his pantaloons. Some of these fellows are as saucy as they are ragged. The Marshal proposes to purchase buck-saws, and some fine morning there will be a busy scene at the court where the police station is situated—or a scarcity of tramps.

Frank W. Hackett, Esq., argued the case of Capt. Orlando G. Robinson, master of barque Gypsey, before the Alabama claims commission at Washington, Monday.

The readings by Miss Kate Reignolds delighted a large lyceum audience, Tuesday evening. The lady expressed her views on the woman question in opposition to those of other feminines on the public platform, thinking that a woman should be queen of hearts. Of course, the fair speaker and actress carried the audience with her. The entertainment was decidedly unique. The listeners were spell bound and gave breathless attention, the highest compliment that can be paid.

Officers Hayes and Marden found a robe in the street, Tuesday night, which the owner can have on paying expenses of advertising.

Washburn's Last Sensation to-night at the Temple with an attractive programme. Mr. Washburn has thus far performed all he promised and always gets out the largest audiences of any showman travelling. See the programme.

A second concert by the Hutchinson Family is advertised for Thursday evening.

News and Notes.

If Massachusetts thoroughly knew herself she would send such a man as Ex-Gov. Bullock to the U. S. Senate.

Seven hundred negroes attacked Vicksburg, Miss., Monday, at three points and were defeated, losing 25 killed and wounded and 40 prisoners. One white man was killed and two wounded. The attack was made to reinstate the colored sheriff, who was requested to resign because he had not given a bond. The negroes in the country have burned dwelling and gin houses.

The State canvassers announce the official vote of New York for Governor to be: Tilden, democrat, 416,391; Dix, republican 366,074; Clark, temperance, 11,768. Democratic majority, 38,449.

Beecher's trial is postponed until next Monday, against the wishes of Tilton.

A printers' tournament at Washington, D. C., resulted in a victory for S. N. Beuerman, of the Washington Chronicle, who set 5070 ems in three hours, and was awarded a solid gold composing stick. R. A. McLean, of the Star, took the second prize, a silver stick, setting 4998 ems. Then there was a grand banquet at the Imperial Hotel, where Col James S. Peirce gave them such a "set-out" that all were delighted.

The democratic supreme court of Indiana has decided that colored children have no privileges in free schools.

The Knoxville Chronicle says the programme of the Tennessee democrats is to elect Gov. John C. Brown to the United States Senate, "out of sheer spite to Andrew Johnson."

The Newburyport lead mine is daily attracting attention. The Herald says that Professor R. H. Richards, of the Institute of Technology, has visited the property, and he reports that the galena is rather fine in texture, and that the ore reminded him very much of the rich silver ores of Georgetown, Colorado. Several assays were made by him, the most important of which, as it represented a reasonably large specimen, was made upon a piece of float ore weighing 500 pounds. The mass was broken and a piece, weighing 145 pounds, was taken to experiment upon. This, when broken and sorted, yielded ninety-two pounds of fair smelting ore, and when smelted the ore yielded thirty pounds of crude argentiferous ingot lead, and by subsequent treatment this gave 436 grains of silver, 4.37 grains of gold and twenty-three pounds of pure refined lead. Several pounds of lead were lost by the cupelling process. From this it appears that a ton of sorted ore is worth $66 57, and a ton of crude ingot lead $213 43.

It is said that the impression seems to prevail among the Pennsylvania democrats that every county in the State is entitled to a United States Senator, instead of the State having only two, and the democracy only one of these.

A St. Louis paper pertinently remarks: "Let any man who thinks democracy is a nice thing to have in power be good enough to tell us how the average democratic Congressman will vote when asked by democratic constituents either to refund the cotton tax or pay for cotton destroyed during the war."

The New York Herald has been interviewing democratic members-elect of the next Congress, and figures their choice for Speaker as follows: Michael C. Kerr, of Indiana, 51; Milton Sayler, of Ohio, 26; Fernando Wood, of New York, 18; Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, 17; Samuel S. Cox, of New York, 10; Gilbert Walker, of Virginia, 7; Philip F. Thomas, of Maryland, 4; doubtful, 31; total 164.

The leading democratic Congressmen manifest much anxiety and regret that so many of their prominent leaders either declined re-election or were defeated. They say that, as a consequence, the large democratic majority in the next Congress will be practically without any skilled Parliamentary leaders, while the republican opposition will be under the leadership of some of the ablest Parliamentarians that the world has known.

Congressman James Beck, of Kentucky, is said to be a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Stevenson

The democratic organs assure us that in the last campaign the republican party was beaten because of its sins of commission. Chief among these they say was the "salary grab" act. And yet the chief salary grabber on the democratic side of the House is the most prominent candidate for Speaker of the Forty-fifth Congress.

State News.

The Manchester Union chose to make sport of the enthusiastic meeting of the republican State committee, whereupon the Monitor tersely says: "In due time the republicans will put up for Governor a man whose election over all forms of opposition will be assured from the moment of his nomination. Don't you forget it, either."

The State Normal School opened on Monday with seventy-five students, a much larger number than at the previous winter terms.

Thus far in the democratic programme, the wily Sinclair has defeated the "bully Bingham" at all points, and is likely to secure the nomination of Col. Henry O. Kent of Lancaster for Congressman in the third district.

The Great Falls Journal says that many men in that place are at work for 87 1-2 cents per diem, and out-of-door work at that.

—The Port Jervis Gazette says several years ago a hopeful young minister left these shores for the Cannibal Islands as a missionary. On arriving at the end of his journey the natives weighed him and cut a sliver off his leg as a sample. He came home by the next boat, and is now the travelling agent of a circus.

—A queer case is reported from Denver, Col. A man got drunk, stole his own trunk, and hid it. He complained of the theft, the property was recovered, and he was made the prosecuting witness. The judge, being in a quandary how to treat so novel a case, decided that the thief was not accountable for his acts.

—"Is it true that since the introduction of lady operators on your lines, there isn't so much vulgar talking over the wires?" asked a female suffragist of a western Union official. "Yes, ma'am," he answered; "but the conversation makes up in length what it lacks in breadth."

—It is said that bleeding a partially blind horse at the nose will restore him to sight.

—People who waste their time, generally try to waste the time of others.

HAVING purchased the stock of STOVES and Housekeeping Goods in the well known "Jones Stove Store," and made large additions thereto, we are prepared to offer to our customers and the public generally the best assortment of the most approved and latest patterns of

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, either and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, still by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC GEM Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will engage a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole seasonable weather and the Gen. Grant, Union Gem Furnace, etc., etc.

SOAPST ONE STOVES in great variety: Open Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the concern, which we are bound to close out at any price.

Piano and Singing.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs!

No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents; having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings by any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chrome, besides!

The artistic feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discrimin ate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, the pencils before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from a home or foreign source.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a form so attractive as much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the original of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 1000 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the award next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER,

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which would likely to impair its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in this way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to insert new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and others whose pens are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Inspector General's Department shall consist of one colonel, two lieutenant-colonels, and two majors, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of officers of said grades; and the Secretary of War may, in addition, detail officers of the line, not to exceed four, to act as assistant inspector-general; Provided, That officers of the line detailed as acting inspectors-general shall have all the allowances of cavalry officers of their respective grades; and no new appointment shall be made in the Inspector-General's Department until the number of inspectors-general is reduced to five.

That the Bureau of Military Justice shall hereafter consist of one Judge-Advocate-General, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; and the said Judge-Advocate-General shall receive, revise, and have recorded the proceedings of all courts-martial, courts of inquiry and military commissions, and shall perform such other duties as have been heretofore performed by the Judge-Advocate-General of the Army. In the corps of judge-advocates no appointment shall be made as vacancies occur until the number shall be reduced to four, which shall thereafter be the permanent number of the officers of that corps.

SEC. 3. That hereafter there shall be three assistant commissaries-general of subsistence, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant-colonel, instead of the two now allowed by law of said grade in the Subsistence Department; that the number of commissaries of subsistence with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a captain of cavalry, is hereby reduced to twelve, and no appointment to fill a vacancy in said grade shall be made until the number thereof shall be reduced to twelve, and the number thereafter shall remain fixed at twelve.

SEC. 4. That the Medical Department of the Army shall hereafter consist of one Surgeon-General, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier general; one assistant surgeon-general, and one chief medical purveyor, each with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a colonel; and two assistant medical purveyors, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenant-colonels, who shall give the same bonds which are or may be required of assistant paymasters-general of like grade, and shall, when not acting as purveyors, be assignable to duty as surgeons by the President; fifty surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of majors; one hundred and fifty assistant surgeons, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of lieutenants of cavalry for the first five years' service, and with the rank, pay, and emoluments of captains of cavalry after five years' service; and four medical store-keepers, with the same compensation as is now provided by law; and all the original vacancies in the grade of assistant surgeon shall be filled by selection by competitive examination; and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to appoint, from the enlisted men of the Army, or cause to be enlisted, as many hospital-stewards as the service may require, to be permanently attached to the Medical Department, under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe. And the number of contract-surgeons shall be limited to seventy-five on or before the first day of January in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-five; and thereafter no more than that number shall be employed.

SEC. 5. That the Ordnance Department shall consist of one Chief of Ordnance, with the rank, pay, and emoluments of a brigadier-General; three colonels, four lieutenant-colonels, ten majors, twenty captains, sixteen first lieutenants; and all vacancies which may hereafter exist in the grade of first lieutenant in said Department shall be filled by transfer from the line of the Army: Provided, That no appointment or promotion in said Department shall hereafter be made until the officer or person so appointed or promoted shall have passed a satisfactory examination before a board of ordnance officers senior to himself.

SEC. 6. That no officer now in service shall be reduced in rank or mustered out by reason of any provision of law herein made reducing the number of officers in any department or corps of the staff.

SEC. 7. That as vacancies shall occur in any of the grades of the Ordnance and Medical Departments, no appointments shall be made to fill the same until the numbers in such grade shall be reduced to the numbers which are fixed for permanent appointments by the provisions of this act; and thereafter the number of permanent officers in said grades shall continue to conform to said reduced numbers, and all other grades in said Ordnance and Medical Departments than those authorized by the provisions of this act shall cease to exist as soon as the same shall become vacant by death, resignation or otherwise; and no appointment or promotion shall hereafter be made to fill any vacancy which may occur therein.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1874.

The Spirit That Wins Victories.

If the republicans of this State pay heed to the utterances of the republican press, they will place themselves on the high road to success. With unerring foresight every paper in sympathy with the glorious past which shows an almost unbroken line of victories in twenty years, has warned the leaders that they who have axes to grind must stand back, that honesty must govern and the will of the masses be unchecked. It is with pride we call to mind the fact that no republican paper takes exception to the course which commends itself to all fair-minded men, that with one accord the republican press urges diligence and watchfulness that no unseen rock shall wreck the republican party in the coming campaign. It is a refreshing fact that each republican editor desires that the party pledge itself to high moral grounds and that it enter the campaign with justice and integrity so apparent in every action that no false issue shall mislead and no false note be sounded. In the past, the republican press of New Hampshire has wielded a power that no opposition could circumvent, and now the same spirit animates it and the same vigor characterizes its presentation of facts and arguments. Among our contemporaries we do not remember to have seen a more telling article than the Nashua Telegraph of the 7th presented, on "The Next Campaign and its Issues." We do not agree exactly with the writer's idea that the democracy are apparently on the same platform as the republicans, although they have been irresistibly drawn thitherward against their will by the course of events—but we commend the closing half of the Telegraph's article to our readers as one of the best put arguments of the campaign we have yet read. Says the Telegraph:

The republican party is out of power, the democratic party is in—in New Hampshire fully. To get in the, democratic party has been forced by the logic of events and experience to adopt principles which it has steadily opposed—to declare that it will abide by the amendments, protect the rights of all citizens, and oppose all forms of repudiation. To remain in power, the level heads in the democratic party—the Thurmans, the Tildens, the Bayards—fully recognize the necessity of maintaining the platform upon which the party has resumed power. Will it? And if it will, what then?

All the political issues of the next two years are involved in the answers to these questions. To find an answer to the first, we find but one response among the representative men of the party. There is some discordance in State platforms, but in the main they accept the situation. We have no doubt that the democratic convention to be held at Concord on the 5th of January will accept it fully. Then why longer doubt that it will be safe to turn the Nation as well as the State over to the full control of the democratic party? For the best of reasons, and which will be found to be plainly written in the history and tendency of that party. We have space for but a single illustration from each. Professions of statesmen and enunciations of platforms have but the strength of a rope of sand when brought into antagonism with the logical tendencies of a party. Never has the country had profounder assurances than when a democratic President and democratic statesmen declared in 1853 that by no act of theirs should the compromise measures of 1850 be disturbed. Yet, in 1854, when the Southern wing of the democratic party demanded the right to take their slaves into any territory, we find a Douglas ready to champion the theory and a Pierce unequal to the keeping of his own assurance to the country that by no act of his should the slavery agitation be reopened. In their demand the slave-propagandists of 1854 were logical, and therein lay the subtle power before which the Northern democracy cowered and broke. Who can say that in 1876 some new Douglas may not arise to champion a demand now dormant but none the less logical that "Congress usurped control over the matter of suffrage," and therefore it belongs to each State to settle the question of suffrage for itself? Give the democratic party control of the nation, and democratic statesmen and platforms would bend before the logic of such a demand as the oak bends before the storm. It is the dormant logic of their position that makes it absolutely unsafe to entrust the peace and liberties of the people of this country to the keeping of the democratic party as such.

But suppose the dormant reactionary tendency of the party be not aroused, what then? What are the developed tendencies of that party? Our own State shall answer. No sooner did it come into the control of this State last June than it bent all its energies to grasp and intrench itself in power. Going back twenty years for a precedent, it sought to parcel out all the officers of the State among its own partisans in spite of the truce offered by the republicans in 1872, and in spite of the civil service plank in its last national platform. Instead of bringing forward measures calculated to foster and stimulate the industrial and educational interests, it made its great fight over a measure to legalize a traffic that is at war with industry everywhere, but failing there, it struck a blow at the educational interest of the State by depriving its three thousand teachers of the cheap but useful boon of teachers' institutes. Instead of seeking to rectify the partisanship displayed by their opponents in redistricting the State in 1873, they went as much beyond them rewarding cities and rearranging the Councilor and Senatorial lines as partisan overreaching always goes beyond judicial fairness. Even a measure wisely calculated to punish bribery and secure honest elections, and which passed the House without a dissenting vote, was summarily killed by the democratic Senate.

In all this we have a sample of the tendency of the democratic party of this State. It is not only reactionary, but it is positively detrimental to the interests of New Hampshire. Not as republicans alone, but as a whole people, we ought to vote it at an end next March. Especially should the young men rally, who wish to see the State take the advanced position among States to which it is entitled by its varied resources, its intelligence, and its invincible energy.

Time to Act.

The Wolfeboro' News speaks plainly and with truth of the duty of all republicans wishing good government to attend the caucuses, and says: The next thing in order will be the preliminary meetings for choice of delegates to attend conventions. The character of the nominees of these conventions will depend upon the character of the delegates elected at these preliminary meetings; and the character of these delegates will depend upon the character of the people who attend the preliminary meetings. Now if the people would have men of correct principles, morally and politically, for Governor, Councillors, Senators and county officers, men of correct principles must attend these preliminary meetings and control their action in the selection of delegates to the conventions. No progress can be made in a right direction if moral and religious men stay from the meetings and permit them to be controlled by scheming politicians. This latter class are sure to be there, and if better men stay at home the nominations will be made in their personal interests without regard to principles. Now let sufficient time and ample notice be given for the caucuses, and let the people attend them en masse. Let every man feel that it is a duty that he owes to his country and to himself to attend these meetings, and when there act independently, understandingly and fearlessly. It matters not to what party men attach themselves, if they wish for good laws and a proper administration of them, they must take an interest in the first steps toward the election of good men. This thing is settled at the caucus. The people of this country can rule if they will. They have a much deeper interest in a good government than have the political tricksters who too often control the nominations through their remissness. * * * * *

There was never a better time for the party to place itself in a position to command the hearty, earnest support of all good men than the present. The political slate has been wiped clean by the action of our democratic friends. Let the true men of the party see that it is not again disgraced by the names of persons for whom an honest man must blush to vote.

—A nice young man got into a car on the Dayton Short Line Railroad, and saw to his delight the only vacant seat in the coach was by the side of a young lady acquaintance. He reached for that seat with joyous strides, and her eyes answered his delighted looks. But just as he got there, an elderly party from the other end of the car waltzed up the aisle and dropped into the coveted seat. The young man approached more slowly and accosted the young lady: "How is your brother?" he asked, "is he able to get out?" "Oh, yes," she said. "Will he be very badly marked?" he continued; and the old gentleman grew suddenly interested. "Oh, no," said the fair deceiver, "with exception of a few small pits on his forehead, you would never know he had ever had it." "Were you not afraid of taking it?" the young man went on, while the old gentleman broke out in cold perspiration. "Not at all," she replied; "I had been vaccinated, you know." The seat was vacated instantly, two young hearts beat as half a dozen, and the prattle of "nice talk" strewed that part of the car, while a gray-haired old man scowled upon them from the hard accommodation of the wood-box.

—A pleasing incident is told us by a clergyman who has just returned from a health trip. He relates how a baggage man on a Western railroad was so impelled by force of habit that he began to knock around and kick and jam the trunk of an elephant, a menagerie company having loaded the beast on a flat car. The force of habit in the trunk was also strong, and the heap of blood and bones beside the track demonstrated that for once in a railroad encounter the trunk had the best of it. As above remarked, this incident comes from the lips of a clergyman lately returned from a Western trip, taken for his health.

—The Montpelier Watchman tells the following: "One of our insurance companies had a heavy insurance upon a certain dwelling house in this State. Recently, a lady living in the house (the owner being temporarily absent) dreamed that there was a hole in the chimney in the attic, with kindling piled around it, apparently for the purpose of firing the house. So much did the dream trouble her that she could only be satisfied by a personal inspection of the spot—when, to the surprise of all, she found everything just as she had dreamed; a hole broken through the chimney and filled with matches, paper and wood kindlings, the whole carefully covered up with a board, and the board held in place by a stone, all ingeniously arranged for a very mysterious conflagration. It is needless to add that the insurance company regarded this discovery as good cause for at once cancelling the policy."

—The couple seat themselves at a discreet and becoming distance, when the nudging begins they keep on nudging till they can't get any nudger. Then the game is out.

—"I am astonished, my dear young lady, at your sentiments; you make me start." "Well, I have been wanting you to start for the last hour."

—The St. Louis Globe notices that the westwardbound trains are crowded with nice young men, who part their hair in the middle and carry Russia leather travelling bags. They have heard that Mr. Sharon, who gave his daughter a million-dollar wedding present, has another daughter in reserve, and they are going West to grow up with the country.

State News.

The Dover (Foster's) Democrat says Hon. Warren F. Daniell declines to be the democratic candidate for Governor, and suggests Chief Justice Edmund L. Cushing, of Charlestown, as the coming man. The Concord Patriot, on the other hand says there is a strong under-current in favor of Hon. Joseph Burrows, of Plymouth. Was it with this that Burrows was induced to retire last June that Hatch might be Speaker?

A Rochester man had a dwelling hauled to that place from Barnstead, a distance of fourteen miles, recently.

Benjamin Edgerly, of Wakefield, has a pair of full blooded Durham steers, 16 months old, which measure 5 1-2 feet in girth, and weigh 1,550 lbs. He has also a Durham cow, 5 years old, which girts 7 feet and weighs 1,600 lbs. She has given 20 quarts of milk per day, making 9 1-2 lbs. of butter per week.

Conway is suffering disastrously from typhoid fever, 18 deaths, including several adults, having occurred within a few weeks. The schools have closed.

As Mr. Levi Chase of Moultonville, Ossipee, was engaged in loading logs, Nov. 28th, a lever with which he was at work slipped and threw him upon the ice with so much force as to cause internal injury from which he died.

A wildcat weighing eighteen pounds has been shot in Candia.

A Frenchman chopping wood in Nashua found the head of an old lady in a tin box, having the appearance of having been there months. The whole thing is a mystery.

The large furniture building of I. J. Burns in Milford was partially burned on the 7th. Loss on building and furniture $1000; no insurance.

Mrs. Herbert Kimball, of Hillsborough, attempted to end her life recently by cutting her throat with a razor, but her plans were frustrated and now she heartily repents of the rash act. She cut a very bad gash in her neck, but not deep enough to sever the main arteries. The wound bled profusely, and when found she was barely alive, but the doctor thinks with careful nursing she will recover.

Hon. E. C. Bailey of the Patriot is mentioned as the democratic candidate for Congressman in the second district. Why not?

The Keene election resulted in the re-election of Mayor Colony, democrat, by 20 plurality over Faulkner, republican, by a reduced majority. The republicans carried four of the five wards. Previous to the election the democratic paper published there predicted 250 majority for Colony. The average republican majority in the city on all officers except Mayor is nearly 200, a gain of about 50 over the March election.

The two gold mines in Littleton are both operated and doing well.

There has been a large bear rambling over the northern range of Ossipee Mountains the past fall, and a man by the name of Merrill set a steel trap that weighed twenty-five pounds, with an ox chain attached to it that would hold a pair of six feet cattle to draw by, and yet his bear-ship snapped it in twain and left for other parts.

The Manchester Union chose to make sport of the enthusiastic meeting of the republican State committee, whereupon the Monitor tersely says: "In due time the republicans will put up for Governor a man whose election over all forms of opposition will be assured from the moment of his nomination. Don't you forget it, either."

Good sleighing in the northern section of the State.

A number of the citizens of East Wilton are already preparing to rebuild, and the leading men say that in five years East Wilton will be more flourishing than ever before.

Dover is just recovering from a fashionable wedding.

The Unitarians of Exeter have built a residence for their pastor, upon a lot of land adjoining their church edifice, given for the purpose by Mrs. Charles H. Bell.

The State Normal School opened on Monday with seventy-five students, a much larger number than at the previous winter terms.

Thus far in the democratic programme, the wily Sinclair has defeated the "bully Bingham" at all points, and is likely to secure the nomination of Col. Henry O. Kent of Lancaster for Congressman in the third district.

The Great Falls Journal says that many men in that place are at work for 87 1-2 cents per diem, and out-of-door work at that.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Boston & Maine Railroad held at Lawrence on the 9th, the old board of Directory was chosen without opposition.

Alexander H. Stephens says that when he was a boy he visited a melon patch and, 'plugged' the most promising melons, intending to confiscate them when ripe; but he found that the plugged melons invariably rotted before they ripened. In using this figure Mr. Stephens very properly compares the democratic party to a 'plugged melon' when they reckon so confidently on electing a President in 1876.

The observation of the transit of Venus in India was successful. Over one hundred photographes were taken.

They have a queer way of assessing taxes in Massachusetts, which the Lynn Reporter illustrates in this way: A man purchases a house for $15,000, mortgages it for $10,000, and puts that sum into his business. The assessors go around, assess the house for $12,000 valuation, assess the owner for $10,000 in business and the capitalist for $10,000 loaned!

The Proctor-Moulton case is referred to a referee, Benj. Silliman, Moulton intending only to prove what was told him.

Judge Kelley urged his pet financial scheme in Congress on the opening day, and it was endorsed by Gen. Butler. Gen. Garfield followed, endorsing the President's position.

A gale prevailed on the British coast on the 9th. A large vessel, supposed to be the John Cook, from Quebec for Shields, has been totally wrecked and fifteen of the crew were drowned. Nine vessels are ashore at Hartlepool and several wrecked at Seaham.

The Toledo Blade: "Should the democrats succeed in electing the next President, will Tweed and Morrissey have positions in the Cabinet?

There is a member of Congress elect in Missouri who is known as Big Majority Clark. His majority was 19,340. His opponent has concluded not to contest his election.

The Secretary of the Treasury recommends in his report that a day be fixed, not more than three years distant, for the resumption of specie payments, and asks that the Secretary be authorized to raise gold by selling bonds to a sufficient amount to keep gold enough in the Treasury to redeem the greenbacks presented. He recommends a system of free banking as a part of the plan of resumption, and also the repeal of the legal-tender act, to apply to all contracts made after a fixed day, except salaries and expenditures under existing appropriations. He thinks the penalties for violation of the customs laws have been injuriously modified in several particulars, but he is opposed to the restoration of the moiety system. As to the tariff, he says that if Congress should determine to take any action, it should be deliberate action, and recommends the appointment of a commission to report on the subject to the next Congress. He strongly urges general economy and a careful revision of all the estimates.

The New York Herald has been interviewing democratic members-elect of the next Congress, and figures their choice for Speaker as follows: Michael C. Kerr, of Indiana, 51; Milton Sayler, of Ohio, 26; Fernando Wood, of New York, 18; Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, 17; Samuel S. Cox, of New York, 10; Gilbert Walker, of Virginia, 7; Philip F. Thomas, of Maryland, 4; doubtful, 31; total 164.

The leading democratic Congressmen manifest much anxiety and regret that so many of their prominent leaders either declined re-election or were defeated. They say that, as a consequence, the large democratic majority in the next Congress will be practically without any skilled Parliamentary leaders, while the republican opposition will be under the leadership of some of the ablest Parliamentarians that the world has known.

Congressman James Beck, of Kentucky, is said to be a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Stevenson.

Hon. Henry L. Williams carried every ward in Salem, Mass., Tuesday, for Mayor, receiving 1741 votes to 1173 for Gen. Cogswell. Mayor Ferson is re-elected in Chelsea, by a vote of 1417 to 565. Mayor Furber is re-elected in Somerville by 1123 to 825. Mayor Fears is re-elected in Gloucester by 1406 out of 1415. Hon. Emerson Wright, republican, is elected Mayor of Springfield by 1864 to 1521 for the present democratic Mayor. Fall River re-elected Mayor Davenport by 580 majority. Hon. Geo. H. Babbitt is elected Mayor of Taunton by 1603 to 1029. Hon. Alpheus Currier is elected Mayor of Haverhill. Hon. Robert H. Tewksbury is elected Mayor of Lawrence by 2396 to 1555 for Melvin, democrat. The republicans elect all six aldermen and 15 out of the 18 councilmen. The democrats had a majority in both branches last year.

On account of a strike by the Pittsburg (Pa.) puddlers against a reduction of wages, 15,000 workmen are unemployed.

The Secretary of the Treasury estimates that for the current fiscal year the revenue of the government will amount to $284,318,235 99, and that the ordinary expenses of the government will be $275,315,489 42, which will leave a surplus remaining of $9,002,796 57 to be applied to the sinking fund. There will, however, be a deficiency in the sinking fund account for this year of $22,093,748 43. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1870, he estimates the revenues will be $293,000,000, and the expenditures $272,778,000, leaving a surplus revenue in excess of $20, 220,000, to be applied to the sinking fund, which will be insufficient to the extent of $11,920,914.

Business Notices.

The best thing for a COUGH is Buchan's Pulmonic Cordial. Ask your grocer for it. S. C. Berry, General Agent for Rye, Hampton and North Hampton.

Upon the Health of the Teeth

Depends the purity of the breath. Preserve them unblemished by the use of the famous SOZODONT, that perfectly harmless vegetable preparation, and you will never regret it.

To Shake, or Not to Shake?

Aye, that is the question. Is it better to quiver from head to foot in the paroxysms of fever and ague, or to banish the atrocious disease by a course of that standard anti-febrile remedy, Hostetter's Bitters. There cannot be much doubt as to the response of the malaria-stricken to this inquiry. From every locality on this continent whose inhabitants are tormented with the shivering plague comes an increasing demand for the only genuine preventive and eradicant of malaria provided by science. The denizens of fever and ague districts well know how utterly inadequate to do more than to give a brief respite are the so-called remedies of the faculty. Quinine, arsenic, bismuth—what are these but poisonous palliatives, which cease after a time to produce any beneficial effect whatever, and if persisted in wreak irreparable mischief upon the system? Everywhere they are being abandoned by intelligent persons, and that genuine vegetable specific for intermittent and remittent disease, Hostetter's Bitters, substituted in their place.

NEVER GIVE UP!

If all the cases in which HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR has cured inveterate and apparently fatal coughs, could be made known, every consumptive in the land would hasten to send for a remedy, in hope, of course of this most wonderful preparation. Physicians who have exhausted their list of pulmonics, without benefit, recommend it as a last resort, and even in the worst extremity its effects are astonishing. But it should be the first resort, not the last. It is impossible for any disease tending to consumption to retain its hold, if met in the early stages with this powerful vegetable remedy.

FINK'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

A Short Postponement of the Fifth Gift Concert.

As manager of the gift concerts given in aid of the Public Library of Kentucky, my position creates an important trust in behalf of the Public Library, and the ticket-holders of the fifth gift concert. The Public Library of Kentucky and the ticket-holders are jointly interested in the amount of the drawing. The larger the fund to be distributed in gifts, the greater will be the gift awarded to each lucky ticket-holder and more the amount realized by the Library. To have a full drawing is so manifestly to the interest of those interested, that, rather than have a fractional drawing on the 30th inst., I deem it due to the trust confided to me by the ticket-holders and the Public Library of Kentucky, that a short postponement be made to enable me to dispose of the unsold tickets and have a full drawing. Though the very large amount now in bank would enable me to distribute handsome gifts, yet we should feel disappointed in this our last concert, should we be compelled to make a fractional drawing, however large.

We have received so very large a number of letters from all parts of the country from those most largely interested, urging a postponement if all the tickets be not sold by the 30th, that we feel strengthened in our sense of duty to the ticket-holders and the Public Library, to make the postponement. Under the circumstances, we have determined, in the interest of all parties, to postpone the concert and drawing to Saturday, February 27, 1875, at which time the drawing will positively take place; and, as a guarantee of good faith toward ticket-holders, we pledge ourselves to refund to any ticket-holder his money, upon presentation of his ticket, should the drawing fail to come off at the day now fixed. The past, we feel assured, will be sufficient guarantee to all interested that they will be fairly and honestly dealt with. The money paid for tickets is scrupulously preserved against all contingencies until after the payment of the gifts, after which the expenses are to be reimbursed and the Public Library is to be paid its profits.

THOS. E. BRAMLETTE,
Agent and Manager.

Better than life insurance.

By the expenditure of a small amount before the 29th of December, in assisting the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., to complete their Temple, you may obtain a fortune without being required to wait for a term of years, or compel your family to wait for your death, as would be the case in life insurance. The Grand Gift Concert, at which six thousand prizes will be distributed, will be conducted by some of the best citizens of Norfolk, and there will be a prize in every ten tickets. The drawing will positively take place on the 29th of December. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or to Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

For Gentlemen's and Ladies' OVERSACKS, at reduced prices. J. E. HAM & Co.

Piano and Singing.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy believers to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America.

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE,

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.
As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.
As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or cliquer will, nor any party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence upon the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.
Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.
Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. A Shopping Incident.

It was a bright, beautiful day, and the streets were filled with people. Business was lively; some of the stores where a large supply of Christmas goods for the little folks is kept were crowded.

A lady and her little boy were visiting one of these to purchase some tiny article for the stockings of the little folks at home. The lady was neatly clad, though in coarse material. Her air betokened cultivation, and her countenance joy draped in sorrow; the sorrow increasing the thickness of its drapery as the minutes sped and no one appeared to wait upon her.

"Could I have that steamboat?" asked the child, pointing to a large, gay toy steamer in the window.

The mother, who had been looking at some insignificant article, turned as the child spoke, and her drapery of sorrow over her face became thick like a cloud. She did not answer.

"I should like to have the steamboat, and you promised me one, mamma."

"That was some time ago, Freddy." It cost the lady an effort to say, "That was some time ago." It made me think that perhaps she had seen better days.

Freddy held his eyes for a moment on the toy boat, then withdrew them, and looked into the face of his mother.

"Just think, Freddy," said the lady; "if you were to have the steamboat, baby and papa wouldn't have anything."

There was a pause. He was thinking.

"And I wear my old dresses this year, you know; and papa works harder and gets less money, and baby has no new playthings now. If you have the steamboat I shall have to come another day to buy it, for I haven't money enough to-day."

A little boy with a big warm heart is a pretty sight, and it was a pretty sight to see Freddy conquering his selfishness.

"Baby and papa shall have something, mamma," said the little darling. "I don't want the steamboat. Let's look around."

Soon after he said something of new dresses, but I did not catch the words.

His mother took him by the hand and led him to another part of the shop, and I saw them no more. Both hearts were full, and no words were spoken by either as they sauntered away. There was a perfect understanding between them. I had not seen them before—probably shall not again; but I know that a Christmas was to come to them shorn of the glory of former Christmas times. The boy fought and conquered, in one minute, a battle which will lead him to many victories, and those the most important of life. The coming Christmas will not be so rich in material things to that family as some former Christmas has been, but it will be richer in some things better than anything that is material.

An Exploit with a Baby.

[Utica Herald, Nov. 30.]

One of the best looking and most-sought-after young business men in Utica had his gallantry put to a severe test lately. A charming married lady friend wagered $15 with him that he dare not carry her baby through Genesee street from Bagg's to Oneida square. Whether the gentleman felt particularly brave and happy after his enjoyment of Thanksgiving festivities, or for some other reason, we know not, but certain it is that he accepted the challenge and carried the baby, but—such work as he made of it! The baby in question is the prettiest little seven-months mortal in Utica. Its father is one of the wittiest and finest-looking men in the country, but the baby gets its loveliest charms from its mother. The boy is the pride of its parents' heart, and it kisses would stick, its lips would be covered with rock candy to the depth of six inches every day. The young gentleman who was challenged envies the father, mother, and baby every day of his life. When he started out from Bagg's Hotel with the chirping cherub in his arms, his face was rosy with blushes and radiant with happiness. The mother and other friends of the child were to follow in a carriage to see that the task was completed according to the terms of the wager, and they did not lose sight of the toiler for a moment. At the outset the child weighed about twenty-five pounds. The supposed father and his elegantly dressed baby attracted general attention upon the business portion of Genesee street. The gentleman's friends were not certain that they had heard of his marriage, and he had been seen at the opera house frequently of late, and each time with a different charmer, but this must have been owing to the absence of his wife and—the baby, probably. While conversation after this style was going on in the stores, the bachelor reached the City Hall, and at that particular moment he was ready to assert that the child weighed seventy-five pounds. From this point upward was the tug of war. The hour chosen was one in which he generally takes an airing, and all his window friends expected to see him, but—not with a baby. Then the baby commenced to get uneasy, and it was hard work to hold it out at arm's length and call it "Sweety," "Ducky," "Darling," etc., etc. Three or four merry maidens in an up-town residence rustled the curtains in such a manner that the perspiring toiler knew that he was seen; but, do well or do ill, he was bound to win, and win he did. Those who witnessed the affair in all of its stages, say that it was difficult to tell at all times whether the child was upright or reversed, perpendicular or horizontal, for the reason that its position was changed so frequently. Its ordinarily sweet voice was harsh and crisp before Cottage street was reached, and but for the true grit which the gentleman possesses, and the love he bears for the baby, it is believed that the baby would have been tossed into a convenient fountain—anything for a change. All the young ladies upon Genesee street seemed to be standing in their windows as he passed. Opposite Eagle street he met a particular lady friend in a carriage, and then the baby weighed a full ton. When the mother received her darling child from the hands of the brave one, cold and huge drops of perspiration poured from every pore of his face; his necktie was gone and his collar unbuttoned. The contents of a Philadelphia mint would not tempt him to return down the street with a similar accompaniment. The wager was paid, and the mother and her baby rode down town, while the brave bachelor wended his way back to his place of business through Park Avenue and other quiet streets, solitary, thoughtful and alone. The next time he carries a baby through Genesee street his friends may be certain that it is his own, and that the other stockholder in the cherub is within reach.

News and Notes.

Maine is disturbed from its centre to circumference over a fruitless newspaper discussion of the Senatorial prospects of Hon. Hannibal Hamlin. The rest of mankind had long ago settled down to the conviction that Senator Hamlin was to be returned; but certain interests demanded a resurrection of the strife and there have not been found wanting persons filling editorial chairs who willingly multiply words in opposition to the able and faithful Senator. Granting that other men have claims for ambition is honorable, we fail to see wherein any one of Mr. Hamlin's opponents show superior virtue, ability or following, and presume that a brief month's further discussion will end with the re-election of the Senator in obedience to an evidently expressed wish of the majority of the republicans of the State at the last election—and we know of no more worthy way of determining a choice than acquiesence in the will—not of a minority, but of a majority.

The Mississippi troubles are subsiding. Gov. Ames has called a special session of the legislature.

The success of the republicans in Lawrence, Mass., is of a character to lead their brethren in New Hampshire to emulate their example. The city has been in democratic hands a sufficient time for republicans to realize that the best men should be put forward. Acting with this determination, a ticket was put in nomination composed of staunch citizens whom the voters could respect and safely entrust with their interests. As a result, all the wards went republican and the majority for Mayor was 841.

Arguments relative to the bill of particulars in the Beecher case were made on Thursday before Judge McCue in Brooklyn. Tilton's counsel presented his affidavit deposing that confession of sexual intercourse had been made by Beecher to Francis D. and Emma R. Moulton, himself and others; that Mrs. Tilton confessed the shame to Mrs. Moulton, M. B. Bradshaw, Florence, her daughter, Theodore, and others; that he had written and printed papers by Beecher, Mrs. Tilton and others. Decision reserved.

Hon. Isaac Bradford has been re-elected Mayor of Cambridge by 694 majority.

The Proctor-Moulton libel case is settled by Moulton's agreeing to pay Miss Proctor for all expenses of the proceedings, the sum amounting to $4375.

Benjamin Moran, secretary of legation at London, is appointed Minister to Portugal.

The Presbyterian church and chapel, furniture and organ, at Bridgeport, Conn., were destroyed by fire on the 9th. Loss $60,000.

In the clearing up of a snow storm at Friendship, Me., recently, the people living around the harbor were astonished to see it literally filled with blackfish. In a very short time every boat and dory was manned by hardy fishermen who rowed to the mouth of the harbor, forming a line from shore to shore, and then commenced driving the fish slowly up the harbor, and through a narrow passage into Shipyard Cove. Then the work of killing them commenced. There were 181 fish slaughtered, the largest 19 feet long, and probably weighing two tons; the smallest at least 10 feet; probable average length, 15 feet. It is estimated that they will make 150 barrels of oil, the blubber filling the decks of three large schooners. The oldest fisherman there never saw a blackfish that side of George's Island before.

The Portland Press says it is hinted that there are serious dissensions between the Directors of the Eastern and Maine Central Railroads.

Globe says: Fernando Wood, in sending out invitations for the democrats in Congress to meet him, at home, places on the cards the motto, "Justice is slow, but sure." Those who have noticed Mr. Woods' apparent immunity from the ordinary consequences of sins of ommission and commission will doubtless agree with the first portion of the motto, though unable to appreciate the last, as applied to his case.

Congressman Small has introduced a bill to reduce the President's salary.

John H. Austin of New Britain, Conn., lost a valuable horse in a singular manner. He was hitched to an iron-capped post, and becoming frightened by the cars, reared up, descending on the post, which pierced his body, where he remained transfixed for half an hour, uttering pitiful screams, it being impossible to release him owing to his desperate efforts to get free. The post was finally sawed off with a long saw, but he was immediately shot, his wound being considered fatal.

On Tuesday, the 8th, a half-dozen boys broke through the ice on the river near the High School building at Dover. All but Moses Dempsey and Walter H. Felker saved themselves. Theodore LaFontaine went to the rescue of these and succeeded in saving Dempsey, and nearly succeeded in bringing Felker out, but was obliged to let him go rather than to go down with him. Michael Brennan threw him a rope and he was dragged ashore nearly exhausted. Young Felker went under the ice and was drowned. His body was recovered a half an hour afterward. He was fourteen years old.

Letter From Washington.

WASINGTON, D. C., Dec. 9.

The railroads are too strong for the States, and will require the national arm to restrain them from plundering the people to pay dividends upon watered stock. There will be a very strong effort to have the building of the Southern Pacific and Northern Pacific completed by bonds endorsed by the Government.

THE SAFE BURGLARY.

The safe burglary case has ended as was believed from the start in a disagreement of the jury. The average public verdict is Guilty. It is a most remarkable case, where a young and brilliant advocate named Harrington who had become assistant District Attorney is charged with conspiracy to procure a burglary of his own safe for the purpose of connecting an old and respectable citizen named Columbus Alexander who was conducting an investigation of the Board of Public Works, with the crime, and by that act defeat the investigation. Harrington was counsel for the Board of Works. The whole plot failed from Alexander's sleeping so sound as not to hear the repeated ringing of his door bell, and getting up to open it, when the burglar was to hand him the contents of the safe. But I think I gave you an account of the matter when it happened. Curious people ask who stood behind Harrington and the gang with him and employed them to employ the burglars. It is a case calculated to excite much further interest from the mystery in which it is yet shrouded.

CHORPENNING.

Among the claims before Congress to be acted upon this winter, which have attracted general attention, is the famous Chorpenning claim, which was killed by Dawes three years ago, and now revived curiosity led me to listen to Chorpenning's side which is this. He was the Pioneer Mail carrier between Salt Lake and the Pacific, overland, and made a passable road and started it with four horse teams for a thousand miles, and then had his contract suspended and given to some one else at a much higher rate for alleged deficiences, and then restored, for which he claims damage. He also had his contract cut down after he had got it in operation from a weekly to a semi-monthly service for which he also claims damage. When hostile Indians drove the mails off the route for a time, by arrangement with the Department, it was carried by a circuitous route some seven hundred miles longer, and the mail matter belonging to another route put upon his stages, for which he claims additional compensation. Such is his claim. Our Postmaster General considered a part of his case and gave him additional compensation, which Chorpenning thought insufficient, and asked Congress for power to have that part reconsidered, and the Postmaster General authorized to consider and settle all his claims together. This was done and an award of damages made amounting to some four hundred thousand dollars, but before payment, it is alleged an ex-congressman from Mr. Dawes' district demanded employment from Chorpenning at a large fee, which was refused, and immediately after Mr. Dawes pronounced the claim a fraud and had the payment stopped by congressional action. He alleged that Chorpenning had procured a limitation of the evidence to what was on file at the time, which cut off the Postmaster General from the consideration of evidence which would have otherwise shown it a fraud; while Chorpenning asserts the limitation was put in to prevent him from getting any more testimony, by the Post Office Committee. He is reported to have convinced the Judiciary Committee that he has a valid claim for damages, which they propose to give him a chance to show in the court of Claims. Mr. Dawes did not go before the Committee when invited to show wherein the claim was fraudulent. The case will probably excite considerable interest from the position of the parties, and the belief which has become general that the claim is an unmitigated fraud.

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

—The Delaware Railroad runs right through Peabody's farm, and close to the track there is a kind of a mud hole. Into this, one of Peabody's horses fell, and defied every effort that could be made to get him out. While Peabody was working at the job, a freight train ran in upon the siding and stopped to shift some empty cars. The engineer noticed Peabody's trouble, and finally offered to pull the horse out with the locomotive if Peabody would give him $5. Peabody gladly consented, and the engineer got down for the purpose of fastening a rope under the horse's belly. Just as he completed this, Job, the fireman, a greenhorn, got a-meddling with the bar, and the engine suddenly gave a jerk and began to move off. In less than a minute that iron steed was proceeding down the Delaware peninsula, at the rate of a mile a minute, with Peabody's horse behind, slashing up against the fences, swishing through ditches, butting against crossties, and dancing and frolicking and jumping about in the most extraordinary manner. When the engine was stopped, twenty-three miles below, by leaving the track and rolling over into a gully, there was nothing on the rope but four ribs and a piece of the backbone, and these Peabody concluded not to drive home. The engineer says all he promised to do was to get the horse out, and he got it out. But Peabody, somehow, don't appear to be satisfied.

Local Matters.

The Police.

When the democratic city government went to work to organize what the local democratic press and speakers had for years so bitterly denounced—a "partisan police"—we offered no objection, but simply mentioned the facts, adding that if the democratic police were as efficient in preserving order as the republican police had been, it was nobody's concern how they had voted or how much work they had done for "the party." The new police were appointed as payment for partisan services rendered, of course, for no other organization ever understood so well as the democratic party how to reward its adherents; but the democratic city fathers made a very judicious selection from the army of applicants for positions on "the force" and really got together a body of men who seem anxious to do credit to the city and to themselves, by doing their duty promptly and fearlessly, and protecting the right of law-abiding citizens by every means in their power.

For a time after the assumption of municipal power by the democrats, the number of street brawls and tumults in the lower quarters of the city very perceptibly increased; but the new police worked hard to keep the roughs and brawlers in subjection, and made out much better than we had at first dared to hope. They had one serious obstacle in the way of their endeavors to preserve the peace, which their republican predecessors did not have to contend with, viz: an idea on the part of many would-be-nuisances, that a democratic victory means full liberty for them to work their own sweet will, and that a democratic policeman would have neither the right nor inclination to arrest a good democratic voter merely for being drunk and making a row. Under a republican city government, the petty law-breakers (an overwhelming majority of whom vote the democratic ticket) knew they had nothing to hope for in the shape of undue forebearance on the part of the police; hence they were more chary of their public performances. It is but justice to the present police to say that the idea of granting immunity from arrest, for political reason, seems not to have entered their heads; we have heard no intimations that they have failed in their duty where law-breakers are democrats, and do not believe they have done so. They have evidently striven to satisfy good citizens rather than rogues and roughs, and if they persevere may become as much a terror to evil-doers as any police force our city has ever had.

But though no complaint of favoritism on the part of the police has reached our ears we have heard that individuals who have been arrested have complained that more force than was necessary was exercised by the officers. Very good. So long as honest and peaceable men do not find cause for complaint, the sorrows of roughs and rapscallions will not come very near our heart, even though their heads should come in contact with an officer's club. A policeman's first duty is to protect the virtuous public, at all hazards; and his second duty is to protect himself by all means in his power, at the same time. After he has protected the public and himself by squelching the law-breaker, no one will find fault if he spends his spare moments in picking up the pieces of the rough. No policeman has a right to allow himself to be maltreated so long as his billy and revolver hold out; and a police force of which only thieves and bullies complain will always have our commendation, even if its members are all double-distilled democratic partisans.

More Light.

A new light-house at the Shoals has been talked of for some time past, and we understand that a petition for one to be located on Star island has been circulated in this city among persons who are interested in shipping. The fishermen and coasters all agree that another light at the Shoals is needed, but none of them think that it should be located on Star island. The existing light, on White island, marks the western extremity of the group, and was formerly visible all around the horizon; but the Oceanic hotel now shuts it in, in one direction, so that vessels from the eastward, passing just outside of Boon island, cannot see it at all. A light on Star island would remedy this, it is true, and would also be a great attraction to summer tourists—a sojourner on a rocky island partially occupied by a United States light-station would be very romantic, you know,—but a light on Duck island would be far more useful in every particular except in an attraction to summer travel. The latter island is lower than Star and much more difficult for a vessel to "pick up" on a dark night, and it has some ugly out-lying rocks which are always ready and willing to pick up a vessel; besides, it is the most easterly island of the group, and if a light was placed there both extremities of the Shoals would be well marked. Both lights could not be hidden at the same time by the Oceanic or any other building or buildings, and, if a vessel's skipper should see one light and not the other, he would know exactly what obscured the one he did not, and could calculate his position very nearly as well as though both lights were visible.

We believe one item in the programme for the proposed Star island light-station, is to have it made a signal station for the exhibition of storm-warnings. If a light-house is built there the storm-signals would be seen by many vessels, and it would seem that the regular arrivals at this port—not to mention the immense fleets of fishermen which sometimes run in for shelter—are numerous enough to entitle them to all the benefits of the storm-signal service; but either the White or Duck island station could be just as easily connected with the main land by a wire, as Star island, and signals made from one could be repeated from the other, so that they would be visible all around the compass as much as they would be from the top of the Oceanic or the Star island light-house. It is quite as important to show the storm-warnings to vessels in harbor, to warn them from going to sea just before bad weather, as to warn vessels already at sea to run in for safety; yet seamen in this port have no means of finding out the probabilities without going into the vestibule of the post-office. If mariners frequenting this port are really to have the benefit of another light at the Shoals, and the storm-warnings, Duck island is the place of most service and this harbor (on Seavey's island, perhaps, where a flag could be seen from the wharves and the lower harbor) the best place for showing the storm-signals, if they are to be shown in but one place,—though the Shoals might also be made a signal station.

Our Foreign Correspondence.

WHITE ISLAND, Isles of Shoals, Dec. 8.

Ed. Chronicle: As a description of this country may be of interest to readers in the United States, I will try my hand at correspondence. White island is not a very extended domain, but it has some very interesting features,—particularly the features of the government officials. The private residences are not numerous, being largely outnumbered by the public edifices, one of the latter being five or six times as high as it is wide. The climate is variable,—varies all the way from the freezing point to fifteen degrees below zero,—and during the winter the island enjoys storms about five days in the week, snow generally falling on the other two days. The surface of the country is somewhat irregular, and is better adapted for grazing (the pedestrian's shins and nose) than tillage; yet the inhabitants find no difficulty in harvesting two splendid crops of ballast every year, and they also raise considerable quantities of kelp and cunners, and sometimes the deuce, to say nothing of the government inspector's tire. The population is limited, and at present seems to be stationary in point of numbers, with no marked prospect of immediate increase; but the inhabitants are noted for their temperance, frugality and industry, and as there are no women on the island, of course the men live peaceably with each other. There are no schools on the island, though there are many in its immediate vicinity. The island is at present stocked with one blue Thomas-cat and twelve decoy ducks, and the public-spirited inhabitants propose to import a sheep and quarter of a cow some time this winter.

Of the residences, the one in which your correspondent is domiciled is best worthy attention. It is a solid old relic of antiquity, with walls of stone about two feet thick, and so cool that I frequently have to get up in the night and go out doors to sit on the rocks to get warm. When it was built, insular tradition saveth not; but the letters "C. C." cut deeply into one of the inner doors show which room Christopher Columbus slept in when he visited this island; and the recent discovery of a big pair of boots down cellar, marked "J. S.,—his bootes," proves beyond cavil that Capt. John Smith occupied the house at a later date. There is also a boat-house, which probably stood where it does now centuries before the builders of the dwelling-house were born; and a coal shed, compared to which the boat-house is a mere infant for age. In the boat-house is the barge which carried Cleopatra on her visit to Senator Anthony; it was a royal craft in its day, but it now has two serious faults,—one is, it is two big and clumsy to be easily got afloat, and the other is that it will only stay afloat two minutes at a time after it is once got into the water. All the other buildings and gear on the island are modern and good, but it is the antique which attracts summer visitors, and I expect hundreds of applications next season from lady and gentlemen guests of the Appledore and Oceanic, for permission to try on Capt. Smith's boots and sail in Cleopatra's barge.

Game is plentiful here. I have only been here a week and have seen two "simpletons," (that's what my mate calls them, probably on account of their coming to this island,) a large variety of sandbirds, and yesterday I rushed out of the house and fired my gun at a gull that was flying past. I hardly need add that that gull is now about the livest gull on this coast; but though I didn't kill the bird, my mate says my dodging headforemost and backward out of the gull's sight into a fissure of the rock, the instant I fired, was the most skillfully-executed maneuvre he ever saw. A man gets an occasional set-back even in this terrestrial Paradise,—and lucky 'tis 'tis so, or he would never be willing to leave it for a higher one. PAKEHA.

Democratic Reform.

Those wise economists, the democratic leaders, promised many "reforms" when they should be able to obtain control of the city government; and when they were sworn in made a show of cutting down expenses by abolishing one of the Assistant Marshal's positions, an action which was to save the $600 salary attached to the office. They appointed a Marshal, an Assistant Marshal, several policemen, and supernumeraries by the cord,—and we expected the thing was done. Recently, however, in the Board of Aldermen, an order was received from a supernumerary to assign some $37 of his pay to a merchant, whereupon one of the Aldermen asked how so large a sum could be due a supernumerary, who it was understood was to be put on duty only in case of the illness or disability of some of the regular force. Then Mayor Goodrich arose to explain that the regular force was inadequate to the task, and a supernumerary had been detailed regularly to duty. Hatch smole a ghastly smile as the truth leaked out, and the republican members began to reckon the cost. The supernumerary gets $1.78 a day, which for 365 days amounts to $649.70. So the city pays $49.70 per annum more for its police force than before.

Another case of attempted "reform" will show the disposition of the democratic tricksters. A republican official whose salary was $600 per annum was displaced on the first Monday in October by a democrat. The first Monday was the fifth day and the republican sent in his bill for three days' work in October (Thursday, Friday and Saturday) at two dollars per diem. Then some brilliant individual suggested that two dollars a day was too much, as in reckoning salaries every day in the year (including Sundays) his daily pay was but $1.78. So he had leave to withdraw his bill, the democratic sharps thinking to deprive him of sixty-six cents of his pay. But our friend remembered that he had not reckoned Sunday, the 4th, in his bill, and amended it so that when presented it amounted to $7.12 (four days' salary at $1.78), which being rightfully due him could not be disputed. It is such little incidents as the foregoing that lead us to admire the principles which underlie democratic measures of economy, and show how disinterested as well as unprejudiced are the non-partizans who adorn democratic tickets and represent democratic constituents solely for the best interests of the dear people.

A Word of Explanation.

Dear Chronicle: Because of your exceeding kindness and courtesy to me always, I would be very slow to complain of or even to criticise aught of your sayings. But an item in your local columns a few days since respecting the office of County Commissioner, places me in a position somewhat incompatible with my ideas of public duty; and as this item chanced to be published in the same issue with the article referring to the barque Martha, which bore my initials, your item also might be and in fact was deemed to have been written or suggested by me. You say I am "not a candidate for renomination" as Commissioner. This is true, so far that I shall neither ask for nor expect it, but I hold that while no citizen should hunger and thirst after office, neither ought any patriotic man to decline to serve the public in any position to which he is called and for which he feels himself competent; and the Republic must always suffer detriment from any man occupying an office to which he is not himself superior, or at best equal. Rotation in office is a New Hampshire policy, which I rather like; and one term for County Commissioner a general rule in most of our counties, which I have no designs upon; though the practice in a Massachusetts county, where a tall son of Portsmouth has been Commissioner continuously for about thirty years, doubtless has its advantages.

Portsmouth, which pays about a third of the County tax, I think may reasonably claim a representative on the County Board as a rule; and it is to be hoped that this advantage will not be again lost by the presentation of a number of candidates by our delegation to the Convention. The nomination you suggest is one eminently fit to be made; only, in my present position I would rather not be understood as endeavoring unduly to influence the succession, or opposing other proper candidates, if any, in the manner referred to.

Yours always, FRANK W. MILLER.

Fire at North Hampton.

The dwelling house of James Marston of North Hampton caght fire on the roof by a spark from the chimney, Thursday, and was consumed. The most of the furniture was removed from the house in a damaged condition. No insurance.

Laconics.

Washburn's last "sensation" brought out a large audience, especially in the gallery. The show was decidedly mixed, proportionately good, bad and old. The "box mystery" was of excessive thinness, and the manager should know better than to insult an intelligent audience by its presentation. The gymnastic and vaulting performances were attractive features, Leon Washburn was excessively funny as a clown, and the negro delineator has few superiors in that line now travelling. The Washburn was not with the company. We hail his appearance always as an indication that a first-class entertainment is in store for those who invest a half-dollar.

The inhabitants of White island, I. S., are discussing the project of boring an artesian well.

The Hutchinson Family gave another of their melodious concerts to a good audience, Thursday evening, singing with effect. Their popular selections are well suited to the audiences which gather to hear them, and we hear that they are meeting with success wherever they go. They sang to a large audience at Dover on Wednesday evening, and have a loud call to return. They go to Portland for a short season.

J. G. Edgerly, Esq., of Manchester, will deliver the third lecture in the Educational course this evening in Mechanics Hall, and we have no doubt that he will be greeted with a crowded house. Mr. Edgerly ranks among the foremost in the cause of education in this State and has probably done more than any other one individual toward bringing the schools of Manchester up to their present state of efficiency. That city is fortunate to secure the services of such a Superintendent of Schools. His subject to night is "School Management."

"RUNNING TO WASTE" is the title of a handsome little volume, written by George M. Baker, and published by Lee & Shepard, of Boston. The characters are well drawn and are full of individuality, while the incidents and general line of the story are very entertaining and interesting. Becky proves to be a noble-hearted, honest girl, whom all the readers, despite her mad-cap acts, will love almost as earnestly as did at last Harry Thompson. The story is designed for youth, but older readers will find it well worthy their time and attention.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is anodyne and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native talent. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, we claim for the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

"DOUBTLESS THE

BEST COUGH MEDICINE

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO. CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 18, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and TEN gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in my house, never allowing myself to be out of it one night. In all these

it has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was painfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL.

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Daily Chronicle.

A Wonderful Feat.

James Lambert worked in Somerville's mill. Like most of the hands he must cross the water to get home. For that purpose, a small ferry boat was provided; it lay at a little quay near the mill. One Andrew had charge of it ashore, and used to shove it off with a lever, and receive it on its return. He often let more people in it than Lambert thought safe, and Lambert had remonstrated, and had even said "Ye'll has an occident some day that ye'll rue but ance, and that will a' your life." Andrew, in reply, told him to mind his own business.

Well one evening James Lambert wanted to get away in the first boat-load. This was somehow connected with his having bought a new hat; perhaps he wished to avoid the crowd of work-people—here I am not very clear. However, he watched the great wheel, and the moment it began to waver, previous to stopping, he ran for his hat, and darted down stairs. But, as he worked in an upper story, full a dozen got into the boat before him. He told Andrew to put off, but Andrew would not till the boat should be full; and soon it was crammed. James Lambert then said it was a shame of him to let so many on board. This angered the man, and, when the boat was so crowded that her gunwale was not far above water, he shoved her violently off into the tide-way, and said words which, if he has not prayed God to forgive them in this world, will perhaps hang heavy round his neck in the next.

"To hell—ye beggars," he cried.

This rough launching made the overladen boat wobble. The women got frightened and before the boat had gone twenty yards she upset in dark, ice water, ten feet deep.

It was night.

"Before the boat coupit athegither, they a' flew to me that could; for they a' kenned me. I' the water, them that badna a haud o' me, had a haud o' them that had a haud o' me, and they carried me doon like leed."

Now it is an old saying and a true one that "After-wit is everybody's wit." Were I to relate at once what James Lambert accomplished hundreds would imagine they could have done the same. To correct that self-deception and make men appreciate this hero correctly, I shall stop here and entreat my readers, for the instruction of their own minds, to lay down this narrative and shut their eyes, and ask themselves how it was possible for mortal man to escape drowning himself, and to save those who were drowning him. You have seen that it cost him the skin of his finger to get clear of a single baker. Here he was clutched and pinned by at least four desperate drowning creatures, strong as lions in their wild despair, and the weight of twelve people more hanging on to those that clutched him, so that the united weight of them all carried down the strong swimmer like a statue in a sack.

'Sirr, when yove twa feet i' the grave, your mind warks hard. I didna struggle, for it was nae mair use than to wrastle wi a kirk. I just straughtened myself oot like a corp and let them tak' me doon to the bottom o' the Clyde; and there I stude up right, an' waited; for I kenned the puir sauls would droon afore me, and I saw just ae wee wee chance to save them yet. Ye shall understond, sirr, that when folk are drooning, they dinna settle doon till the water fills their lungs and drives the air oot. At first they waver up and doon at sairtain intervals. Aweel, sirr, I waited for that, on the ground. I was the only ane grounded, ye'll obsairve. A slight upward movement commenced, I took advantage and gied a vi'lent spang wi' my feet against the bottom, and wi' me choosing my time, up we a' came. My arms were grippit, but I could strike oot wi' my feet, and before ever we reached the surface I lashed oot like a deevil for the quay. Aweel sirr, wi' a' I could do we didna wend abune a yard, or may be a yard and a haut, and doon they carried me like leed. I straughtened myself as we sank, and I grunded. The lave were around me like a fou. I bides my time and when they are inclining upward, I strike fra the grund; an' this time mair slanting toward the quay. That helpit us, and in a dozen vi'lent strokes we may be gained twa yards this time; then doon like leed. Plays the same game again, up, and doon again. And noo, sirr, there was something that turned sair against us; but then there was something for us, to bolance it. It was against us that they had all swallowed their pint o' water by this time, and were na sae buoyant: It was for us that the water was shallower now, may be not mair than twa feet ower heed. Noo this twa feet wad droon us as weel as twanty; but wi' nae mair nor twa feet abune us, I coueld spring up fra the grun by mere force; for the grun gies ye an awfu' poower for a foot or twa. Sae noo I'm nae suner doon than up again, and still creeping for the quay, and the water aye a wee bit shallower. The next news is, I gat sair spent, and that was bad; but, to bolance that, some folk on the quay gat rapes and boat-hooks, and pickit off ane or twa that was the nearest; and now ilka time I cam' up, they pickit one off, and that lightened my burden; and bymby I drave a couple into shallow water mysel', wi' my feet. When I was in seven fut water mysel', and fewer folk hauding me doon, I got to be maister, and shovit ane, and pu'd anither in, till we landed the whole saxteen or seventeen. But my wark was na done, for I kenned there were mair in the river. I saw the last o' my ain band safe, then oot into the Clyde, wherever I heerd cries, and sune I fand twa lasses skirling, takes 'em by their lang hair, and tows to the quay in a minute. Just as I'm landing thir twa, I hear a cry fa the very middle o' the river, and in I splash. It was a strapping lass—they caed her Elizabeth Whitelaw. 'C'way ye lang daftie,' says I, and begins to tow her. Lo an' behold I'm grippit wi' a man under the water. It was her sweet hairt. She was hauding him doon. The hizzy was a' reicht, but she was drooning the lad; pairts these twa lovers—for their gude—and takes 'em ashore, one in each hand. Aweel, sirr, I saved just one mair, and then I plunged in again, and sairched; but there was nae mair to be seen noo; three puir lasses were drooned; bid I did na ken that at the time. And noo I'll tell ye a farce. I'm seized wi' a faintness, and makes for the shore. But I gat weaker, and dazed like, and the lights o' Glasgee begins to flecker afore my een: and thinks I, 'I'll no' see ye again; I'm done this time.' It was all I could do for the bare life, to drift to the hinder part of the quay. I hadna the power to draw mysel' oot. I just grippit the quay, and sobbit. The folk were a' busy wi' them I had saved; nane of them noticed me, and I wad ha' been droond that nicht: but—wha d'ye think saved me that ha saved sae mony?—an ould decripit man: haw! haw! haw! He had a hookit stick, and gied me the handle, and towed me along the quay into shallow water, and I gat oot, wi' his help, and swooned deed away. I'm tauld I lay there negleckit awhile; but the fand me at last, and then I had fifty nurses for ane."

Have I exaggerated? Does history record any other example of a man being clutched by a great number of drowning people, and carried to the bottom, and saving them all in the lump, and then dashing in and saving the outsiders in detail?

By way of illustration let the reader imagine an umbrella-frame, and only four or five whalebones attached to the top part of the upright; now fasten several other curved whalebones high up, to each of those four or five curves. Now plunge the whole frame into water till the upright touches the ground. Not one of the sixteen curved pieces will touch the ground. But, in the water, if a person, male or female clings to a fixed upright, that person's body floats up more or less; at all events, it inclines toward the horizontal.

Now James Lambert, by artificially straightening his body, made himself the stick of that human umbrella, or the upright post they all clung to directly or indirectly, and so were kept floating in a curve, instead of sinking to the bottom. This enabled him, but only by patiently and artfully watching the fluctuations up and down of those floating bodies, to spring at the nick of time from the hard ground, and carry them all to the surface for a few seconds. The rest is detail, and his own narrative makes it clear. But see what intellectual and moral qualities were here combined. Genius is often without courage; courage is generally without genius, and so indeed is bare skill; and, in desperate danger how often has genius lost its head, and blundered like an idiot; how often has courage lacked invention, and relied on precedent, that did not fit the novel danger, and so led it to death. But this man, even as his body touched the water, was all cool courage and swift inventive genius. He did not repeat himself, as mere skill does. Hugged in the water by a single man—the baker—he hit, with prompt invention, on the one way to save both lives; he used the baker's own chest as a fulcrum, and so tore himself free. But clutched by a dozen, and more, he never attempted to get free at all, but straightened and stiffened himself into an upright post, and used the ground as his fulcrum, to save himself and those who were drowning themselves and him.

—One of the least flattering tributes ever paid to a rising young artist has been paid to a Cincinnati dauber by a Western critic: "He possesses some merits as an artist, but it is hard to say whether it lies in landscape or marine painting—you cannot tell his cows from his ships, except when they have their tails exalted, when the absence of spars betrays their character. Even then they may be mistaken for schooners scudding under bare poles."

—The man who invents a type-setting machine will amass untold riches. But it will be an insignificant sum in comparison to the wealth which will accrue to that individual who discovers a method by which a baby may be made to consume its own cry.

—Miss Cooke, an English "lecturer-woman," asserts that children are being bribed with currant rolls by Romanists in Protestant garb. This may be called jamming the Church.

Prohibition in New Hampshire.

The Biddeford Journal man expresseth his disgust at divers things in a way that indicates that the foolishness of "prohibitionists" can easily be detected thirty miles east of New Hampshire. He goes after the humbug semi-religious politicians who have once more put an independent ticket in the field in this State, in the following straightforward manner:

"It is the happy cosmopolitan privilege of every son of Adam to make an ass of himself. But in this particular case it is aggravating, because of the harm it will do a righteous cause, by rascals or bigots who profess to have that cause at heart.

Last year these men enacted this play in a State so close between that party which had placed and maintained on the Statute books all the temperance legislation the State possesses, and that other party which distinctly declares that it will repeal all such legislation, that the loss of a few votes insured the success of the enemies of prohibition. The democrats succeeded, and the repeal was only prevented by the persistent, untiring and brave action of that party "prohibitionists" had stabbed and thrown into the minority.

An attempt is again made to once more throw the State into the hands of the democrats to legalize the sale of rum, which is as much a part of the platform of that party as was ever "Free trade and sailor's rights." Are these men knaves or fools?—rather a hard question, but it is reduced to that and only that. They are knaves, if they, under cover of a profession for temperance legislation, and claiming to be republicans, are going before the people with a lie upon their lips, simply as an ally to bring the democratic party into power; and fools if they fail to know what every one besides themselves know, that their action is sure to repeal all the prohibition legislation which they now have."

Not one republican paper in this Congressional district favors the renomination of Mr. Small, but the Haverhill (Mass.) Bulletin editorially endorses him and thinks his renomination is due out of courtesy. Here the Bulletin is in error. Mr. Small has had two nominations already and would be beaten out of sight should he be accorded a third. He failed of an election the first time from his neglect to look after the matter properly. The combined efforts of all the republican politicians in the district cannot give him the nomination now except as a means of burying him at the polls. Hon. Frank Jones could easily carry Rockingham county against him. We protest in behalf of nine-tenths of the republicans of this region against the proposed loading down of the party a third time by a candidate who was only nominated at first by trickery or accident, and who hastened to introduce into Congress a bill tending to re-establish the female prohibitory law.

Justin D. Fulton, who styles himself "Rev.," in an attack on the stage says: "Could you invite Christ to go to the theatre?" Like a true Yankee, Tenney, of the Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph responds: "Could you invite him to hear Fulton?" Score one for Tenney.

"Nat." White, Esq., the prohibition candidate for Governor, is one of the most generous and kind-hearted of men; but the fact that he owns a building in which intoxicating liquor is sold, and also an express business by which he has made thousands of dollars in transporting liquors from wholesale houses in Massachusetts and elsewhere to be retailed in New Hampshire, is not calculated to interest temperance men in obtaining votes for him. Those ramrod chaps are queer people, but they haven't appeared quite as ludicrous to all men heretofore as they do now. Some who have respected and had confidence in them are now beginning to inquire about their motives.

A man of eighty-three married a woman of forty-three, recently, at Kennebunkport.

The managers of the centennial exhibition acted wisely in imitating the action of the mired wagoner who called upon Hercules for assistance. Failing to get a direct hoist from the United States Treasury, they have put their own shoulders to the wheel, and their difficulties are at an end. It is reported that a banking house with ample means has offered to furnish all the money required, on condition of having the receipts of the exhibition placed in their hands. The necessary buildings are well under way; all the space appropriated to the United States has been applied for, and exhibitors from other nations are numerous and increasing. The information just received, that England will recognize the exhibition as international, and send a commissioner, although late, will be received with great satisfaction, as the amount and value of machinery and productions which it is hoped will be sent from that country will make a most attractive feature of the occasion.

Jesse D. Bright wants the venerable William Allen of Ohio to rise up and run for President.

The jury in the case of Jesse Pomeroy returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, after five hours' consultation. The prisoner is recommended to the mercy of the court on account of his youth.

The Florida legislature is republican and will elect a republican U. S. Senator.

Governor Ames of Mississippi publishes a letter giving his version of the recent disturbances and bloodshed at Vicksburg. He declares the massacre to have been entirely unnecessary, and throws the responsibility on the white leaguers.

Local Matters.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, leave was granted Chas. W. Norton to encumber Vaughan street for building purposes.

Petition of Judge Page and others for alterations at the police station was referred.

The committee on school-houses were authorized to purchase twenty-four desks and seats for the State street school-house and eight for the Spalding school. A recommendation of the committee that the Hanover street school-house be removed and on its site a new one be erected, artistic in design and arranged after the plan of the Haven school-house, large enough to answer further need, was laid on the table.

The committee on fire department with the Mayor added were authorized to complete the purchase of land for a reservoir on Madison street for $475.

County Commiss

On the petition of Frank A. Philbrick and others, the Rockingham County Commissioners have ordered a new road laid out in the towns of Rye and North Hampton, along the sea-shore, extending from the bath-houses north of the Farragut House, to Little Boar's Head.

The Commissioners have further assessed the sum of $200 on the County, for the relief of the towns of Rye and Newcastle, in the construction of the extension of the new bridge between those towns.

Laconics.

A countryman who drove a team loaded with wood to Jackson street recently, beat his horse with a stake because he could not back the load. A kind-hearted person warned him from a second-story window of Walker's soap-factory that an officer of the S. P. C. A. would be sent for if he did not desist. The fellow put up his club and apologized for his brutality.

Schooner Charles P. Dow, at Eldredge's wharf, has been chartered to load for Charleston, S. C., by John Stokell & Co.

The French roof cottage at the corner of Dover and Islington streets offered for sale by Mr. John W. Stavers is a very desirable residence in a pleasant neighborhood. The house is modern in style, and has nine rooms, a convenient bath-room and a furnace.

The Apollo Club give a grand ball on Christmas night at Congress Hall.

Thursday evening, Mr. Albert Tucker left his wagon standing on Bridge street for a short time, and on returning ascertained that some person had stolen a piece of beef weighing about seventy pounds.

On and after Monday next the Kearsarge Mills will run on full time. December 28th wages will be reduced ten per cent.

At the next monthly meeting of the teachers, Mr. Wm. G. Kidder, principal of the Cabot street school, will read an essay on "Written Examinations." These meetings are of great interest.

About one o'clock on the morning of the 10th, a brilliant meteor was seen from this city. It lighted the heavens nearly as well as the god of day.

A large smoke house having capacity for curing 25,000 pounds of fish at a time, has been lately put up by C. Sullivan & Co., fish dealers, on the wharf in rear of Hancock street.

We learn that Mr. Charles W. Gardner has been invited by the school teachers of this city to repeat his lecture on "Language" in Mechanics' Hall, and that he has consented so to do at an early day, which will be duly announced. The original production will be lengthened and improved upon to the extent of the author's ability.

There will be an evening service in the North Church, to-morrow at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Martyn will preach on "Men of the World."

Mr. George Wayland, of Rockport, Mass., one of the crew of the schooner Josephine, while out hauling trawls on Wednesday, capsized his dory, losing all his fishing tackle and nearly losing his life. When picked up he had been in the water clinging to his dory nearly two hours and was completely chilled through. He was brought to this city and sent to his home.

Rev. Mr. Hebbard's lecture at the Universalist church to-morrow evening on "The Rich Man in Hell" will doubtless draw a large audience.

Thomas Kennedy & Son, formerly of Ipswich, Mass., have erected a building on Wibird street for the manufacture of woolen gloves and hosiery. They manufacture seventy-five dozen pairs of gloves and stockings weekly.

The crew of six men for the lifeboat at Rye beach are in charge of Capt. Rufus Philbrick, and are at the life-saving station continuously.

DAVIS. In Toronto, Canada, Nov. 26, Annie B. Davis, daughter of Calvin and Jane Davis, formerly of this city, aged 23 years.

We have received from the publishers, Messrs. Tilton & Co., Boston, a copy of MRS. PARTINGTON'S MOTHER GOOSE MELODIES. We can truly pronounce it the best edition of Mother Goose we have yet seen. It has all of the original rhymes in large, clear, bold type, and over a hundred elegant illustrations, all printed on fine tinted paper, and in addition to all this, there are directions for tableaux and acting some of the principal pieces, such as Simple Simon, Little Bo Peep, Ding Dong Bell, etc. We expect soon to hear of Mother Goose exhibitions everywhere. Inquire for it at the bookstores, and if you cannot find it, send 60 cents to the publishers, S. W. Tilton & Co., Boston, who will mail you a copy post paid.

"SPEAKING LIKENESSES, by Christina Rossetti, with pictures thereof by Arthur Hughes, Boston," Roberts Brothers, 1875, is received, and is full of quaint fancies, lively conceits and wild behavior on the part of various inanimate objects. The pictures are very funny, and one sees easily a moral in the boy bristling like a hedgehog with the prickly quills, the slippery girl, the boy all mouth, and the other unfortunate infants whose failings had assumed such proportions that they were burdensome to the owners. This is a bright and well-written book, and though small, it is not the worse for that, being all fresh and sparkling in its style and ideas.

Upon the Health of the Teeth

Depends the purity of the breath. Preserve them unblemished by the use of the famous SOZODONT, that perfectly harmless vegetable preparation, and you will never regret it.

To Shake, or Not to Shake?

Aye, that is the question. Is it better to quiver from head to foot in the paroxysms of fever and ague, or to banish the atrocious disease by a course of that standard anti-febrile remedy, Hostetter's Bitters. There cannot be much doubt as to the response of the malaria-stricken to this inquiry. From every locality on this continent whose inhabitants are tormented with the shivering plague comes an increasing demand for the only genuine preventive and eradicant of malaria provided by science. The denizens of fever and ague districts well know how utterly inadequate to do more than to give a brief respite are the so-called remedies of the faculty. Quinine, arsenic, bismuth—what are these but poisonous palliatives, which cease after a time to produce any beneficial effect whatever, and if persisted in wreak irreparable mischief upon the system? Everywhere they are being abandoned by intelligent persons, and that genuine vegetable specific for intermittent and remittent disease, Hostetter's Bitter's, substituted in their place.

NEVER GIVE UP!

If all the cases in which HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR has cured inveterate and apparently fatal coughs, could be made known, every consumptive in the land would take heart and commence, in hope, a course of this most wonderful preparation. Physicians who have exhausted their list of pulmonics, without benefit, recommend it as a last resort, and even in the worst extremity its effects are astonishing. But it should be the first resort, not the last. It is impossible for any disease tending to consumption to retain its hold, if met in the early stages with this powerful vegetable remedy.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

Better than Life Insurance.

By the expenditure of a small amount before the 29th of December, in assisting the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., to complete their Temple, you may obtain a fortune without being required to wait for a term of years, or compel your family to wait for your death, as would be the case in life insurance. The Grand Gift Concert, at which six thousand prizes will be distributed, will be conducted by some of the best citizens of Norfolk, and there will be a prize in every ten tickets. The drawing will positively take place on the 29th of December. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or to Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

STOVES! STOVES!

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY!

Great Bargains!

HAVING purchased the stock of STOVES and Housekeeping Goods in the well known "Jones Stove Store," and made large additions thereto, we are prepared to offer to our customers and the public generally the best assortment of the most approved and latest patterns of

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and sal pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Open Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the concern, which we are bound to close out at any price.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice at humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

The New York Times.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted in every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is cured to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in a narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the rewards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

LAWS
UNITED STATES
PASSED AT THE
FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

[GENERAL NATURE—NO. 99.]

AN ACT to provide for the care and custody of persons convicted in the courts of the United States who have or may become insane while imprisoned.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That upon the application of the Attorney-General, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transfer to the Insane Asylum in the District of Columbia all persons who have been or shall be convicted of any offense in any court of the United States, and imprisoned in any State prison or penitentiary of any State or Territory, and who, during the term of their imprisonment, have or shall become and be insane.

SEC. 2. That in all cases where any person convicted in a court of the United States shall, while imprisoned under such conviction in any State prison or penitentiary, become and be insane, and there shall not be accommodation for such insane person at the Insane Asylum of the District of Columbia, or if for other reasons the Attorney-General is of opinion that such insane person should be placed at a State insane asylum rather than at said District Asylum, then the Attorney-General shall have power in his discretion to contract with any State insane or lunatic asylum within the State in which such convict is imprisoned, for his care and custody while remaining so insane; and in all cases where such convicts shall have heretofore been, or shall hereafter be, transferred to a State asylum for insane convicts, in accordance with the laws of such State, the Attorney-General is hereby authorized and directed to compensate the said asylum, or the proper authorities controlling the same, for the care and custody of such insane convicts, until their removal or discharge, in such amounts as he shall deem just and reasonable; but no contract shall be made or compensation paid for the care of such insane person beyond their respective terms of imprisonment.

SEC. 3. That whenever such insane convict shall be restored to sanity, after he or she shall have been transferred under the provisions of this act, he or she shall be returned to the prison or penitentiary from which the transfer was made, provided the term of imprisonment shall not have expired. The questions of sanity in all cases arising under this act shall be determined in accordance with the rules and regulations of existing laws, State or national, on that subject, applicable to the prison, penitentiary, or asylum where such convict shall be confined.

Approved, June 23, 1874.

Life on the River.

[Clun. Times.]

Flatboating of the present day is widely different from what it was fifty years ago. Then fleet upon fleet of trading boats left this city and other points for the South, to dispose of goods manufactured and accumulated during the stress of winter, and the first approach of spring was hailed as a sign of coming good times when the primitive navigator's feelings gave vent to hilarious pleasure.

There was the excitement of competitive strife, varied by seasons of hunting and fishing, to say nothing of the frequent incursions made on frugal farmers' barnyards; now and then a brush with some sneaking river pirates; an evening's flirtation with the backwoods maidens or an impromptu hop in some popular town along the route, and hundreds of constantly changing scenes and incidents in which "Devil May-Care-Dick" played an active part, and oftentimes narrowly escaped coming out after the manner of well handled goods, labeled "right side up, with care."

Many of our well-to-do-citizens of to-day can trace their first ventures in life back to the time when they served apprenticeship on primitive flatboats and saved earnings sufficient to start out on their own hooks. One of Covington's wealthiest citizens can remember the time when a youth of nineteen and working on a farm in the Blue Grass Regions, the success of several returned navigators induced him to abandon the plow and try his own hand at flatboating. It proved the foundation of a colossal fortune. Many of the most successful steamboatmen of to-day commenced life on flatboats, and as the age and their means progressed, strove to outdo each other by building the elegant floating palaces, whose gingerbread splendor is a thing of the past.

These flatboats, or more properly naming them, store-boats, were constructed in rather a crude manner, and would hardly compare with the well ordered establishments which now traverse the rivers. They were fitted up with shelving designed to hold dry goods, notions, nicknacks, etc., while in one end rudely constructed bunks were made somewhat comfortable by a generous supply of shavings dumped loosely down, and comforts whose tattered ends and protruding insides proclaimed an extended sphere of usefulness, probably of the maternal bedstead at home. The principal article sold, and the one on which most money was made was bad whisky. Traders found poor white trash and plantation darkies ready customers for this article. When the flatboat was landed at a point and thrown open to visitors, whisky was the first thing offered on sale. A few swigs of stuff most villainous had the effect of making the customers indifferent as to prices and amounts of purchases, and as a result money flowed into the pockets of the traders with a freedom that would be considered surprising during these depressed times. Having drained their customers of superfluous gold, the horde was hastily driven ashore, the boat pushed out, and the long sweeps made to carry it away from the discordant multitude on shore as speedily as possible. Sometimes these proceedings terminated in violent brawls, and in fact, discolored eyes were more commonly seen than otherwise.

Next to whisky, pine coffins formed the chief article of sale. These were made as cheap as pine boards and tenpenny nails could make them, and sold for ten times their value. Sash, doors, blinds, groceries, hardware, dry goods and notions completed a first-class cargo.

Flatboating, to-day, is somewhat improved and carried on by some very respectable people, many of whom prosecute their business on a scale requiring large capital. The risk and trouble is less now, and on the lower rivers the trader is not so frequently molested. Some carry principle into the business, and refuse to sell liquor, dealing in a fair-handed manner generally.

They start out during the spring from various points along the river, mostly making New Orleans the point of destination. Some have established regular trades and are looked for by the people along the river with ready expectancy. One might think that a man could establish a reputation during a career of thirty-one years as a flatboatman. We ran across a person, Saturday, who had devoted that much of his time to river trading, and he is now so wedded to the life that although in comfortable circumstances he could not be induced to give it up, except on account of failing health.

The gentleman's name is N. Brown. He hails from Jamestown, New York, where the next largest alapaca mills in the country are located. Upon an invitation extended by him, we paid his "broad-horns" a visit, yesterday, and found him prepared to afford right royal entertainment to guests. He has two boats, each eighty feet long and sixteen feet beam. They were floated all the way from Jamestown, a manufacturing town of 10,000 inhabitants. This place is located at the foot of Lake Chautauqua, the recently opened summer resort in the State of New York, consequently Mr. Brown has floated his store-boats from the very headwaters. Leaving Lake Chautauqua, the Cassandaga is entered and pursued to Warren, Pa., where it joins its water with the Conewango. The former stream is very crooked, having in one place a bend three miles around a strip of land spanned by seven lengths of fence-rails.

The Alleghany River is distant about sixty-five miles from Jamestown and before reaching that stream it is necessary to "shoot" six mill-dams, from five to six feet in height. Sometimes the boat gets caught on the apron of the dam, but the difficulty is really overcome by raising the dam with boards on either side of her, which forces the water under her and carries her over.

Mr. Brown says he has been out from Jamestown since last May and in that time has sold about $30,000 worth of goods. His stock consists chiefly of sash, doors, blinds, hardware and builders' materials. His son-in-law, who accompanies him, is a picture and picture-frame dealer, and has a very neat assortment of stock.

The ends of the boats are provided with cheerful cabins fitted up in homelike style. They are able to live well, judging from the many delicacies displayed in their larder. Mr. Brown does not extend his trips beyond Louisville. He usually brings two store-boats down and disposes of one at the end of the route, the other being towed back to Pittsburg. He lands his boats at any point along the river where an opening for trade is probable, the pilot always having a weather-eye open for a new house in course of construction. Flatboats have numerous difficulties to contend with and the life is withal exciting and rife with novelties to the uninitiated. The men engaged in this profession have a novel method of determining distance by the sound of an echo. By this means they are frequently enabled to navigate in the fog and never fail to make a safe landing at the bank.

The distance from Chautauqua Lake to this point along the water course is over 1,600 miles. Mr. Brown has brought one hundred and fifty-eight store boats over the line during the thirty-one years he has spent on the river, and cites many interesting details of his experience. He is the only person who brings his trading boats through the upper tributaries, but along the Ohio there are a large number of traders who carry on an extensive business, in the aggregate amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. No record had ever been made of the extent of this kind of traffic, although, if summed up, it will be found to form an important addition to the commerce of Western rivers.

A Great Farmer.

[Santa Cruz (Cal.) Sentinel.]

Dr. H. J. Glenn, of Jacinto, Colusa county, California, has raised and harvested this year, on his own ranch, 600,000 bushels of wheat. This is equal to 18,000 tons, and will load eighteen 1,000-ton ships, and all of this he has in his own warehouses, ready for shipment when the water of the Sacramento river rises sufficiently. The doctor's freights, to put his wheat in San Francisco, will amount to $90,000. In the plowing season he runs ninety gang-plows, and in harvest any number of headers. He threshes his wheat by steam power, using some half a dozen steam threshers. He has about 200 miles of good board fence on his farm. But his farming operations are not confined to wheat growing alone. He markets about $100,000 worth of stock each year. Dr. Glenn is a practical farmer and manages all his business himself. He can mend a trace just as well as he can get the highest price for his grain.

—The West has sad reason enough to be well acquainted with the gormandizing grasshopper; and a Montana newspaper mournfully dilates upon the "quick electric stomachic machinery" of that hungry insect. His appetite is tremendous and insatiable. He can eat and digest three times his weight in green corn; four times his bulk in peaches; six times his stature in raw turnips, with four pounds of green tobacco and one peck of onions every twenty-four hours. He is the healthiest kind of jumper, and a most moving argument in favor of bodily exercise. There was hope among the hungry until he took kindly to radishes; then those who had any ten-penny nails felt the prudence of watching them with a loaded musket.

—The Pittsburg strike is by far the most serious yet reported. With thirty or forty thousand unemployed in a population of not over ninety thousand, it is not surprising that serious disorders are apprehended there at an early day.

—The Paris police has forbidden the use of certain streets to people with velocipedes, and commanded that in all others they must carry bells by day, like sleighs, and a lantern at night.

News and Notes.

An official report of the condition of the Nebraska sufferers shows that although many need assistance, there have been no cases of starvation, and the people are generally hopeful.

The knowing ones at Washington declare that Henry Wilson is in training for the Presidential candidacy.

Referring to the settlement of the Proctor-Moulton libel suit, a New York paper says: What does this mean? And what were the unrevealed terms of this strange bargain? Is it an agreement to choke off the whole affair, including the suit of Tilton against Beecher for damages, and the indictment of Tilton for a criminal libel upon Beecher? Is the entire legal investigation to be squelched and abandoned through such an arrangement between the parties? If so, where is the vaunted determination of Theodore Tilton to obtain justice against the alleged debaucher of his wife and the destroyer of his family? And what becomes of the bold and defiant challenge of Mr. Beecher protesting his spotless innocence, and demanding a thorough vindication before the tribunals of justice? And how will such a conclusion leave the parties?

Boston's blood is fairly up on the question of having women on the school committee. They propose to elect them, too, backed up by the recent decision of the Supreme Court, and then, if the school committee refuse to let them take their seats, as they have done, this year, there will be music in the air.

The Reform School building at Waterbury, Vt., was burned on Saturday.

More trouble is brewing at New Orleans, and President Grant is reported as saying that somebody will be hurt if another attempt at rebellion is inaugurated.

Gilmore is planning a new and a bigger-than-ever jubilee at New York, which, it is declared, will make Boston wish she were dead.

State News.

Hon. Asa P. Cate, formerly a democratic candidate for Governor, died at Northfield on Saturday.

A New Hampshire paper declares that at the recent fire in Wilton the amateur fire brigade took the town hearse to the conflagration, mistaking it for the engine. They did not discover the mistake until they tried to find the hose.

The Newmarket National Bank will pay a dividend of $5 per share Jan. 4.

A son of Joseph Hardy of East Haverhill, eighteen years of age, shot himself dead, it is believed accidentally, while out hunting on the 5th. His dog returned home alive, and on search being made the young man was found dead.

Hon. Thos. E. Sawyer fell and broke his thigh bone, near the socket, at Dover on Thursday. He is 75 years old.

—An accident has occurred on the Great St. Bernard in Switzerland. Eight Italian workmen were crossing the mountain, and two monks and a servant, followed by a dog, went out to meet them. The whole party was overtaken by a snow-storm and buried in the drift. One of the monks succeeded in extricating himself, but was only able to walk a few steps. The dog went back to the monastery and assistance was sent, but it was too late. The monk died half an hour after being found; the others still remained buried in the snow.

—About the first of December every year, a man has called at the office of Burden & Sons, the great iron manufacturers of Troy, and demanded one-fifth of the profits of the preceding twelve months. He brings account books, etc., and believes he is a member of the firm. This year, he was earlier than usual with his demand, and was so boisterous that the police removed him to the insane asylum.

—A letter was recently received at Wallingford, Conn., directed simply to "My own true love," with the box number, and the girl received it.

New Place also has a Museum, but before visiting this strangers are taken to the garden and shown the form of the house occupied by Shakespeare. The foundation is still intact, and serves, at least, to show how strongly such things were done three or four centuries ago. When the old house was taken down the earth was leveled over the foundation stones; this earth has since been removed and wire screens placed over the stones. My conductor told me this was necessary in order to protect the stones from the depredations of relic hunters, who otherwise, in a few years, would have dug them out piece by piece.

The garden is quite large, and gives one a good idea of the possessions of the poet, as well as of his taste and love of retirement when soberer years had stolen upon him. The walks of the garden, and the walls, save that at the back, which in his time was open, giving a full view and access to the beautiful Avon, are, I was told, just as they were in Shakespeare's time.

The old mulberry tree is gone, thanks to the old fool whose petty spite could not tolerate so much reverence to the memory of a "play actor;" but in the exact place where it stood is another, believed to have been raised from a scion of the original tree which tradition asserts was planted by the hand of the poet.

I have not space to enumerate all that my attention was called to here, but give these, taken down upon my notebook at the time:

A cast by Bullock from the bust in the Chancel, colored as the original.

An oil painting of the interior of Stratford Church, taken before the alterations in 1836.

A photographic copy of a proof impression of the 1623 engraving of Shakespeare.

The wooden tankard, brass bound, out of which the poet drank his beer.

The ancient shovel-board from the Falcon Tavern, opposite New Place, upon which, in his younger and more rollicking days, Shakespeare and his cronies used to play. This board—which in reality is a long table, somewhat like a very crude and bungling billiard table, but without the cushions—was formerly in the Birth Place Museum, but has lately been given over to New Place.

Besides the memetoes mentioned there are relics, such as boxes and goblets made from the wood of the first mulberry tree, a part of a window from the old house, furniture of the time of Shakespeare, etc.

Upon the walls, among other pictures and engravings, I observed the portrait of a lady who must have been very beautiful. This portrait has a history, which I will give as related to me, not because it is in any particular way connected with the history or life of Shakespeare, but because of the constantly needed lessons to be derived from it. It is a picture of a young lady of the Clopton family—a race intimately associated with the early days of Stratford—and the legend runs thus:

At about the time of Shakespeare's birth, the plague broke out in Stratford, and raged with terrible fierceness, so that in a few weeks a fifth of the population fell victims to it. This young lady sickened, and, to all appearances, died, and was buried with fearful haste in the vault of Clopton Chapel, attached to Stratford Church. Within a week another of the family was seized, and quickly dying, was borne to the ancestral vault, and to the horror of the mourners, as they descended the stairs, the light of their torches showed them the figure of a woman dressed in her grave-clothes, and leaning against the wall. When they approached and examined the figure they found it to be Charlotte Clopton. She appeared not long dead, and with a face distorted with agonies of despair, hunger, and doubtless madness; for her round white shoulders and arms were found marked and torn in many places by her teeth.

Such is the legend as it has been handed down from generation to generation. The picture made me very sad and thoughtful, and I could not turn from it; every now and then, while I remained in the room, my eyes would wander back to the fair face as if impelled by a spirit of fascination.

From the last earthly home of Shakespeare we naturally turned toward his grave. One can reach Stratford Church by various ways, but the most attractive is that starting at the little stone bridge just above the Red Horse Hotel, and following the course of the Avon.

The church is built just upon the bank of the river, and is most beautifully situated, the principal approach to it being through a graceful avenue formed by lime trees, which continue up to the Great Gothic door. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The base of the tower has a supposed date of about 1000, the wings being of the eleventh or twelfth century. Within the edifice, although the marks of restoration are plainly to be seen on every hand, there is much to interest the searcher for the old and curious; but the attention of visitors is chiefly directed to that portion beneath the northern wall, near to the great east window, with its glories of stained glass, where all that is earthly of the immortal poet rests.

Upon the marble slab covering his remains is the well known inscription, so much like a malediction, that it has kept his bones undisturbed to this day.

About five feet from the floor, just above the slab, is a bust of the Bard in the attitude of inspiration, with a cushion before him, a pen in his right hand, and his left resting upon a scroll. It is the well-known half-length figure of which nearly everyone has seen copies. Above is his coat of arms, surmounted by a skull. This bust was originally colored to resemble life; and in 1746 Mr. John Ward (grandfather of Mrs. Siddons) manager of a company of comedians, gave the receipts arising from the representation of Othello to defray the expense of repairing the monument and retouching the effigy. This was a praiseworthy act. But in 1793 the bust and figure above were, at the request of Malone, the critic and annotator, repainted with white lead. This instance of an execrable taste was thus satirized in a book kept in the Chancel:

"Stranger to whom this book is shown,
Invoke the poet's curse upon Malone.
Whose meddling zeal his barbarous taste betrays,
And daubs his tomb-stone as he mars his plays."

I am happy to add, as a sequel to this episode, that some fourteen years ago an artist of some note succeeded in removing nearly all the white paint, and so exposing the original color as to enable him to give the bust its old time and original appearance.

The Elephant Country.

[London Telegraph.]

Somewhere in the marvellous yarn which Sinbad the sailor contrived to spin for the benefit of the all-puissant Haroun Alraschid, and Giaffir, his vizier, is an account of the burial place of the elephants. Sinbad, surrounded by the monstrous brutes, has scaled a tree, in which he is besieged for seven days and seven nights. On the eighth day, an old bull, the "rogue" of the herd, rends the tree up by its roots, and Sinbad, falling headlong to the ground, judges it the safest course to feign death. The elephant, disdaining to wreak its rage upon a lifeless enemy, picks the old sailor up, and quietly carries him to the great burial place of the tribe—a high hill some miles in circuit, surrounded by impenetrable forests and thickly covered with the bones and tusks of generation after generation of "the brute which bears between its eyes the serpent for a hand." Sinbad, with commendable prudence, continues to counterfeit death till not an elephant is in sight; and then with an alacrity equally commendable, loads a raft with picked tusks, makes his way with them to Bagdad, and so finds himself a rich man. Modern research has gone far to rehabilitate the credit of Sinbad the sailor. We know that the long narrative of his seven voyages is no ide fairy tale, but that it embodies the genuine tradition of old navigators, such as Hanno, and that its main facts are substantially accurate. The valley of the diamonds actually exists in Ceylon; the great rukh once built its nest in Madagascar, and flapped its monstrous wings to and fro between the island and the mainland, and there is good ground to believe that the tale of the great burial place of the elephant race is no mere fable, but that high upon the tableland of central Africa, on the farther side of Tanganyika, ivory is as plentiful as in the fossil beds of Siberia, whence are dug up the huge mammoth tusks that furnish nine-tenths of the material operated upon by out Loudon ivory-turners. Indeed, it would almost seem as if the energy of the Zanzibar merchants had at length found a way to Sinbad's charmed hill, for, within the last year, the importation of ivory has doubled; or does each pair of tusks that finds its way to England represent a slaughtered elephant, and is a war of extermination being waged, the ultimate effect of which must be to render the huge brute as extinct as the dinornis itself?

The latter, we fear, is the true answer. The elephant, like the whale, is dying out. In India he is becoming almost as rare as is the red deer in England. The hunters have driven him farther and farther inland; unless something be done, to protect him, he will before long become, upon the main continent at any rate, altogether extinct, and Sahib will have to import his elephants from Birmah and Ceylon, much as we in England import our horses from Ireland, and our foxes from any country that will send them to us in sufficient number and of sufficient size and strength. In Africa, it is true, the evil is not yet past remedy. Over the vast tablelands of that unknown continent the elephant still roves in countless droves, and still holds in undisputed possession vast tracts to which rum and glass beads, cast-iron muskets and clay pipes, printed calico and coarse gunpowder, have never yet found their way. The respite, however, will probably be but brief. Almost daily caravans start from the Zanzibar coast to the interior, carrying with them all that the native heart needs to make it glad, and willing to take payment in ivory for all that they have to offer. For ten or a dozen large tusks the African chief can dress his wives out in beads and striped calico, furnish himself and his ministers with rum and gunpowder, and can so afford to wait patiently until next year's hunting season commences. The danger which the chase involves is exaggerated. The elephant is a dangerous beast to meet face to face, but he is easily circumvented by craft. He can be shot with poisoned arrows; he can be frightened by midnight fires and driven into pitfalls; or, if the hunter have the requisite nerve and courage, he can be followed and hamstrung. And so the butchery goes on. Year by year Zanzibar sends inland a larger number of bales, and year by year a larger number of tusks is carried down to the coast. We may regret the idle waste, but we are powerless to stop it. Nor is it, after all, easy to convince a native chief that it is his duty to allow the elephant to multiply in peace. We here in England are burning up our coal, and leaving posterity to take care of itself and pay its own national debt; and we can hardly expect the woolly-headed African to display a virtue of which we ourselves are ignorant. What is it to him if in a century or so the elephant be altogether extinct, so long as in the interval he is able to drink rum and to dress out his ebony charmer in gaudy yellow and red?

But after all, rapidly extinct as the great brute is becoming, it is yet certain that we shall have supplied his place long before we begin to feel his loss. The tramway will supplant the elephant in India as surely as the train has supplanted the stage coach in England, and science will discover some material fully as elastic as ivory, and equally capable of doing service in the shape of a billiard ball—the one and only article of modern luxury for which at present ivory is absolutely indispensable. Indeed, it is not improbable that long before the elephant is finally extinct, science may have taught us to fuse glass so as to impart to it all the elasticity of ivory—exactly as it has already taught us to supply the place of the bamboo with cast iron pillars and pipes, and that of the sponge with fibrous india-rubber.

Educational Lecture.

The third lecture before the Educations Lyceum Course was given on Friday evening by J. G. Edgerly, Esq., Superintendent of Schools in Manchester. His subject was "School Management" and his remarks were necessarily directed to teachers, although they proved interesting to every friend of education who had the good fortune to be present. The lecturer shew by his discourse that he "knew whereof he affirmed," and spoke as a practical teacher. The audience was large, Mechanics' Hall being filled to its utmost seating capacity; and the strictest attention was paid to the remarks of the speaker. Some rude boys, however, greatly disturbed the exercises by running up and down stairs in a body, evidently with the express purpose of making a noise, in which they succeeded admirably. It would be well for the police to interview these lads and inform them that there is a statute punishing such an amusement as the one described, and warn them against repeating such an impropriety.

It is understood that Mr. Edgerly will visit this city again soon and give an extempore discourse upon another subject with which he is familiar, the time of which will be announced hereafter.

Laconics.

The Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims has overruled the demurrer raised by Mr. Creswell, counsel for the U. S. in the case of Capt. O. G. Robinson of Greenland, late of bark Gypsey of New Bedford. The grounds of demurrer were, first, that the petition did not state whether the complainant has received any compensation or indemnity from any insurance company or otherwise, for or on account of said claim, and second, because the complainant's claim as to so much thereof as relates to a certain share of the gross earnings of the voyage of the said bark, is inadmissible.

The Tea-Party at the Court-house commences to-morrow evening—and don't you forget it. There will be a reception in costume and a tea-party, at six o'clock.—At eight o'clock Mother Goose will sing her popular lays, which will be illustrated by pantomime on the part of the children. A sale of antique furniture will commence at its close, to be followed by dancing music by Harlow's band, in which the young and old may participate in tripping the light fantastic.

A shed in the rear of the Hawkes house on Deer street was fired by an incendiary about half-past six, Sunday morning, and was put out by one of the extinguishers.—The shed was pulled down by the fire department.

Schooner Nellie Langdon, Capt. Collins, now at Eldredge's wharf, has been chartered to load for Baltimore, by John Stokells & Co.

—A French paper states that the Memoirs of Juarez, late President of the Mexican republic, are about to be published. It is said that this publication will contain curious revelations with regard to the Emperor Maximilian and Marshal Bazaine.

—The proverbial faith of Abraham now pales before the trusting confidence of the man who eats chestnuts in the dark.

—The St. Louis papers put it thus: "Two niggers and a razor, now one nigger. The coroner held the inquest."

—Rev. Dr. Chapin says of the Lincoln statue, none needed it less, none deserved it more.

"DOUBTLESS THE

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO. CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 7 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1872.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another supply of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it even a night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

HUMAN NATURE

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL.

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develop and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

The New York Times.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures and policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific add educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Spoil Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle cathartic, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and there, there is the charm, lady!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a refined home illustration, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. LAWS OF THE

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 103.]

AN ACT in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be the duty of the United States marshal of the Territory of Utah, in person or by deputy, to attend all sessions of the supreme and district courts in said Territory, and to serve and execute all process and writs issued out of, and all orders, judgments, and decrees made by said courts, or by any judge thereof, unless said court or judge shall otherwise order in any particular case. All process, writs, or other papers left with said marshal, or either of his deputies, shall be served without delay, and in the order in which they are received, upon payment or tender of his legal fees therefor; and it shall be competent for said marshal to demand or receive mileage for any greater distance than the actual distance by the usual routes from the place of service or execution of process, writ, or other paper, to the place of return of the same, except that when it shall be necessary to convey any person arrested by legal authority out of the country in which he is arrested, said marshal shall be entitled to mileage for the whole distance necessarily traveled in delivering the person so arrested before the court or officer ordering such arrest. Said marshal is hereby authorized to appoint as many deputies as may be necessary, each of whom shall have authority, in the name of said marshal, to perform any act with like effect and in like manner as said marshal; and the marshal shall be liable for all official acts of such deputies, as if done by himself. Such appointment shall not be complete until he shall give bond to said marshal, with sureties, to be by him approved, in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties; and he shall also take and subscribe the same oath prescribed by law to be taken by said marshal, and said appointment, bond and oath shall be filed and remain in the office of the clerk of the supreme court of said Territory. In actions brought against said marshal for the misfeasance or non feasance of any deputy it shall be lawful for the plaintiff at his option, to join the said deputy and the sureties on his bond with said marshal and his sureties. Any process either civil or criminal returnable to the supreme or district courts, may be served in any county, by the sheriff thereof or his legal deputy, and they may also serve any other process which may be authorized by act of the territorial legislature.

SEC. 2. That it shall be the duty of the United States attorney in said Territory in person or by an assistant, to attend all the courts of record having jurisdiction of offences as well under the laws of said Territory as of the United States, and perform the duties of prosecuting officer in all criminal cases arising in said courts, and he is hereby authorized to appoint as many assistants as may be necessary, each of whom shall subscribe the same oath as is prescribed by law for said United States attorney, and the said appointment and oath shall be filed and remain in the office of the clerk of the supreme court of said Territory. The United States attorney shall be entitled to the same fees for services rendered by such assistants as he would be entitled to for the same services if rendered by himself. The territorial legislature may provide for the election of a prosecuting attorney in any county; and such attorney, if authorized so to do by such legislature, may commence prosecutions for offenses under the laws of the Territory, within such county, and if such prosecution is carried to the district court by recognizance or appeal, or otherwise may aid in conducting the prosecution in such court. And the costs and expenses of all prosecutions for offenses against any law of the territorial legislature shall be paid out of the treasury of the Territory.

SEC. 3. That there shall be held in each year two terms of the supreme court of said Territory, and four terms of each district court, at such times as the governor of the Territory may by proclamation fix. The district courts shall have exclusive original jurisdiction in all suits or proceedings in chancery, and in all actions at law in which the sum or value of the thing in controversy shall be three hundred dollars or upward, and in all controversies where the title, possession, or boundaries of land, or mines or mining claims shall be in dispute, whatever the value, except in actions for forcible entry or forcible and unlawful detainer; and they shall have jurisdiction in suits for divorce. Probate courts, in their respective counties shall have jurisdiction in the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, and in matters of guardianship and other like matters; but otherwise they shall have no civil, chancery, or criminal jurisdiction whatever; they shall have jurisdiction of suits of divorce for statutory causes concurrently with the district courts; but any defendant in a suit for divorce commenced in a probate court shall be entitled after appearance and before plea or answer, to have said suit removed to the district court having jurisdiction, when said suit shall proceed in like manner as if originally commenced in said district court. Nothing in this act shall be construed to impair the authority of the probate courts to enter land in trust for the use and benefit of the occupants of towns in the various counties of the Territory of Utah, according to the provisions of "An act for the relief of the inhabitants of cities and towns upon public lands," approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven and "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act for the relief of the inhabitants of cities and towns upon the public lands,'" approved June eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight; or to discharge the duties assigned to the probate judges by an act of the legislative assembly of the Territory of Utah entitled "An act prescribing rules and regulations for the execution of the trust arising under an act of Congress entitled 'An act for the relief of the inhabitants of cities and towns upon the public lands.'" All judgments and decrees heretofore rendered by the probate courts which have been executed, and the time to appeal from such judgments by the existing laws of said Territory expired, are hereby validated and confirmed. The jurisdiction heretofore conferred upon justices of the peace by the organic act of said Territory is extended to all cases where the debt or sum claimed shall be less than three hundred dollars. From all final judgments of justices of the peace an appeal shall be allowed to the district courts of their respective districts, in the same manner as is now provided by the laws of said Territory for appeals to the probate courts; and from the judgments of the probate courts an appeal shall lie to the district court of the district embracing the county in which such probate court is held in such cases and in such manner as the supreme court of said Territory may, by general rules framed for that purpose, specify and designate, and such appeal shall vacate the judgment appealed from, and the case shall be tried de novo in the appellate court. Appeals may be taken from both justices' and probate courts to the district court of their respective districts in cases where judgments have been heretofore rendered and remain unexecuted; but this provision shall not enlarge the time for taking an appeal beyond the periods now allowed by the existing laws of said Territory for taking appeals. A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the supreme court of the Territory shall lie in criminal cases, where the accused shall have been sentenced to capital punishment or convicted of bigamy or polygamy. Whenever the condition of the business in the district court of any district is such that the judge of the district is unable to do the same, he may request the judge of either of the other districts to assist him, and upon such request made, the judge so requested may hold the whole or part of any term, or any branch thereof, and his acts as judge shall be of equal force as if he were duly assigned to hold the courts in such district.

SEC. 4. That within sixty days after the passage of this act, and in the month of January annually thereafter, the clerk of the district court in each judicial district, and the judge of probate of the county in which the district court is next to be held, shall prepare a jury-list from which grand and petit jurors shall be drawn, to serve in the district courts, of such district, until a new list shall be made as herein provided. Said clerk and probate judge shall alternately select the name of a male citizen of the United States who has resided in the district for the period of six months next preceding, and who can read and write in the English language; and, as selected, the name and residence of each shall be entered upon the list, until the same shall contain two hundred names, when the same shall be duly certified by such clerk and probate judge; and the same shall be filed in the office of the clerk of such district court, and a duplicate copy shall be made and certified by such officers, and filed in the office of said probate judge. Whenever a grand or petit jury is to be drawn to serve at any term of a district court, the judge of such district shall give public notice of the time and place of the drawing of such jury, which shall be at least twelve days before the commencement of such term, and on the day and at the place thus fixed, the judge of such district shall hold an open session of his court, and shall preside at the drawing of such jury; and the clerk of such court shall write the name of each person on the jury lists returned and filed in his office upon a separate slip of paper, as nearly as practicable of the same size and form; and all such slips shall, by the clerk in open court, be placed in a covered box and thoroughly mixed and mingled; and thereupon the United States marshal, or his deputy, shall proceed to fairly draw by lot from said box such number of names as may have previously been directed by said judge; and if both a grand and petit jury are to be drawn, the grand jury shall be drawn first; and when the drawing shall have been concluded, the clerk of the district court shall issue a venire to the marshal or his deputy, directing him to summon the persons so drawn, and the same shall be duly served on each of the persons so drawn at least seven days before the commencement of the term at which they are to serve; and the jurors so drawn and summoned shall constitute the regular grand and petit juries for the term for all cases. And the names thus drawn from the box by the clerk shall not be returned to or again placed in said box until a new jury-list shall be made. If during any term of the district court any additional grand or petit jurors shall be necessary, the same shall be drawn from said box by the United States marshal in open court; but if the attendance of those drawn cannot be obtained in a reasonable time, other names may be drawn in the same manner. Each party whether in civil or criminal cases, shall be allowed three peremptory challenges except in capital cases where the prosecution and the defense shall each be allowed fifteen challenges. In criminal cases, the court, and not the jury, shall pronounce the punishment under the limitation prescribed by law. The grand jury must inquire into the case of every person imprisoned within the district on a criminal charge and not indicted; into the condition and management of the public prisons within the district; and into the willful corrupt misconduct in office of public officers of every description within the district; and they are also entitled to free access, at all reasonable times, to the public prisons, and to the examination, without charge of all public records within the district.

SEC. 5. That there shall be appointed by the governors of said Territory one or more notaries public for each organized county, whose term of office shall be two years, and until their successors shall be appointed and qualified. The act of the legislative assembly of the Territory of Utah entitled "An act concerning notaries public" approved January seventeenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, is hereby approved, except the first section thereof, which is hereby disapproved: Provided, That wherever, in said act, the words "probate judge" or "clerk of the probate court" are used, the words, "secretary of the Territory" shall be substituted.

SEC. 6. That the supreme court of said Territory is hereby authorized to appoint commissioners of said court, who shall have and exercise all the duties of commissioners of the circuit courts of the United States, and to take acknowledgments of bail, and, in addition, they shall have the same authority as examining and committing magistrates in all cases arising under the laws of said Territory as is now possessed by justices of the peace in said Territory.

SEC. 7. That the act of the territorial legislature of the Territory of Utah entitled "An act in relation to marshals and attorneys," approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and all laws of said Territory inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby disapproved. The act of the Congress of the United States entitled "An act to regulate the fees and costs to be allowed clerks, marshals, and attorneys of the circuit and district courts of the United States, and for other purposes, approved February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, is extended over and shall apply to the fees of like officers in said Territory of Utah. But the district attorney shall not by fees and salary together receive more than thirty-five hundred dollars per year; and all fees or moneys received by him above said amount shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States.

News and Notes.

Charges have been preferred against Lieutenant Commander Thomas O. Selfridge of the Charlestown naval station, by I. F. V. Christine, a mechanic who was employed in the machine shop of the Bureau of Steam Engineering last summer. He has made an affidavit, and charges Selfridge with gross profanity and abusive language toward him while quietly engaged about his work. It is thought that the authorities at Washington will be forced to investigate the matter, in order to see if these charges can be substantiated.

The jury in the case of Coroner Croker of New York disagreed. He was charged with an election murder.

Hon. Emerson Wight who was elected Mayor of Springfield, Mass., last week, has lost both of his legs. He began life as a wood sawyer, and had a contract with the Western Railroad, now the Boston and Albany, to saw the wood required on their engines, and as coal was not used in those days the job was no small one. With a portable horse-power and one or two assistants, he moved from station to station, and by untiring industry kept the locomotives supplied, gained the good-will of his employers, and put money in his purse. Unluckily, when off his guard one day, he fell upon the track before an approaching engine, and both his legs were cut off below the knee. He recovered from the accident, and having supplemented his extremities with a pair of cork legs, continued his business activity with success.

The barque Veteran, from Shields for Pensacola, is reported to have been wrecked and eleven of her crew lost.

Theodore Tilton has appealed from Judge McCue's decision to the general term, claiming that general evidence of Beecher's guilt should be sufficient for his conviction. Judge McCue's decision made it necessary for proof to be furnished of the exact time the crime was committed. The case will be argued next week.

Boston is prolific of murders. At Charlestown, Sunday, William H. Jones, a married man, killed Mrs. Morgiana Berry, a married woman, by cutting her throat with a razor, after which he committed suicide by cutting his own throat. Both were dead when found. Their families had been quite intimate and no cause for the horrible deed is known.

The steamship Mongol, from Shanghae for New York, has been wrecked, and sixteen persons perished.

State News.

At the Keene election, the republicans threw 663 votes for Mayor and 770 for Aldermen; the democrats threw 683 votes for Mayor and 579 for Aldermen.

A woman's temperance league has been formed at Manchester.

Hattie Beaman, a New York girl who has recently resided in Manchester, killed her girl baby soon after its birth, Saturday, by severing the windpipe with a pair of shears. She was engaged to a young man in Brushier, N. Y., and left there in consequence of a difficulty with her parents.

An incendiary set fire to a shed in Manchester, Saturday night, and twenty barrels of kerosene oil stored therein were burned.

—A Mr. Frank Potts, of Warwick, Chester County, Pa., called an evening or two ago upon a physician and said, "Doctor, should any one call upon you this evening to have his arm dressed and a ball extracted you can take it for granted that I put that ball there. The fellow attempted to rob me on the highway." Mr. Potts drove on, and was scarcely out of sight before the highwayman came to get his arm dressed, and to the surprise of the doctor he found him to be a neighbor.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13.

The Treasury report and the President's message are before the country. They are squarely for specie payments at an early day, but not as strongly for internal improvements as expected. Both urge the repeal of the legal tender power of the greenback, but neither gives a good reason for doing it. If it would be repudiation to repeal that part of the law which makes a bond and its interest payable in gold, is it not equally repudiation to repeal that part which gives a value to the note without interest? What makes a government bond more sacred than a greenback? They are both government loans, the one held by the rich, drawing interest, and the other by the masses, without interest. The promise of gold interest gives an additional value to the bond, and the promise of legal tender gives the greenback an additional value.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT

is an able presentation of the specie side, but it proposes to reach it in three years, which is too short a time to get out of circulation more than three hundred millions of paper currency, without breaking up every business man who is much in debt. So I think this Congress will not be in haste to fix upon so short a time.

KELLEY AND BUTLER

made able speeches in favor of a convertible bond with 3.65 per cent. interest, while Dawes and Garfield opposed it and claimed it would open a Pandora's box of evils. It has always seemed to me that such a bond would do more to reach specie payment without resort to harsh contraction than any measure yet proposed. It would take out of circulation one hundred millions of currency not now needed which is loaned on call, and if at any time it should take up circulation too rapidly, its elastic feature would give back what the urgent demands of business might require, and thereby prevent extortionate rates of interest. Dawes and Garfield are no match for Butler and Kelly in debate. Phelps, of New Jersey, made a short speech which was more effective than either Dawes' or Garfield's.

PROPOSED SUBSIDIES.

The Southern Pacific Railroad and the Pacific steams hip subsidies are the only big schemes for government aid yet presented. Both will be powerfully pushed and strenuously resisted, with the chances rather against their passage.

THE GAUNT AND HUNGRY

forms of democrats long waiting for a chance at the public crib are now to be seen about the hotels, looking after the chances ahead. The first opening for them is a year distant, when a democratic House organizes. Already a half-dozen are here working for the Clerkship, among them Babcock, of Virginia, Adams, of Kentucky, Mitchell, of Kansas, and Eldredge, of Wisconsin. They are all savage from long hunger, and in the coming contest many a competitor will bite the dust before it is reached. As many more are looking for the position of Sergent-at-Arms and Doorkeeper.

PRESIDENTIAL MANEUVERINGS will be among the excitements of this session. The liberals seem to fancy they hold the key of the situation and can pass in whom they please. They tell the democrats with the coolest assurance that unless they nominate Judge Davis, or some man of his stamp, they shall join with the republicans to elect some such man as Washburne. Some old stagers are pointing to Sherman as the coming republican nominee. There is time enough to build up and kill off a dozen of candidates on each side before the nominations are made.

DIVORCED.

Rev. Daniel Ames, formerly the Mayor of Harper's Ferry, and I believe now a tutor or professor in the Baptist theological institution there, procured a divorce from his wife, the noted newspaper correspondent, Mary Clemmer Ames, on account of desertion. There are no rumors, that I hear, of any improper conduct on the part of either. It was a case of incompatibility. She did not like the staid ministerial life, its drudgery and discipline, so she struck out to earn fame and a living on her own account, and has achieved both; and now he can find a more devoted affinity.

THE SAFE-BURGLARY FARCE.

The grand jury which found an indictment against the safe burglars has been declared illegally drawn, so the indictments all fall. A new grand jury might bring new indictments, but the parties are powerful and a new trial might not result in any agreement of the jury, and so the accused parties are likely to escape further following.

PETTY DESPOTISM.

Senator Morrill has presented his plan for governing the District of Columbia without suffrage. A despotism is a simple form of government—why have the trouble of voting anywhere? The Board of Public Works were not elected by the people, but they were expensive nevertheless. Better educate and elevate suffrage than dispense with it. EXE.

CHILDREN'S STORIES, by eleven Sophomores, a handsome little book in cloth and gilt—Roberts Brothers, publishers, Boston. It is a little singular that stories for children should be written as Themes by Harvard Sophomores, but still more so that they should all be good stories, as we have no doubt the children who read them will pronounce them to be. Upon the Health of the Teeth

Depends the purity of the breath. Preserve them unblemished by the use of the famous SOZODONT, that perfectly harmless vegetable preparation, and you will never regret it.

To Shake, or Not to Shake?

Aye, that is the question. Is it better to quiver from head to foot in the paroxysms of fever and ague, or to banish the atrocious disease by a course of that standard anti-febrile remedy, Hostetter's Bitters. There cannot be much doubt as to the response of the malaria-stricken to this inquiry. From every locality on this continent whose inhabitants are tormented with the shivering plague comes an increasing demand for the only genuine preventive and eradicant of malaria provided by science. The denizens of fever and ague districts well know how utterly inadequate to do more than to give a brief respite are the so-called remedies of the faculty. Quinine, arsenic, bismuth—what are these but poisonous palliatives, which cease after a time to produce any beneficial effect whatever, and if persisted in wreak irreparable mischief upon the system? Everywhere they are being abandoned by intelligent persons, and that genuine vegetable specific for intermittent and remittent disease. Hostetter's Bitters, substituted in their place.

NEVER GIVE UP!

If all the cases in which HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR has cured inveterate and apparently fatal coughs, could be made known, every consumptive in the land would take heart and commence, in hope, a course of this most wonderful preparation. Physicians who have exhausted their list of pulmonics, without benefit, recommend it as a last resort, and even in the worst extremity its effects are astonishing. But it should be the first resort, not the last. It is impossible for any disease tending to consumption to retain its hold, if met in the early stages with this powerful vegetable remedy.

By the expenditure of a small amount before the 29th of December, in assisting the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., to complete their Temple, you may obtain a fortune without being required to wait for a term of years, or compel your family to wait for your death, as would be the case in life insurance. The Grand Gift Concert, at which six thousand prizes will be distributed, will be conducted by some of the best citizens of Norfolk, and there will be a prize in every ten tickets. The drawing will positively take place on the 29th of December. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or to Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

SAFE INVESTMENTS.—We desire to call especial attention to the list of city and railroad bonds, advertised in another column by Messrs. Charles A. Sweet & Co., of the old and well-known firm of Brewster, Sweet & Co., of Boston. In the present uncertainty as to the permanent value of stocks, there is a growing desire for safe and sure returns instead of a high rate of interest, and the securities embraced in their announcement to-day are recommended as worthy of the fullest confidence. The reputation of these gentlemen for honorable dealing, and their reliability as sound financiers, is a guarantee to all who have business with them. They invite inquiries in regard to the stocks which they offer for sale, and will give all requisite information. Those changing investments, as well as those making new investments, are particularly invited to examine the list.

The Best in the State.

John Stokell & Co. move into their elegant new store this week, and invite all their friends and the public generally to give them a call in their enlarged quarters. They have had an iron front put in and have taken the store formerly occupied by Mr. Uriah Blaisdell in addition to their old one, making a front of forty-eight feet with three entrances. The four stories have been altered to three, the lower one being twelve feet in height and forty-two and a half feet deep. The building is handsomely finished outside and is an ornament to that section of the city. A huge refrigerator in the rear of the store reminds one of a young house. In it the meats will be stored, an arrangement being made by which blocks of ice are to slide in overhead. Pipes are provided to let off the superfluous water, and everything is arranged "as nice as a cotton hat." Mr. Stokell and his live partner, Mr. Cyrus L. Brown, will have their hands full to attend to the orders of their customers, and with their immensely increasing trade will keep the most complete stock of provisions in the city in the finest store of the kind in the State of New Hampshire. Their aim has always been to keep the best the market affords and to satisfy their customers, which accounts for their past success. Their column advertisement speaks for itself.

Laconics.

Mr. William A. Hanscom, formerly of this city, and now a leading hardware merchant, was unanimously chosen to the Common Council of Haverhill, Mass., last week.

Paymaster Rufus Parks, U. S. N., has been ordered for immediate duty on board the U. S. steamer Brooklyn, as fleet-paymaster of the South Atlantic squadron, and is now at Norfolk, Va., preparing for his cruise.

The Martha Washington Tea Party commences at six o'clock, this evening, at the court-house, the reception lasting half an hour. Tea will be served until eight o'clock. Mother Goose representations in pantomime under the management of Mr. Robert B. Palfrey will furnish an hour's amusement. Then there will be dancing, Harlow's band furnishing the music. A hat and cloak room has been fitted up for the convenience of all who attend, free of charge. Refreshments and fancy articles will be for sale.

A pair of ducks were stolen from the farm of Mr. J. W. Bowles, at Little Harbor, Saturday night.

NUMBER V.

[Concluded.]

It is impossible, with some natures, to resist the spirit of enthusiasm and reverence that steals over the mind and holds captive the sentiments when standing in the presence of all that is earthly of some one whose words or deeds have in time past fired the imagination, or fed the heart, or awakened the ambition of the beholder. Happy they who are quick to feel. I remember as I stood by the tomb of that incomparable soldier, Marshal Ney, in Pere la Chaise. Paris, how many strong and sun-browned men, some with the dark hair of youth, and some with locks of silver, came softly to its side and stood with bowed and uncovered heads—a fitting tribute to the emotions his presence (for he still lived in their hearts) evoked.

I am not usually very sentimental, but I lost myself here. I could not have marred his tomb, for the sake of a memento of my visit, if I would; I would not have done it if I could.

Between the monumental slab of Shakespeare's grave and the wall of the Chancel lies interred the poet's wife, and near by are two stones which mark the last resting place of his daughter, Susanna, and her husband.

I will only notice further, speaking of Stratford Church, the fine glass window in the north wall, just out of the Chancel, placed there through the voluntary contributions of American visitors. It is called the American Window, and the gift is fittingly acknowledged by an engraved plate just beneath it.

No visit to Stratford can be complete which fails to take in Shottery, one of the quaintest and prettiest of hamlets—the place where Shakespeare wooed and won Anne Hathaway. You do not need a guide at Stratford; one is very acceptable at Chester, but not here, or at Warwick. At Oxford, also a guide is indispensable, as also in London, but at Stratford it is better to take one's own sweet will and wander about at pleasure. Half the charm will be in this. And do not go to Stratford simply for a few hours. I was told that the majority of Americans just give themselves between trains for a visit here, and are off. Take two days for your visit and be sure you put up at the Red Horse, and give half a day to a walk out to Shottery. The hamlet, for such it is, is within the extensive parish of Stratford, and can be readily reached by a walk that branches off near the church. It is one of the most delightful sights I have seen in England; and aside from the associations connected with it is well worthy of a visit.

The outer appearance of the cottage is that of a roomy old frame house. The walls are roughly framed, with here and there the intervals filled in with bricks, though the larger portion is made up of wattling and rude plaster. The roof is thatched after the same manner as when erected three centuries or more ago; and the whole is at present subsided into three tenements. Originally it must have been a good substantial farm house, fit for the residence of a prosperous yeoman of the olden time.

Within the dwelling will be seen the kitchen, as of yore—the chief living-room retaining its ample hearth and roomy chimney corners, where of winter evenings sat the heads of the household enjoying the crackling and blazing of the great roots and logs, and before which it is to be presumed, he, whose memory has been so sacredly preserved, used to sit, 270 years ago. The walls still exhibit portions of the black oaken wainscot with which the rough plastering was formerly concealed, while the rude stone floor, the low ceiling with its heavy beams, the unpainted doors and wooden latches are alike primitive and in homely keeping.

I must say good-by Stratford, but my two days' visit there will long linger in my memory as two of the most agreeable spent in England.

With this letter I send you a condensed account of the main incidents of Shakespeare's life, taken from Chamber's Cyclopaedia of English Literature, vol. I, page 176. I am told by several, of the prominent men of Stratford that it is considered the most trustworthy abridgment of his life offered to the public. It contains much in little which, cannot fail to interest, and with which, many who are admirers of the great Bard, are not familiar, and is an account of his life, as implicitly believed in, and trusted here in England, as is the history of our own Washington in his native land.

DRESS REFORM, or dress as it affects the health of women, a series of lectures delivered in Boston during the present year by female physicians of recognized ability, excites much attention and is published with the hope of extending the work of reform. They are not intended as an assault upon fashion, but rather to teach hygiene and to awaken women to the consciousness of the injuries that follow the wearing of their present garments. They do not recommend a radical change in the external clothing as did the originators of the Bloomer costume, who met with such a decided failure a few years ago—but rather a change in the structure and adjustment of the under-clothing, trusting that the outward covering may in time take care of itself. We recommend this book to the careful perusal of every woman. Published by Roberts Brothers, Boston, and for sale by J. H. Foster; price $1.50.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

A Short Postponement of the Fifth Gift Concert.

As manager of the gift concerts given in aid of the Public Library of Kentucky, my position creates an important trust in behalf of the Public Library and the ticket-holders of the fifth gift concert. The Public Library of Kentucky and the ticket-holders are jointly interested in the amount of the drawing. The larger the fund to be distributed in gifts, the greater will be the gift awarded to each lucky ticket-holder and more the amount realized by the Library. To have a full drawing is so manifestly to the interest of those interested, that, rather than have a fractional drawing on the 30th inst., I deem it due to the trust confided to me by the ticket-holders and the Public Library of Kentucky, that a short postponement be made to enable me to dispose of the unsold tickets and have a full drawing. Though the very large amount now in bank would enable us to distribute handsome gifts, yet we should feel disappointed in this our last concert, should we be compelled to make a fractional drawing, however large.

We have received so very large a number of letters from all parts of the country from those most largely interested, urging a postponement if all the tickets be not sold by the 30th, that we feel strengthened in our sense of duty to the ticket-holders and the Public Library, to make the postponement. Under the circumstances, we have determined, in the interest of all parties, to postpone the concert and drawing to Saturday, February 27, 1875, at which time the drawing will positively take place; and, as a guarantee of good faith toward ticket-holders, we pledge ourselves to refund to any ticket-holder his money, upon presentation of his ticket, should the drawing fail to come off at the day now fixed. The past, we feel assured, will be sufficient guarantee to all interested that they will be fairly and honestly dealt with. The money paid for tickets is sacredly preserved against all contingences until after the payment of the gifts, after which the expenses are to be reimbursed and the Public Library is to be paid its profits.

THOS. E. BRAMLETTE,
Nov. 29, 1874. Agent and Manager.

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the convenience found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sel them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. 1875. The New York Times.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.

ESTABLISHED 1851.

POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.

As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.

As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.

Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.

Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The scientific add educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.

The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has been long recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is fairly started. The names of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp

TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them in early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,

The New York Times.
A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.
DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.
ESTABLISHED 1851.
POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.
As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.
As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any Administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.
Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.
Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from self-interested aims, political jobbery, or undue favoritism. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the science, and the drama of the day. The scientific and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.
The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes in addition to the news, social and commercial, a literary matter of the most varied and agreeable character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forrest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, and negotiations are being carried out with many other distinguished authors.

Republican State Convention.

A Republican delegate convention for the nomination of candidates for Governor and Railroad Commissioner will be held in Eagle Hall, CONCORD, on TUESDAY, January 12, 1875, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

All the voters of New Hampshire who are in favor of sustaining the principles and integrity of the Republican party; who desire the National and State governments to be administered with honesty, efficiency and economy; and who are in honest sympathy with the spirit of progress, enlightenment and reform, which animates the best portion of the American people, are invited to participate in the primary meetings for the choice of delegates.

There will be a meeting of the State Central Committee, at the Eagle Hotel, in Concord, on Monday evening, January 11, at eight o'clock, which all delegates to the Convention are invited to attend.

Out in the Cold.

Danbury, a town in Grafton county which gave McCutchins 79 votes, Weston 121 and Blackmer 2, need not trouble itself at the next election to designate its choice for Councillor. The blundering legislative democrats, in their haste to overturn things and redistrict the State for Councillors, omitted the town, and in their haste to correct the mistake blundered again by severing it from Grafton county and annexing it to the county of Merrimack, making it "part of such Councillor and Congressional districts as now embrace the entire county of Merrimack." There is no "Councillor district embracing "the entire county of Merrimack," and the Danburians are asking the democratic Solons what Councillor district they are in, and the stupid bunglers cannot for the life of them tell. This is a sample of democratic engineering carried through in reckless haste by as careless a set of political buccaneers as ever contrived to become members of the New Hampshire legislature.

News and Notes.

John Kelly married a young lady clandestinely in Worcester, last week, and his bridal chamber was invaded by the police at the instigation of the bride's father, the city marshal having been informed that the happy couple were unmarried. John arose from bed and hunted up his marriage certificate, but the officers were incorrigible and marched him and Mrs. John to the police station, where they were confined all night. John now sues the invaders for damages, and is likely to win if the jury is not composed of idiots.

The grand jury recently met in Knox county, Me., and for the first time in many years were unable to find an indictment.

In response to a request of the governor and council, the supreme court of Maine has decided that, under the State constitution women cannot hold the office of justice of the peace or any other office mentioned in the constitution, but that the legislature may authorize women to hold any office created by that body. The opinion is drawn by Chief Justice Appleton, and is concurred in by Justices Cutting, Danforth, Peters and Virgin. Justices Walton and Barrows dissent, and unite in the opinion that the legislature may authorize women to hold office whether mentioned in the constitution or not, but they indicate no opinion on the point as to whether such legislative sanction is necessary. Justice Dickinson, in a separate opinion, concurs with the minority of the court so far as they go, and holds that women may fill any office the same as men may, without legislative authority.

People in Maine are remonstrating against the wanton destruction of moose, which threatens its extermination, particularly from the inroads of Canadian Indians, who cross the boundary in seasons of deep snow. The State legislature is to be petitioned to prevent the killing of moose for five years, and direct the seizure of the hides at all seasons, wherever found.

Prohibocrats—those who talk virtuously for temperance, but vote virtually against it.

In the libel suit brought by Mr. Ross, father of the missing boy Charley, against the Reading (Pa.) Eagle, a decision was reached, the jury bringing in a verdict of guilty and the court sentencing the proprietors of the paper to pay a fine of $1,000. Their plea was ignorance of the libellous article, but the court, in pronouncing judgement, said: "If, because it cannot be proved that an editor or publisher did actually write an article that is libellous, he is to go scot free, this is to establish a very dangerous principle. What man does by another he does by himself, and if he were permitted to fold his hands and say, 'I did not do it, but my agent did,' no family in the community would be safe."

Though we do not always coincide with the financial views of our Washington correspondent, there is much to be thought of in his manner of presenting them, and we think his plain argumentative statements worthy of consideration. The letters attract general attention, coming from a gentleman who sees the inside workings of Washington life, and faithfully portrays them.

John McCabe, of Russell, Mass., clubbed Owen Sullivan in a drunken row, with a loaded gun, which was discharged and transferred John to another "plane" of existence. Rather poetic retribution.

Wellfleet, Mass., has decreased in population and increased in wealth, its vessel owners doing a profitable coasting business.

Bangor parties and others in that section want the Pullman train from Boston put back on the old time of leaving, instead of midnight, as it has been run for the past few weeks. There are rumors that a change is to be made.

There was an incendiary fire, Saturday night, in the counting room and store of Thurston Coleman, lumber merchant, on Mercantile wharf, Newburyport. Loss $3500; fully insured. Two firemen were injured; one had an engine run over his foot, and the other fell from the building, twenty feet, breaking two ribs and badly cutting his head.

Kinsella, of the Brooklyn Union, was at Lake George last summer living with Mrs. Fields, wife of the superintendent of the Brooklyn public schools. Mr. Fields has sued for a divorce.

The Republic newspaper of New York has failed and suspended publication. It sunk $150,000.

Two robbers killed near New York Monday morning, while engaged in an attempt at robbery, have been identified by a detective as the kidnappers of Charlie Ross, and one of them previous to his death confessed that such was the fact, but was not able to tell where the boy was at the time.

The cotton product of 1874 is estimated at over three and a half million bales.

Five children of John Dotterick, living near Preakness, New Jersey, Monday, ventured upon the thin ice of a small pond there with a sled. The ice gave way under their weight in the centre of the pond, and they were all drowned in the sight of their mother, who was watching their play from their home.

A Kansas City Times reporter, writing up the Kansas Pacific train robbery, remarks with hideous glee: Ladies hurriedly took their jewels from their ears, necks and hands, and without blushing a particle lifted their dainty skirts and shoved their valuables down under the clasp of garters which hold the snowy hose about finely fashioned limbs.

The Rochester (N. Y.) Dem. Chron. wants Grant to take Vicksburg again.

A disastrous fire occurred Monday evening on Plympton street, Boston, in the manufacturing establishments of Galvin & Currie and Cressy & Noyes, involving a loss of nearly $250,000. Another destructive fire was discovered early Tuesday morning in Hittinger's ice-house on Water street, Charlestown, causing a loss of $25,000.

William J. Beall, of Washington, D. C., was drowned in a bath tub, last week, having been taken with an epileptic fit.

Cincinnati Times says: Every one is calling Talmage an ass. This is very well for Talmage, but how do you suppose the ass would like it?

There is but one democratic paper in Rhode Island.

The House of Representatives has passed a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the Vicksburg massacre.

State News.

Kingston Academy is at present under the care of Mr. Eli S. Sanderson. The number of students for the winter term is larger than of late.

John Emery, freight conductor on the Northern Railroad, had his saloon car burnt last Friday night, at Canaan, caused by a kerosene lamp bursting. The freight had stopped at Canaan, and he was doing some work there when the lamp burst. He was gone but eight minutes from the saloon, and when he got back the fire had burned through the top. He uncoupled it from the rest of the train, and in a few minutes a pair of wheels was all that he had left. Mr. Emery lost all he had in the car, including ome $25 worth of clothing.

A load of wood driven by Daniel N. Hoyt of Hampstead tipped over, and his son, aged five, who was riding on top, was found at the bottom, but luckily not much hurt.

The Manchester music hall, used as a billiard room for several years, is to be made into an opera house of modern style, and has been leased for a term of yeaars.

The old bobbin mill at Alton, which has been closed the past year, has recently started up.

An investigation into the alleged case of severe discipline in one of the Dover schools has resulted in the complete exoneration of the teacher, Miss Piper, from blame.

Freeman E. Stevens of Milton, had two fingers of his right hand taken off at Townsend's mill, Tuesday, by being caught in the shearing machine.

A "mysterious box" has been found in Orford, under the floor of the house of Mr. Howland, with boxes and buttons in it. Thomas Allen and wife lived there formerly. She was talked about, by different persons, among them a peddler named Fitch, against whom she was heard to swear vengeance. Some days after he was seen to enter the house, and never came out again. Allen and his wife moved to Bloomfield, in Essex County, Vt., where they took a man's farm and property, agreeing to support him, his wife and his sister, for it through life. All three died so suddenly that suspicion was aroused, their bodies exhumed, stomachs sent to Boston, examined, and poison found in them. Mrs. Allen was tried for murder, but the evidence failed to convict her. Mr. Davis, her father, said it cost him $1600 to have her character established. Many think the "mysterious box" contained all that remains of poor Fitch, the peddler.

Mr. Artemus Longley of Nashua, has received by mail from some of his friends at Walaka, Florida, a monster bean pod, grown in that place. It is about a foot in length, two inches wide, about three-fourths of an inch thick, and weighs nearly half a pound.

A house belonging to Cephas Dutton, a mile from Lancaster, was burned on Friday. Loss about $600; no insurance.

Parker Fletcher of South Acworth has trapped ten foxes so far this season.

Elijah Sanders, of Chichester, set out a cabbage stump, last spring, from which grew during the season, five large well-formed heads, either of them at least two feet in circumference.

Mr. B. F. Dame, for four years Principal of the Lincoln Grammar School at Manchester, has resigned. He is to enter the insurance business with M. V. B. Edgerly of Manchester.

Nine inches of snow on the ground at Concord.

Chief of Police Scott of Peterboro' arrested James B. Tubbs on Saturday evening last for setting fire to French's Hall building on Thursday evening. Every circumstance was against him, and finally, after denying it stoutly for a long time, he confessed. He had effected an insurance of $800 on his stock and tools, which was greatly in excess of their value, and afterward carefully removed them. The fire was chiefly confined to his room, and, upon entering, the entire absence of his effects caused suspicion to fall upon him at once.

Charlie Ross.

A story comes from Chester, Illinois, concerning the finding of a boy who gives such strong evidence of being Charlie Brewster Ross, the child stolen away from his parents in Germantown, Penn., July 1, 1874, that the belief that the lost boy has been found is, unless the facts are misstated, almost irresistible. The story is told in a despatch from Chester, of the fourth instant, which says that the resemblance of the lost boy and the one there is almost identical, especially taking into consideration the great changes in the boy's appearance which his manner of life since his abduction, and the attempts to disguise him, must have made on a child of refined and cultivated parents, brought up with the kindest care and in the midst of every comfort. He has been taken from the ruffian who carried him to Chester, whom he dislikes, and placed in kind hands for protection and care; and, after becoming pacified and somewhat used to the new order of things, a number of questions were asked him concerning his remembrance of his former life, the answers to which all apply to the case of Charlie Ross, though his memory of many details which even one so young as he might be supposed to remember, is quite imperfect.

The man with whom he was found says his name is Thomas Scott, and that the boy's name is Levi Scott. But the boy persists that his name is not Levi Scott, but Charlie Brewster, and sometimes he will say the full name, Charlie Brewster Ross. In the circular advertisement is given the following test: "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so," and upon being asked if he could say the little verse his mother taught him when at home, he repeated it all but two words, thus: "Jesus, ——, this I know, for the Bible tells me so." Little Charlie's body and limbs are straight and well formed; he has a round, full face, small chin, with noticeable dimple; regular and pretty dimpled hands; small, well-formed neck, full forehead; bright, dark brown eyes, with considerable fulness over them; clear, white skin, healthy complexion; hair of a silky texture, and would be flaxen had it not been colored; hair darker at the roots, slight cowlick on left side where parted; very light eyebrows, and vaccination mark on left arm. He talked a good deal about his mamma's house, how nice it was at home, the carpets on the floor, piano, etc.; and upon seeing an opera-glass, said his ma had one—a nicer one than that.

Letter From Dartmouth.

HANOVER, Dec. 11.

At a college meeting, Samuel B. Wiggin, of the class of '75, and John Foster, of the class of '76, were chosen delegates to represent Dartmouth at the convention of the Boating Association, to be held at Hartford on Dec. 17th. The delegates were instructed to vote for Saratoga as the place for the next regatta and to vote against the admission of any other college into the Association, with the exception of Amherst. At the same meeting it was voted not to send any delegates to the inter-collegiate literary contest on account of want of time for preparation. After the meeting, the Juniors and Freshmen in their eagerness to get out, there being a great jam at the door, accidentally broke down the chapel door and the woodwork about it for some distance.

Of those out teaching, the Seniors number 11, the Juniors 22, the Sophomores 22 and the Freshmen 15. Among other requisites for candidates for school teachers this winter is that of good features. One of the students who is out teaching was actually engaged by his photograph being sent to the superintendent of the school committee, who is unwilling to engage any one unless of good features.

The Glee Club have returned, having given concerts at Concord, Manchester, Nashua, Lowell and Lawrence. They were successful in their trip, having paid their expenses and have now a little surplus in the treasury.

At the supper of the Lowell Association of the Dartmouth Alumni, at Lowell, November 30th, the amount of $500 was pledged for the purpose of heating the Library room and Reed Hall with steam. The Connecticut river being frozen over the students in the afternoon go there to skate; in the evenings large bonfires light up the river and all is gaiety and merriment. A man has been hired to keep the ice free from snow during the winter.

Marvelous Beyond Precedent

Is the effect of SOZODONT upon the whole economy of the Mouth, keeping the gums rosy and healthy, the teeth in perfect order, giving to the breath a balmy fragrance.

Why Is It Popular?

Ask any fair-minded physician, or any family in which it has been used, ask the whole Drug trade, why HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR is so popular. The answer will be that the cures of inveterate coughs, which it is everywhere effecting, are the topics of conversation in every city, town and village in the United States. Its enormous and constantly increasing sales are based upon the grand fact, notorious throughout the whole country, that it controls and masters every disease leading to consumption.

A Lucky Journeyman.

A journeyman carriage-maker in April last purchased a ticket to the Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., and when the distribution took place he received a sufficient amount of money to buy a lot, and build thereon a neat and comfortable residence, which will be a home for himself and family during their lives. The second and last Gift Concert of this Association will be given on Tuesday, December 29th, and we would advise all who desire to obtain one or more of the large prizes which will be given to the lucky ticket-holders to send without delay for tickets. The Concert will not be postponed; it will be conducted by gentlemen of high character, and Masons and others can place implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of all connected with the management of the drawing. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

An Absolute Safeguard.

Invalids, broken down in health and spirits by chronic dyspepsia, or suffering from the terrible exhaustion which follows the attacks of acute disease, the testimony of thousands who have been raised as by a miracle from a similar state of prostration by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is a sure guarantee that by the same means you too may be strengthened and restored. But to those who stand in peril of epidemics, to all who, by reason of exposure, privations and uncongenial climate or unhealthy pursuits, may at any moment be stricken down, this paragraph is most particularly and emphatically addressed. You who are thus situated are proffered an absolute safeguard against the danger that menaces you. Tone and regulate the system with this harmless medicinal stimulant and alterative, and you will be forearmed against the maladies whose seeds float around you in the air unseen.

Laconics.

A lady who values her plants very highly lost some of them by the severe cold on Monday night. When retiring she left them in a warm kitchen, a chair being near the door. The cat of the household desiring to go up stairs during the night, mounted the chair, lifted the latch, opened the door and passed out into the cold entry, regardless of consequences. Nearly all the plants were nipped, including some twenty favorites.

How can there be a proper distribution of the currency in a country like this with such snow-storms?

That convenient little book of statistics and general information, the New Hampshire Register for 1875, is issued by the Claremont Manufacturing Company. It has a business directory and the official votes of 1873 and 1874. For sale at the book stores.

Mr. James Sanborn, the well known boot and shoe maker, whose "fits" deprive corns of their power for mischief, is making a neat little pattern in slippers, just the thing for a Christmas present to your pa or your ma, or to somebody else's sister.

Miss DeMontford, the mesmerist who was so successful in this city, influenced a Boston young man named Edgar H. Allen so that his eyes close every day against his will, although she has left Boston. In consequence he cannot open his eyes at some times for hours.

If you feel chilled to the bone, uncomfortable and blue, try Marvin's Deodorized Cod-liver Oil. It restores the circulation and renders futile the worst attempts of Jack Frost.

The well-known agent of the aqueduct, true to his instincts, found water below a thin crust of ice on the South mill pond which he was endeavoring to cross on Tuesday. The atmosphere made the Ayers frosty all over before reaching land.

Mrs. G. C. Howard, famous in the character of "Topsy," will play "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Temple on Monday evening next, assisted by a select company.

Mr. Frank H. Betton of Pomeroy, Kansas, formerly of this city, and brother of Major M. T. Betton, was elected in October last, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Kansas. The order in that State now numbers about 120 lodges with a membership of 6,000.

Tuesday was the first day of the season when the mercury went down to zero. At seven o'clock A. M. it was five degrees below, and it remained at zero throughout the day.

Don't You Believe It,

Mr. CHRONICLE nor let any other republican believe, that Frank Jones or any other man of the hunker persuasion, can "carry Rockingham County" or the First Congressional District against any republican nominee whom the people may select. I don't believe in personal self-nominations;—neither do I in the severe condemnation of any candidate, but if Mr. Jones has any especial strength in this section, except his money, liquor and railroad influence, I fail to see it; and they ought to weaken as much as they aid him. Especially does it seem to me that one who among other public injuries done us as a community, has saddled upon the city a debt of $300,000, and done more than any other man to raise the rents of tradesmen, ought to expect any following from republicans, to the desertion of any candidate whomsoever of their own, but rather to lose the support of thoughtful and well-meaning democrats if any there may be. No, sir; let us select our strongest and best candidates all round; but don't go into the fight with any expectation or much fear of defeat. Rather let us up and at the hunkers, regardless of whom they select or have thrust upon them as leaders. S. O. R.

[We made the statement that Mr. Jones could carry the county in case Congressman Small should be renominated, of which which there seems little chance. We have no doubt, however, that in such a contingency, Mr. Jones would go out of this city 500 votes ahead, which would give him the county by 200 if the other towns should vote as they did last year. Should Messrs. Small and Jones be the nominees, we will wager a few greenbacks for charitable purposes, on our original prediction with "S. O. R." if he will call around a day before election.—Ed. Chron.]

There is no evening star now. Venus finished as such at its transit on the 6th. It will soon be bright as morning star. Two others are morning stars; Jupiter always resplendent is up not far from three o'clock. It is in the constellation Virgo. It will pass before long into Silva. Its light is golden, although at that a little palish. Red, fiery Mars is also in Virgo and not far from Jupiter; and Spica, the brightest star in Virgo, unites to make up a picture on the celestial canvass of great beauty and grandeur. Admission to the show free, save the condition of leaving the bed in season.

The Mississippi War.

[Cinn. Times.]

Let us see, what this Vicksburg trouble is. Warren County, in which Vicksburg is situated, has a population (that is, had at the last count), of about 9,000 whites and 20,000 blacks. The preponderance of the latter is even greater on a vote than in the whole. In the election of 1872 there were 4,700 republican votes polled, to 1,500 democratic. In 1869 the vote stood respectively 4 to 1.

These republican voters, being in a majority of four to one, had the audacity to think themselves entitled to a republican Sheriff, and as most of them were colored, they selected, and elected, to that office a negro by the name of Crosby. This officer appears to have attended to his business quietly and well, his only offence consisting in the possession of too dark a color.

In the last days of November, the Grand Jury of the County, composed of white democrats, met, and proceeded to draft indictments against several officers, all of whom, as Governor Ames very pertinently points out in his proclamation, were colored men. The indictments expressly state that the evidence upon which they were based was not before the jury, but consisted of certain records which had "been stolen" from their office. They were directed against the Chancery Court Clerk, his predecessor, and the late Circuit Court Clerk. They did not include the Sheriff though he was charged with conniving in the larceny of the records supposed to have been stolen, and with performing the duties of his office without a bond.

A mass meeting of citizens, by which is meant white democrats, was called, and instead of following up these indictments, based upon no tangible evidence, in due form of law, they determined to enforce the resignation of the officers indicted, and of the Sheriff. The indicted officers disappeared; the Sheriff stood to his post; the mob, in the midst of "great excitement," got hold of him, and he "resigned," as any man, with a proper respect for his life, and a prejudice against being lynched, would have been likely to do. Afterward, escaping from their clutches, he visited the Governor, at Jackson, and came back with instructions to demand his office, and doubtless with the assurance that he would be supported by the proper authorities. He made the demand, was repelled with force, and afterward seized and imprisoned. To his rescue came a large body of negro militia, under arms, and doubtless under orders of the legal authorities. They were beaten back with much slaughter; and the white democrats still hold the city and the Sheriff. Gov. Ames therefore issued the proclamation, which we published by special telegraph, yesterday, commanding the rioters of Vicksburg to disperse; to which the white democratic Mayor, of Vicksburg, responds with the refreshingly impudent announcement, that the Governor's proclamation was uncalled for, and that there is no rioting, or breach of laws, going on in that city—and all this with the Sheriff still a prisoner, and the corpses of seventy negroes lying around.

This is the brief story of the trouble, and it needs still briefer comment. The white gentlemen of Warren county claim the title of "citizens," and deny it to the negroes. They have no respect for the results of an election carried by four to one majority, because the majority and the successful candidates were negroes. They get up indictments which admit, in their own verbiage, that they are based upon no attainable evidence; and they execute those indictments by mob force, intimidating the officers into resigning, and imprisoning them. They murder seventy of a posse called to support the legal authorities, and inform the Governor that they are amply able to attend to their own affairs, and want no interference from him.

—Here is a fine chance for a nice young man. It appears in an Iowa paper, and is vouched for as a genuine letter to a local lawyer: "My Dear Mr.——; This is to certify that I am a widow with thirteen children born, have had three husbands, each of which died in peace in his own way. I have a small farm, and would take another husband yet, if I could find a young one; no old, bald-headed sardine need apply; he will not be taken in. Ten dollars will be given to you to produce the man."

—The gorrilla at the Cincinnati Exposition writes to the Small Talk: "I hear that a good many people in this town are making disparaging remarks about me because I haven't got on any clothes. This is the first time I have ever met with such treatment, and to a person of my frail, sensitive peculiarities, it crushes like a pile-driver. I even wish that I were dead. If you publish this, send me four copies of the papers containing it. WM. H. GORRILLA."

—One of the Paris theatres proposes to adopt the rule of closing the doors as soon as the curtain rises and keeping them rigorously closed while the curtain is up, so that late comers may not interfere with the comfort of all who are seated betimes.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will remain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy boisters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "an ounce in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the preasing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chrome, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp

The New York Times.
A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.
DEVOTED TO REFORM IN MUNICIPAL, STATE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT.
ESTABLISHED 1851.
POSTAGE FREE FOR 1875.
As a family paper, THE TIMES has always borne a very high reputation throughout the United States. It is free from all objectionable advertisements and reports, and may be safely admitted to every domestic circle. The disgraceful announcements of quacks and medical pretenders, which pollute so many newspapers of the day, are not admitted into the columns of THE TIMES on any terms.
As a political journal, THE TIMES will be devoted, as in the past, to a discriminating support of the Republican Party, while it reserves the right of expressing independent opinions upon the measures or policy of any administration, or upon the course of any leaders. It belongs to no faction or clique within a party, and has never entered into any relations which were likely to imperil its perfect freedom. Its course is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most efficiently served.
Started in September, 1851, THE TIMES has ever since been recognized as among the most successful, popular, and influential newspapers in the country. Two of its original proprietors still direct its policy, and, with greatly increased resources and experience, will spare no pains to extend and strengthen its claims upon the confidence and support of that public which it has endeavored faithfully to serve for upward of three and twenty years.
Its editorial columns will be conducted in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, free alike from sectarian and political fallacy, or undue partisan bias. It will represent the great body of the people, rather than any clique. On all subjects it will maintain an attitude of perfect independence. Its correspondence will be full and timely, and directed with special reference to the publication of the truth on all questions, and from all parts. Its reports will be prepared with the utmost care. The literary department will be in thoroughly capable hands, and will present a full review of the literature, the fine arts, the music, and the drama of the day. The selected and educational reports and articles are specially prepared by some of the ablest men in the country.
The Sunday edition of THE TIMES includes, in addition to all the news, selected and original miscellaneous matter of the most varied and accurate character. Special arrangements have been made to impart new attractions to this feature of the paper. Among the contributors of original stories or articles to this paper are Bret Harte, J. W. De Forest, Thomas Hardy, Dutton Cook, William Black, negotiations are being carried out with many others distinguished in literature.

colleges,
And all agog to cram our nobs with "isms" and with "ologies."

Philosophy, as you're aware, material and mental, sir,
At one extreme is "Positive," at t'other "Transcendental," sir.
And each of us who in these drys would speculate "en rapport,"
If he can't run the rig with Compte, must take the tip from Hegel.

The fundamental problem which, debate w tor ages, sir,
Is still attacked and still unsolved by all our modern sages, sir,
Is, if an effort I may make a simple form to throw it in,
Just what we know, and why we know, and what's the way we know it in.

We can't assume (as Compte affirms) a first or final cause, sir,
Phenomena are all we know, their order and their laws, sir;
While Hegel's modest formula a single line to sum is,
Is "nothing in and nothing's not, but everything's becomin'."

"Development" is all the go, of course, with Herbert Spencer,
Who cares a little more than Comte about the
"why," and "whence," sir.
Appearances, he seems to think, do not exhaust totality,
But indicate that underneath there's some "unknown reality."

And Darwin, too, who leads the throng "in vulgus nocos spargere,"
Maintains humanity is nought except a big monkeerie,
The progeny of tailless apes, sharp-eared but puggy-nosed, sir,
Who nightly climbed their "family trees," and on the top reposed, sir.

There's Carlyle on the other hand, whose first and last concern it is To preach up the "immensities" and muse on the "eternities;"
But if one credit what one hears, the gist of all his bring in, sir,
That "Extremes," rightly understood, is transcendental "Haggis," sir.

Imaginative sparks, you know, electric currents kindle, sir,
On a Lime-light or at Belfast, within the brain of Tyndall, sir;
His late address, some people hold, is flowery, vague and vapory,
And represents the "classic nude" when stripped of all its "Draper"y.

Professor Huxley has essayed to bridge across the chasm, sir,
Twixt matter dead and matter quick by means of "protoplasm," [illegible]
Since [illegible] tions, sir,
Are clearly angles, lines, and squares, cubes, circles and equations, sir.

George Henry Lewes, I'm informed, had "gone off quite hysterical,"
About their feeble, foolish thing the "theory Mechanical;"
And only found relief, 'tis said, from nervous throes and spasms, sir,
By banging straight at Huxley's head a brace of brain-new "phasms," sir.

Such are the philosophic views I've ventured now to verify,
And, if I may invent the term, in some degree to "versify."
Among them all, I'm bold to say, fair room for choice you'll find, sir,
And if you don't, why then you won't, and I for one shan't mind, sir.

Essays in Natural History.

BY LITTLE JOHNNY.

THE RINOCEROS.

Bet you don't kno wot a lamy is, cos it is from South America where nobody goes, but maybe there is one in Zoo, I don't kno. It is some like a sheep and some like a camel, and carries things, and that is all I know about a lamy, which issent lame, any how, but is jes call that, but wen it comes to rinocerosses I can tell you a lot about them feilers.

Wen my uncle Ned tole me one day wy didient I rite about the unicorn, I said I wude, and I set down and wrote about its one horn, and how if was foun in Africa and how it fot lions, and all about it, but wen I come to its tail I said did it have a tossel, Uncle Ned he said Johnny, wen you've got to the end wy don't you stop? Then he tole me not to bother him, but look in books, and wen I had look ol them some books about animels I cuddent fine any unicorn, so he said it was only a rinoceros, and you never see such a lewrious boy as I was! I got a picter of a unicorn and a picter of a rinoceros and shode 'em, and said did he think I was a fool. Uncle ned he lookt at the two picters careful, and after a while he had to confes they wasent the same. But he said Johnny, if you was a ratist with a lite and graceful fancy and sech a thing as this rinoceros was sitting to you for his picter wuddent you be tempted to flatter him jes the least bit in the worl by a few delicate touches here and there. I said yes, but I dont kno wot he ment.

The rinoceros fites with elephance wich it lifs on its horn and makes 'em sick. A book wich I have says wen one has a ephalent on its nose the elphalents fat gits in the rinocerosses eyes and puts 'em out, but if I had a trunk and two big tuskees you wouldent catch me fitin with fat, and a furnishing it myself.

In Africa the niggers some times set their houses on posts to keep the snaiks out, and one day a nigger wich had his house that way was settin on the flore a playin cards with a other nigger, and a rinoceros wich had gon under the house stuck his horn thru the flore between the two niggers, and wen it come up one nigger he said wote that? But the other wich had jes plade a card was a looking in his hand and diddent see the horn, so he said you kno wel enuf wot it is, have you got anything to take it with, thats the question. Then the other nigger said no he diddent think he had, les he plade a trump—he sposed wen a horn was plade he ot to trumpit. But he diddent, cos the house was upset fore he cude make up his mine.

THE CROCKY DILE.

Ally gaters is jus the same thing only livin under a other form of guverment, for the diles is mostly Egip 'uns, but the gaters like America the best, were there aint any Queen, which ol Americans thinks sets on a throne and cuts fokeses head of, and these animels bleeves they has got nice heads like Shake's pear. But he diddent have notches in his back like a saw. These notches is wy the diles and gaters is call sawrians. Some crocky diles is as long as this room and one wich was in Injy was seen by my Uncle Ned a comin right towards him, and he said it was so long it reminded him of the road leadin to the fort were the sojers was.

A other time wen uncle Ned was in a swomp there was a big dile wich come to him as tame as a ole cow. I ast him did he tri to catch it for the Zoo, and he said it was jest the other way, and when I said wy diddent he catch it, he said he new he ot, but the fact was he see it was goin his way, and he diddent bleeve in compulsin fokes which wos a goin rite in the long run.

Crocky diles has got skins which is so thick that nothing can't hurt 'em. Once they was a dog see one a lyin' down, and the dog run up and bit real hard, and got away as quick as it cude, about a mile, and wen it lookt back the dile haddent mooved Then the dog it went back and took a other bite, and the dile roled over on its other side and yond and shet its eye like it said I was up so late last nite, I mus tri to git some sleeps or I shant be fit for work. Then the dog, seein it diddent mine it, went to its tale and lay down, too, to chew the pint of the diles tale. Wen it had chude an hour the dile it begun to snore, and then the dog, wich had almose wore itself out a chuin, got up and shook its head very sad like sayin poor feller, it must be awfle to be tuf, but I ain't got no time to stop, let him go to the ospital.

Sech big mouths nobody ever seed! A man wich wanted to cude sit down in a crocky diles mouth and read the Standard.

They was a crocky dile a swimmin up a creek, and it saw a horse more than a mile away on a hil, and it new it cuddent have the horse, but it cuddent help throin open its mouth every time it see the horse, and when ever it opened its mouth the water ol run in it, and there wassent any to swim in, so it stuck fas on the bottom. At las it got out on the bank and workt, and said it never see sech times as the werl was come to wen a gentlem cuddent take a quiet swim without being annoed by upstart horses, which ot to kno their place and keep it. I spose he was a conservatif dile, that's wot I think.

A Mrs. Doherty of Oldtown, Me., who was one of the fishing party that left that place on the nineteenth of last July, says that Nehemiah Brown, who was drowned at that time, was pushed overboard by George Corson, and while attempting to climb into the boat, was struck a terrible blow on the head with an axe in the hands of Corson, which killed him instantly. Mrs. Doherty adds that she would have informed at the time, but was prevented by the murderer, who told her he would cut her throat if she mentioned it.

This does not include claims of insurance companies, or claims for war premiums paid, but only for property losses and personal damages beyond the amount of insurance.

The Boston correspondent of the New York Tribune reviews at length the Senatorial situation in Massachusetts and wisely comes to the conclusion that as yet all is in the dark. He thinks that with an open field in the legislature—that is, without a republican caucus—the prospect of a protracted canvass is as great as it was last spring.

"Nigger Day."

[New York Times' Huntsville, Ala., Letter.]

The scene which is presented to a stranger visiting Huntsville on "nigger day" is, indeed, a novel and interesting one. The principal business houses of the city are situated upon a square which surrounds the Court-house, and at an early hour in the morning this is filled with colored people of all classes and shades. Last Saturday there were fully two thousand of them in the streets at one time. At noon the throng was greatest, and up to that time fresh wagon loads of men, women and children were continually arriving. They came not only in wagons, but on horses and mules, and on foot. Their dress and general appearance was very dissimilar. I saw one or two fine, healthy-looking men who were warmly clad in well-made suits of dark gray cloth, but by far the greater number were in rags. Some were dressed in queer-looking garments made of pieces of old army blankets, overcoats, which were liberally supplied with patches of other material. Most of the men were without shoes, and some of them had no coverings for their heads save the thick crop of wool, which was often pleated and twisted into fantastic braids and ends. The women, unlike their husbands and other male relations, were dressed in finery of every conceivable fashion. All of them were decked out in many-colored, but dirty ribbons. They wore pinchbeck jewelry in large quantities. A few of the young girls displayed some little taste in the arrangement of their dress; and one or two of them wore expensive clothes. These, however were "city niggers," and found but little favor in the eyes of the country girls. As the farmers arrived they hitched their tumble-down wagons and bony mules to the railing which surrounds the Court-house, and then proceeded to dispose of the cotton and other products which they had brought to town. While this was being done many amusing incidents occurred. I noted the following, as it illustrates some of the evils of the credit system, and the difficulty which is sometimes experienced in identifying negroes. A tall, good-looking colored man came into the city with a load of corn and two bales of cotton. After disposing of his corn he attempted to sell the cotton, but found some difficulty in securing a buyer. At last he was offered eleven cents a pound for it, and although this was a small price he was about to accept it, when a little Jew came running up to him and said, "Wait, wait! What are you offered for those two bales?" "Leven cents a pound, sah," replied the negro, touching his hat. "I'll give you thirteen cents," said the other. The black man, after speaking a few words to a white gentleman who appeared to be his friend, accepted this, and the three went into the warehouse of the Jew. Here the cotton was weighed, and after a bill had been made out the Jew, turning to the black man, said with a bland and assuring smile: "Now I will pay you cash for this at the rate of thirteen cents a pound, but first I will deduct the forty-seven dollars which you owe me for supplies given you on credit."

"Supplies on credit!" exclaimed the negro, who was evidently greatly astonished. "I ain't had no supplies on credit, and I doesn't owe you noffin'." "Isn't your name Jake Allen?" asked the merchant, astonished in his turn. "No," said the negro; "my name am Tom Wethers, an' I can prove it by this gentleman dat I ain't had noffin' on credit from you nor no other person." The white person who was thus appealed to testified to the truth of this, and the Jew was obliged to pay for the cotton, without making any deduction. Subsequently he informed me that he had mistaken the negro Wethers for a man who owed him money for supplies, and that he had offered him two cents more than his cotton was worth in order to get control of it and pay himself; "but, lor," said he, in conclusion, "niggers are so much alike that you never can tell one from another." Another incident which goes to show how ignorant the negroes are of business and business calculations, came under my notice. Seeing a large crowd that had collected in one corner of the square, I went over and found that two negroes were disputing about the division of their crop. One of them had leased a small farm and hired two men to help him work it. As I came up he was saying in an excited voice, "Didn't I 'gree to give you a fourth?" "Yes, to be sure," was the reply; "but now you's done gone promised to give Bill a fifth, and if you's agone to give him dat, I wants de same." The two disputed over this knotty question for upward of half an hour, and, strange as it may seem, it was impossible to convince the laborer that a fourth was more than a fifth. He left the square muttering about the injustice of giving Bill "one whole share" more than him.

Why Is It Popular?

Ask any fair-minded physician, or any family in which it has been used, ask the whole Drug trade, why HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR is so popular. The answer will be that the cures of inveterate coughs, which it is everywhere effecting, are the topics of conversation in every city, town and village in the United States. Its enormous and constantly increasing sales are based upon the grand fact, notorious throughout the whole country, that it controls and masters every disease leading to consumption.

A Lucky Journeyman.

A journeyman carriage-maker in April last purchased a ticket to the Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., and when the distribution took place he received a sufficient amount of money to buy a lot, and build thereon a neat and comfortable residence, which will be a home for himself and family during their lives. The second and last Gift Concert of this Association will be given on Tuesday, December 29th, and we would advise all who desire to obtain one or more of the large prizes which will be given to the lucky ticket-holders to send without delay for tickets. The Concert will not be postponed; it will be conducted by gentlemen of high character, and Masons and others can place implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of all connected with the management of the drawing. Send to Henry V. Moore, Secy, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

An Absolute Safeguard.

Invalids, broken down in health and spirits by chronic dyspepsia, or suffering from the terrible exhaustion which follows the attacks of acute disease, the testimony of thousands who have been raised as by a miracle from a similar state of prostration by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is a sure guarantee that by the same means you too may be strengthened and restored. But to those who stand in peril of epidemics, to all who, by reason of exposure, privations and uncongenial climate or unhealthy pursuits, may at any moment be stricken down, this paragraph is most particularly and emphatically addressed. You who are thus situated are proffered an absolute safeguard against the danger that menaces you. Tone and regulate the system with this harmless medicinal stimulant and alterative, and you will be forearmed against the maladies whose seeds float around you in the air unseen.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SUTTON" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer (ex-member of Congress, WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of in crest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridcing will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

Joseph P. Morse, Esq., will sell at auction to-day, at 12 o'clock, noon, on the premises, the lot of land, with building thereon, at the corner of Morning and Creek streets.

The schools of this city will close on Saturday next, for a two weeks' vacation, which is in accordance with the regulations. By the courtesy of Collector Shannon and Augustus Walden, Esq., secretary of the school committee, the teachers will receive their months' pay upon the closing of the schools, December 19th.

The Martha Washington Tea Party at the court-house will close to-night. The ancient table put up at auction on Tuesday evening was purchased by James P. Bartlett, Esq. The Portsmouth Dramatic Company brought out "Toodles" last night, with O. D. Bryant in the leading character. The raffles and auctions will be closed up to-night. At eight o'clock, the farce "Betsy Baker" will be brought out under the management of Mr. Robert B. Palfrey. Go early if you desire a chance to see.

The new hall in the Franklin House building will be dedicated by a grand ball as soon as finished, and Howard's Black Crook party will give the first "show."

Schooner Judith Ann got a broken shoe on Wood island and goes on the railway for repairs to stop a leak.

Our friend across the way has a good thing on one of the State Senators, who has been hunting for a needle, not exactly in a hay stack, but—you tell it, Charles.

Rev. A. C. Hardy has declined the temperance nomination for Congressman.

The Newsboys' Theatre.

This New York establishment, which is mainly run by newsboys, is thus alluded to by a correspondent:

Teddy Sullivan, the star gets $5 a week; the net receipts are then divided among the other performers. During the performance of that evening, I saw some quite as good dancing and character sketching as I have seen upon the average variety stage. The little imps are inimitable in some of their imitations of leading actors of the day. It made me feel sorry for Teddy Sullivan to see him come out, born dancer that he was, and be obliged to dance a fanciful Irish jig in boots two sizes too large for him. "What business you would do in a pair of neat clogs," I could not help thinking.

Recently the boys gave a matinee performance for all the leading actors in town. Clara Morris, Fanny Davenport, all of the bright and shining lights of the New York stage, both male and female, filled the little cellar with a gaily dressed crowd never seen within its walls before. How they enjoyed the performance of the boys was told by their repeated and most enthusiastic applause of nearly every hit on the bill. It was a grand day for the boys, and has proved a strong incentive for them to improve their theatre and their acting.

The Earl of Rochdale, when he was in this country last year, came to this theatre with a police detective, and while there was so much taken with the sweet ways of one bright-eyed, round-headed little boy that he had him brought to his rooms at the Brevoort House the next day. There he was still further pleased with the boy, in fact so well pleased was he with him that he took him under his charge and he is now being educated at the Earl's expense.

The Bar-Room Bell-Punch.

[New York Paper.]

There are nearly five hundred thousand liquor dealers in the United States, all complaining of the dishonesty of their clerks. "Why," said a dealer yesterday, "there was Hank Spriggs up in Poughkeepsie, who tended bar for Taylor in the largest hotel in town. Hank was a tall, dignified chap and every one thought that he was the soul of honor and good nature. But in less than two years he bought out Taylor and engaged him as bartender. Then there was Tom Hunt, up in Fourteenth street. Everybody remembers his fast horses in Harlem lane on Sunday, and how he ruined his employer and himself." Another liquor dealer told the reporter the story of a barkeeper who saved money enough in five years to build a little palace in the suburbs, and of another who saved enough money on a salary of $25 a week to take his large family to Europe for a summering.

Mr. Thomas W. Blackerby, of Blackerby & Nolan, Stanford, Ky., has invented a register, connected with the faucet of a liquor safe, which records by clock work the number of drinks that are drawn. Mr. John Matthews, the soda fountain manufacturer, has bought the patent, and will soon offer the liquor safe to the public. It is of gun metal, heavily silver plated, and stands, with the marble base, twenty-one inches high. Each side measures eight inches across. The safes that Mr. Matthews will first put on the market are to hold three gallons each. He will make larger safes if he has orders.

In rural neighborhoods and in the great number of middle and lower class saloons in cities the safe is to be put on the counter so that the thirsty customer may help himself. Lest he should be tempted to satisfy a too-burning thirst, a measuring chamber is made in the plug. It can be enlarged or contracted at the dealer's pleasure. The capacity is four ounces, but it can be reduced to four drops or less, and any quantity up to four ounces can be released by the faucet.

From the faucet in front an axle passes to the rear of the safe, and another faucet is made for the basin behind the bar. A catch there can fasten both, so that neither can be turned. On the back, secured by a Yale lock, is the clock work that registers the number of drinks drawn. Every turn of the faucet turns a wheel one notch. The notches are numbered up to sixty. When turned completely around this wheel turns another. Its cogs are also numbered, and six hundred drinks can be registered. The safe will cost $50.

By unlocking the safe and consulting the pointers on the wheel, the dealer learns how much money there should be in the drawer.

Mr. Koechling, Mr. Matthew's foreman, is making a safe that may be used by wholesale dealers. The faucet will measure either gallons, half gallons, quarts, or pints. The officers of the Wine and Spirit Traders' Society say that they need such an apparatus among wholesale dealers, as porters and others about their establishments think nothing of carrying home whiskey by the quart or even the gallon.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy belsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies in the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, etc.,

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,
—THE—
Art Journal of America,
ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of fine paper and engraving in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine its efforts merely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most eminent American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

POSTAL CONVENTION

BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE REPUBLIC OF FRANCE.

Concluded April 28, 1874.

The undersigned, John A. J. Creswell, Postmaster General of the United States of America, in virtue of the powers vested in him by law, and M. Amedee Bartholdi, officer of the national order of the Legion of Honor, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from France at Washington, &c., in the name of his government and by virtue of the powers which he has formerly presented to this effect, have agreed upon the following articles, viz:

ARTICLE I.

There shall be between the postal administration of France and the postal administration of the United States an exchange, in closed mails, of letters, samples of merchandise, photographs, and printed matter of all kinds, by the following means of communication and transportation, viz:

1st. By the French mail-packets.

2d. By the packets of the Hamburg line.

3d. By the way of England and the packets employed in transporting the mails between Great Britain and the United States.

The expenses arising from the transportation of the mails by any one of the above-mentioned routes shall be defrayed by the dispatching office; but it is understood that these expenses shall be defrayed in both directions by that of the two administrations which is able to secure the transportation upon the most favorable terms, the other administration to reimburse to it its share of the said expenses.

The United States postal administration, however, shall pay to the postal administration of France, for the conveyance of mails sent from the United States, however, shall pay to the postal administration to France by means of the French packets, the same sums as those which the said United States postal administration would pay, according to American legislation, for the maritime conveyance of the same mails by steamers of commerce. It is also understood that these rates are not to be lower than those which the postal administration of France shall have to pay for the conveyance by the Hamburg packets of the mails, which it shall send by these packets to the United States.

ARTICLE II.

Persons who desire to send ordinary, that is to say not registered, letters, either from France and Algeria, for the United States and its territories, or from the United States and its territories for France and Algeria, may, at their option, leave the postage on said letters to be paid by the addressees, or they can prepay said postage to destination.

ARTICLE III.

The charge to be levied in France upon letters originating in or addressed to the United States shall be 50 centimes per 10 grammes or fraction of 10 grammes, under the reservation for the French government of the power of hereafter applying the progression of 15 grammes. The charge to be levied in the United States upon letters originating in or addressed to France shall be 5 cents per 15 grammes or fraction of 15 grammes. Independently of the charges mentioned above, a fixed fee of 25 centimes, or 5 cents, as the case may be, shall be levied upon the unpaid letters.

In regard to the letters insufficiently paid by means of postage-stamps, they shall be treated as unpaid letters, saving deduction of the amount of the postage-stamps; but when the charge resulting from this deduction shall give a fraction of half decime French, or of a cent American, an entire half decime or cent, as the case may be, shall be levied for the fraction.

ARTICLE IV.

The public of the two countries may send letters, registered, from one country to the other.

The postage on such registered letters must always be prepaid to destination.

Every registered letter sent from France and Algeria to the United States and its territories shall bear, on departure, an additional fee to the postage applicable to a paid letter of the same weight, a fixed fee of 50 centimes; and, reciprocally, every registered letter sent from the United States and its territories to France and Algeria shall bear, on departure, in addition to the postage applicable to a paid letter of the same weight, a fixed fee of 10 cents.

ARTICLE V.

Samples of merchandise or of grains, photographs, engravings, and lithographs, newspapers, periodicals, sewed or bound books, pamphlets, sheets of music, catalogues, prospectuses, announcements, and various circulars, printed, engraved, lithographed, or autographed, which shall be sent either from France and Algeria to the United States and its territories, or from the United States and its territories to France and Algeria, must be prepaid, on both sides, to destination.

The rates of prepayment shall be fixed by the government of the country of origin.

ARTICLE VI.

Each administration shall retain the whole amount of the sums which it shall have collected by authority of Articles III, IV, and V, preceding.

It is formally agreed, between the two contracting parties, that such objects as are designated in the said article, which shall have been prepaid to destination, cannot, under any pretext of title whatever, be subjected, in the country of destination, to any postage or fee to the charge of the addressees.

ARTICLE VII.

The two administrations may reciprocally deliver in open mails ordinary letters and printed matter of all kinds coming from or addressed to the countries to which they serve respectively as intermediaries; and also registered letters coming from or addressed to such of those countries to which the payment of ordinary letters can be effected to destination.

This delivery shall take place according to the following arrangements.

The correspondence exchanged between France or Algeria and the countries to which the United States serve as intermediaries shall be made subject to the following settlements:

1st. To the payment by the French administration, to the American administration, when the postage shall be collected in France or Algeria, of a rate of postage equal to that which is paid by the inhabitants of the United States for the correspondence which they exchange with the same countries.

2d. To the payment by the American administration to the French administration, when the postage shall be collected in the countries to which the United States serve as intermediaries, of a rate of French postage of 4 cents per 10 grammes or fraction of 10 grammes for ordinary letters, of 8 cents per 10 grammes or fraction of 10 grammes for registered letters, and of 1 cent per 40 grammes or fraction of 40 grammes for printed matter of all kinds.

The correspondence exchanged between the countries to which France serves as intermediary and the countries to which the United States serve as intermediaries, shall be made subject to the following settlements:

1st. To the payment by the French administration to the American administration, if the postage on the correspondence is collected in the countries to which France serves as intermediary, of a rate of postage equal to the postage paid by the inhabitants of the United States for the correspondence which they exchange with the countries to which the United States serve as intermediaries.

2d. To the payment by the American administration to the French administration, if the postage on the correspondence is collected in the countries to which France serves as intermediary, of a rate of postage equal to that paid by the inhabitants of France and Algeria for the correspondence which they exchange with the countries to which France serves as intermediary.

The expenses of intermediate transportation between France and the United States of the correspondence to which apply the provisions of the present article shall be defrayed by that of the two postal administrations of France or of the United States by which, or on the side of which, the postage shall be collected.

ARTICLE VIII.

Samples of merchandise shall not be admitted to the benefits of a reduced rate, unless they are in themselves of no commercial value, unless they are placed under band, or in such a manner as to leave no doubt of their nature, and unless they bear on their envelope, in addition to the address, a mark of fabric or of the merchant, numbers of order, and price.

In order to benefit by a reduced rate, the photographs and printed matter mentioned in Articles V and VII should also be placed under band, and bear no writing, figure, or mark whatever, made by hand, except the address, the signature of the sender, or a date.

The samples of merchandise, photographs, and printed matter which do not fulfill the conditions mentioned above, or which have not been prepaid to the fixed limit, shall be considered as letters, and charged accordingly.

It is understood that the provisions contained in the present article, and in Articles V and VII preceding, do not impair in any manner the right of postal administrations of the two countries not to permit upon their respective territories, the transportation and distribution of photographs, lithographs, engravings, and printed matter, which are not in accordance with the laws, ordinances, or decrees which regulate the conditions of their publication and circulation both in France and in the United States.

ARTICLE IX.

The postal administrations of France and the United States shall not admit to destination in either of the two countries, or in the countries using their intermediary, any package or letter containing gold or silver money, jewels, or articles of intrinsic value, or any object subject to customs-duty.

Liquids and articles which may injure the correspondence, and which are prohibited in the country of destination shall not be admitted under any form to be dispatched through the post-office.

No package of more than 60 centimetres or 2 feet, American, in length and of more than 30 centimetres or 1 foot, American, in the other dimensions, can be sent from one of the two countries to the other through the post-office.

ARTICLE X.

The French government agrees to cause to be transported, in closed mails, either across France or by means of the French postal service, the correspondence which the postal administration of the United States may desire to exchange with other countries by the intermediary of the French post-office; and reciprocally the Government of the United States agrees to cause to be transported, in closed mails, either across the United States or by means of American maritime postal service, the correspondence which the postal administration of France may desire to exchange with other countries by the intermediary of the United States post-office.

The postal administration of France should pay to the postal administration of the United States, viz:

1st. The sum of 6 francs per kilogramme on letters, and 1 franc per kilogramme on samples and prints, for the transportation across the territory of the United States of the closed mails which shall be exchanged between France and other countries via San Francisco.

2d. The sum of 10 francs per kilogramme on letters, and 1 franc per kilogramme on samples and printed matter, for the transportation across the territory of the United States of the closed mails which shall be exchanged by any other route than that of San Francisco between France and its colonies, or all other places where it shall have postal establishments, or the countries with which it is at present bound by postal conventions.

Reciprocally the postal administration of the United States shall pay to the postal administration of France, viz:

1st. The sum of $1.20 per kilogramme on letters, and 20 cents per kilogramme on patterns and printed matter, for the transportation across French territory of the closed mails which shall be exchanged between the United States of America by the France-Belgian or Franco-German frontier.

2d. The sum of $2 per kilogramme on letters, and 20 cents per kilogramme on samples and prints, for the transportation across French territory of the closed mails which shall be exchanged by all other points of the French frontier than those contiguous to Germany or to Belgium between the United States and the countries with which the Government of the United States is at present bound by postal conventions.

When the closed mails coming from or addressed to France shall be transported between the French frontier and the American frontier by the packets of the Hamburg line, the postal administration of France shall pay to the postal administration of the United States, in addition to the American territorial transit-rates above mentioned, the sum of 10 francs per kilogramme on letters, and the sum of 50 centimes per kilogramme on samples and printed matter which may be contained in these mails.

Reciprocally, when the closed mails coming from or addressed to the United States shall be transported between the American frontier and the French frontier by the French mail-packets, the United States postal administration shall pay to the postal administration of France, in addition to the French territorial transit-rate above mentioned, the sum of $2 per kilogramme on letters, and 10 cents per kilogramme on samples and printed matter, which may be contained in these mails.

The maritime postage for which the two postal administrations of France and of the United States will have to reciprocally account upon the correspondence of all kinds transported in closed mails, by packets other than those navigating between France and the United States, will be the same as those applicable to correspondence of the same nature coming from or addressed to the countries which assure the maritime transportation of the said closed mails.

It is understood that the weight of the correspondence of all kinds which is found undeliverable, as also that of the letter-bills and other documents of account arising from the exchange of the correspondence transported in closed mails by either of the two administrations for the account of the other, shall not be included in the weight of the letters, samples, or printed matter, upon which should be levied the territorial and maritime transit rates required in virtue of the present article.

ARTICLE XI.

There shall be prepared every three months, by the postal administration of France, particular accounts, recapitulating the proceedings of the transmission of the correspondence between the respective exchange-offices.

These accounts, which shall have for basis and vouchers the acknowledgments of receipt for the mails during the quarterly period, shall be summed up in a general account, designed to present the definitive results of the transmission of the correspondence exchanged between the two administrations.

After having been reciprocally examined and approved, the general account above mentioned shall be paid, by the administration recognized as debtor towards the other, in the course of the second quarter following that to which the account refers.

The balances of the accounts shall be paid as follows, viz:

1st. In drafts upon Washington, and in American money, when the balance is in favor of the United States office.

2d. In drafts upon Paris, and in French money, when the balance is in favor of the French office.

In the establishment of the accounts, and in all matters relative to the execution of the convention, the dollar shall be considered the equivalent of 5 francs, 20 centimes.

ARTICLE XII.

Ordinary or registered letters, samples of merchandise, photographs, and printed matter, wrongly addressed or wrongly sent, shall be, without delay, reciprocally returned through the intermediary of the respective exchange offices for the weight and rate at which the sending office shall have delivered these objects in account to the other office.

Articles of the same nature, which may have been sent to addresses who have left for the country of origin of these letters, shall be respectively returned, charged with the postage which would have been paid by the addressees.

Ordinary letters and articles under band, which shall have originally been delivered to the postal administration of France, or to the postal administration of the United States, by other administrations, and which, in consequence of change of residence of the addressees, must be returned from one of the two countries to the other, shall be reciprocally delivered, charged with the postage required at the place of first destination.

ARTICLE XIII.

Ordinary or registered letters, samples of merchandise, photographs, and printed matter, exchanged in open mails between the two postal administrations of France and of the United States, and which shall be found undeliverable, for any cause whatsoever, must be reciprocally returned at the end of each month, and oftener if possible.

Such articles as shall have entered into the accounts shall be returned for the rate at which they shall have been originally entered on the account by the dispatching office.

Such as shall have been delivered prepaid to destination or to the frontier of the corresponding office shall be returned without charge or discount.

ARTICLE XIV.

The postal administration of France and the postal administration of the United States shall designate by common accord the offices through which the exchange of the respective correspondence should take place; they shall regulate the routes of the correspondence reciprocally transmitted, and the form of the accounts mentioned in the preceding article XI, and also every other measure of detail or order necessary to assure the execution of the stipulations of the present convention.

It is understood that the measures designated above may be modified, by the two administrations whenever, by common accord, they shall perceive such necessity.

ARTICLE XV.

The present convention shall have force and effect from the day agreed upon by the two parties, and shall remain obligatory from year to year, until one of the two parties shall have made known to the other, a year in advance, its intention to terminate the same.

During this last year the convention shall continue to have full and entire force, without prejudice to the liquidation and the balance of the accounts between the respective administrations after the expiration of said term.

ARTICLE XVI.

The present convention shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged as soon as possible.

In faith of which the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention and have affixed their seals thereto.

Done in duplicate and signed at Washington the twenty-eighth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

News and Notes.

A new civil rights bill has been introduced in the house by General Butler. The bill which passed the Senate last year is taken as a foundation for the new bill. The only alterations are the omission of the clauses relating to cemeteries and the insertion of a provision for separate schools for whites and blacks, with equipments and provisions for inspection in all respects equal, the appropriation of school funds to pro rata between the races. An alteration is also made in the matter of punishment for violation of the law. Instead of the penalties being cumulative, the new bill makes them either civil or criminal.

When yeas and nays were called on Beck's motion to investigate the affair of the Washington safe burglary. Dawes skulked aside and dodged the vote.

The brig Tropic, at Belfast, Me., from Turk's Island, had a remarkable experience on the passage. Capt. Baker reports that one morning, while on the edge of the gulf stream, the brig going about five miles an hour, she stopped with a shock, as though she had struck a rock. It was discovered that there was a whale under the bow, that made off furiously, lashing the water and spouting. The brig's cutwater and chain bobstay were carried away, and a piece of the whale's skin was left hanging on a projecting bolt.

"Well, Banks may sing with us, but he can't lead the choir," was the remark of a regular democratic M. C. from Texas, when Banks was men tioned for the Speakership.

Mayor Lewis of Lynn received exactly the same number of votes this year as he did last year.

The schooner Robert Pettis, for Providence from Virginia, was sunk in Narragansett Bay on Monday night, the 14th, and all hands, five in number, are supposed to have been drowned.

The ladies at the Biddeford temperance meetings relate their experience as drunkard's wives.

In the court of commissioners for the Alabama claims on the 16th, General Creswell and Judge R. M. Corwine argued the case of the whale ship Splendid, which was driven our of the Arctic Ocean by the Shenandoah, which caused the breaking up of the voyage and the loss of the outfit, refit and investment, amounting to many thousands of dollars.

Chas. McDonald, one of the crew of schooner Inolo C, was knocked overboard on the night of the 15th while lowering the foresail, and was drowned.

Among the humors of Worcester's election was the fact that in Ward II. a husband and his wife were the opposing candidates for the School Committee, Mr. Rogers having been nominated by the "citizens,' and Mrs. Rogers on the independent ticket. The wife proved a stronger candidate than the husband, and received twice as many votes, or thereabout. The Spy says: "We have not heard of any domestic quarrel arising from this political rivalry, and we trust there will be none, but the experiment seems to be heedlessly hazardous."

Washington is to be well provided with gambling saloons. Mr. John Chamberlin of New York and Long Branch has already purchased one of the finest houses in the city for his club house, and Mr. John Morrissey is to set up a branch of his Saratoga establishment on Capitol Hill. Are the coming events of the Forty-fourth Congress already casting their shadows before?

"Coffee" Wallace appears to be the democratic favorite for Senator from Pennsylvania. Democracy is digging deep to lay the foundations of its restored edifice. Senator Eaton in Connecticut, Speaker Wood in New York, Senator Voorhees in Indiana, and Senator Wallace in Pennsylvania, will serve admirably for the four corner-stones. Wallace is the man who carried Pennsylvania for the democracy at the October election of 1856. A vigorous use of the coffee-pot in imparting a color of antiquity to fraudulent naturalization papers was the means blessed to the end of securing the election of Buchanan. Such are the men to restore the Government to its "primitive purity."

Good Shooting.

The commendable action of the Brunts at Bay Ridge, N. Y., is thus graphically described in the Sun:

The following is an account by Mr. Albert Van Brunt, in his own words of the encounter with the burglars at Bay Ridge: "It was just about 2 o'clock when my father heard the burglar alarm which is arranged to ring in his room. It connects with all the doors and windows of Judge Van Brunt's house, which is about 90 feet north of this. He thought at first that perhaps the wind had loosened one of the shutters, but had no suspicion of the presence of burglars. Almost every year the alarm has sounded once or twice, and we have always found that it arose from that cause.

"He called me up after he heard the alarm and told me to go over to the Judge's house and close the shutter, and I dressed myself, placed a small revolver in my pocket, and, taking a lantern, went over to find William Scott, who lives in rooms connected with the stable, and has charge of the Judge's house. I called him up and told him the burglar alarm had sounded. He came out with the key of the house, and was ascending the back steps which lead to the wing of the building when he exclaimed, 'Look there! the cellar door is open!' 'Did you leave it open last night?' I asked. 'No, sir,' said he, 'I locked it.' At this moment we saw a light in the front hall. It was moving up the stairs. Scott, who had the lantern in his hand, instantly concealed it under his coat, and put it behind the ice house. At the same time he told me to go over to our house and get guns and wake up the Dutchman (Herman Frank.) I got a double barrel and single barrel gun, giving the latter to the Dutchman and the former to Scott. After this I went back to my father's house for another gun for myself, and asked him to go with me. He was not well, and said so, but I persuaded him to accompany me. He took a shot gun with him, and I went to Scott's house and armed myself with Scott's gun. Then I returned and found my father about twenty paces from the open cellar door. He told me I had better go to the front gate.

"I took my station," continued Mr. Van Brunt, "and waited half an hour. The night was dark—so dark that I could not see the end of the barrel of my gun—and a cold drizzling rain was falling. At length I heard my father say in a loud voice, 'Look out' They're coming.' In about three minutes from this time I heard two pistol shots coming close together, from the back of the house. These were followed by three louder shots, which I knew came from shot guns. Then my father cried out, 'There they come, shoot 'em!' Herman Frank and myself were stationed at the front gate. As we heard this order we closed in together and ran toward the southern side of the house. There is a space of twenty-two feet between the high white fence on the southern side and the Judge's house, and we knew the men would have to come that way. Besides, we did not want to meet them in front of the house, where they would have had a much larger space to run in.

"We could hear the men running toward us at full speed. I fired at the man nearest the house, and the Dutchman and myself, almost at the same instant, discharged our pieces at the other man, who staggered toward the fence and fell against it. As I fired my first barrel I called out to the Dutchman, "Give it to him!" and my second shot was almost simultaneous with his first. The man I first fired at was afterward found to be Mosher. The other was Douglas. No sooner had the last shot from our guns been fired than I heard the report of a pistol within four feet of me and the whizzing of a bullet near my head.

"I turned in the direction from which the shot came, and was greeted by another. This time I felt the powder in my face. I could see the form of a man within an arm's length of me, and could plainly distinguish the glistening barrel of his pistol. As he raised his pistol the third time I clubbed my gun and struck his right arm with the stock. The blow must have been a strong one, for the gun snapped like a pipe stem. His arm fell powerless at his side but to avoid dropping his pistol he clutched his right with his left hand, and I could see that he was trying to bring his weapon into range for a fourth shot. But the useless arm made his motions slow, and gave me time to draw my revolver which was in the right hand pocket of my trousers. But as his chances of escape became smaller his desperation and anger increased, and he uttered a horrid imprecation as the gun struck his arm.

"When I drew my revolver from my pocket I was close enough to slap the burglar's face, but still it was so dark that his form was indistinct. I fired while he was still trying to raise his pistol hand, but the shot did not seem to take effect. By this time we were in front of the house, having moved somewhat during the firing, and he had a clear run. He turned from me and started to run toward the north. I followed him, firing the second and third shots as fast as I could cock the pistol. At the third shot he fell, saying, as he touched the ground, in a weak voice, 'I give up,' William Scott, the hired man, was near the spot where Mosher dropped, and just as the burglar fell I heard Scott say, "I'll give him one!" It was lucky for me that my last shot took effect. Had it not, I would have stood a chance of catching a load of shot from Scott's gun. After Mosher fell he made but one convulsive move of his legs, then all was over. The whole occurrence, as far as the firing was concerned, did not take a minute."

Mr. J. Holmes Van Brunt, the father of Albert, after detailing the story of the alarm, said: "William Scott and myself took up our stand near a tree, about fifteen paces from the open cellar door. When I went up to the back of the house and looked through the blinds, I saw the light carried by the burglars pass from the hall through the dining room and into the butler's pantry, which is on the northern end of the main building. I saw Mosher in the dining room walking toward the pantry. He had something in his hand, which I did not recognize as an article of furniture. It was long and straight, and he was carrying it across his body. It may have been a pole with which to pry open a door. He was cool and easy, and did not seem to be in any hurry. After seeing this I went back to the tree and crouched down in front of it. I told Scott that I was getting weak, and that something must be done soon. As I was speaking, we heard a movement in the house as of men going up stairs, and soon we saw a light in the next story. I told William to unlock the lower back door, but instead of doing so, he made a noise, which my wife ninety feet away, heard distinctly. In an instant the light in the house disappeared, showing that the burglars had also heard it. Then I called out to the men at the front gate, thinking the burglars might escape that way: 'Look out, Al and Frank! They're coming!' In about three minutes after the light went out we heard the burglars coming down stairs, and saw the flicker of a match in the hall. Then we heard them going down the cellar stairs, and in a moment were conscious that they were coming out of the cellar door. It was pitch dark, and I could not see, and their motions were so well guarded that I could not hear them, still I felt that they were coming out. When I thought they were at the top of the stairs I called out, 'Stand!' The answer was two pistol shots in the direction of my voice. By the flash of the pistols I caught an indistinct sight of the two men at the top of the cellar stairs. I fired at one of them. He groaned and started to run around the northern end of the house. Scott also fired, but neither shot took effect." The rest of the story is told by Mr. Albert Van Brunt, who met the men immediately after these shots.

—The Boston Advertiser says; "A club formed of about a dozen employes of the Providence Railroad, having a room in Dedham, well stocked with liquors, has recently come to grief, as it has been ascertained that in furnishing the apartment, seats, lamps and mirrors had been taken from the cars without permission. Superintendent Folsom, on being informed of the matter, visited the room, and identifying the property, suspended five engineers and two brakemen, members of the club. An investigation is in progress."

Laconics.

It wasn't much of a fire, but it might have been. Two families living on Russell street were aroused shortly before six o'clock, Thursday morning, by an alarm of fire given by a neighbor. The chimney was defective and fire had communicated to the woodwork while they were asleep. The house was full of smoke and a narrow escape from suffocation was made by the fortunate discovery. A general alarm brought out the fire department, but a few buckets of water extinguished the flames.

H. B. Buzzell & Son have crowded their store with toys and presents for the holidays, and the place is thronged with little folks and their parents, day and evening, selecting presents for distribution. Santa Claus has lots of new attractions for the children.

Robeck & Son announce that their Christmas ship has arrived laden with Philadelphia candy. The confectionery, fruit and cake at this establishment is always of the very nicest. All persons purchasing a dollar's worth of any kind of candy will be entitled to a share in the Christmas ship to be drawn on New Year's Day.

In these days of economy, the saving of a dollar in fuel is appreciated by poor and rich alike. The Rubber Mouldings advertised by Mr. John A. Haraden have been in use in this city for several years past and by largely reducing the amount of cold in houses and shops do away with the necessity of burning so much coal or wood as formerly. Mr. Haraden offers to sell and fit them at lower rates than ever. See advertisement.

State News.

That was a singular accident that happened to Willam Owen, at Nantucket. He was returning home to Siasconset in a dory from the shoal with his fare of fish, when something suddenly struck him in the back of the neck, knocking him senseless in his boat. When he recovered his senses he came to the conclusion that he had been hit by a spent ball from the gun of some sportsman, when on looking around he found that a duck had flown directly against his neck, striking with such force as to kill the fowl at once, for it lay in the dory dead.

Samuel Hodgdon's mitten factory at Lake Village has closed operations.

Mr. Edward Gilbraith of Nashua, was fishing a few days ago, with a dip net. He saw a queer looking black thing go by and was troubled with visions of sea serpents and other monsters. The animal seemed to have a spirit of investigation for he turned and deliberately entered the net and behold Gilbraith landed a fine specimen of muskrat.

There is forty times as much coal used in Rochester now as there was seven years ago. Then fifty tons was all that was consumed in that village in one season, and two thousand tons will be very nearly the amount consumed this season. An advertisement in the Courier offers the best egg coal for $8.50, which is a dollar cheaper than in towns that have no railroad competition.

Alonzo Elkins of Dover lost a horse a few days ago, in consequence of his stepping upon a rolling stone, falling and breaking a leg.

Mr. John Quimby Jr., of Dorchester has shot a fine, but small specimen of a bear. He was out hunting and setting traps for foxes in a secluded spot, when he came upon the bear's tracks, and followed closely upon him with his dog for a mile or so, when Brain treed, and was brought down by Mr. Quimby. The bear proved to be one of the roving kind, rather poor, weighing less than one hundred pounds.

—Many of our farmers have wasted years of valuable time just because they did not teach their cows to come home at night. Any one who has lived or travelled in the country will remember the familiar "Co bos, Co bos!" of the farmer's son or hired man, as he endeavors to coax the cows from the great pasture. We have had a little experience in these matters, and well remember how many times we have waded through the brush and bogs looking for the cows, and, boy-like, we thought them dreadfully contrary animals, but we have lived long enough to learn better, and now think that the biped was the more contrary animal of the two. Boys, we will tell you a secret that will save you a great deal of trouble, and it is this: Every time the cows are driven up at night or in the morning give them a good lick of meal or bran, and our word for it the cows will always be on hand at milking time. Besides this, they will give more milk, and forget to kick over the milk pail, even if you do whistle a little too loud.

—A wee bit girl in Cusco, Wisconsin, while at the breakfast-table a few mornings since, made loud and repeated calls for buttered toast. After disposing of a liberal quantity of that nourishing article, she was told that too much toast would make her sick. Looking wistfully at the dish for a moment, she thought she saw a way out of her difficulty, and exclaimed, "Well, give me anuzzer piece and send for the doctor."

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and tastily printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 130,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Address, "THE SUN," New York City.

THOS. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

Pulmocine Cordial.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original production—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of the paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The artistic feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. Though eminently cosmopolitan, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention,

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it. Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 1000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,
"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"
Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,
"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"
by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on
"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"
including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:
"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"
Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.
A series of papers of great interest on
FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE
By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.
"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"
Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE's latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story by SARAH ORNE JEWETT,
"MY TOURMALINE,"
began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by the American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and character of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department. Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."
The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted as great a number of the early volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so much in the profit direct.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.
A Book for Boys and Girls.
Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:
"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent place in our libraries for the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. The best writers, by virtue of their taste and of their honor and courage, I do not see how it can be any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."
St. Nicholas for 1875.
The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,
"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"
by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.
"Eight Cousins."
by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have conducted so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:
Short and early stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, in the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of interest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.
Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.
Mr. Ridder will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Natural Objects.

At the rate of 44 centimes per thirty grammes of letters, and one franc per kilogramme of samples of merchandise or printed matter, for such of the said mails as shall be forwarded by the way of England and the packets used for the conveyance of the correspondence between England and the United States.

On its side, the postal administration of France shall assure, on account of the postal administration of the United States, the intermediary transportation of the mails which shall be forwarded from the United States to France by means of the French mail-packets.

The postal administration of the United States shall pay for this transportation to the postal administration of France the same rates, per thirty grammes of letters and per kilogramme of samples of merchandise or printed matter, as those at which the intermediary transportation is hereinabove fixed, by Hamburg packets, for the mails from France for the United States.

ARTICLE 4.

The correspondence exchanged between the postal administration of France and the postal administration of the United States shall be forwarded in conformity with table A, annexed to the present regulations.

ARTICLE 5.

Correspondence sent in transit, in open mail, conformably to Article VII of the convention of 28th April, 1874, shall be exchanged between the postal administration of France and the postal administration of the United States on the conditions respectively fixed by the said article and by tables B and C, annexed to the present regulations.

The postage-charges which the two administrations shall have mutually to carry to account for this correspondence shall be stated by the dispatching exchange-offices in ordinary figures, and uniformly on the upper left side of the address, as follows:

In red ink, on prepaid objects entered by the dispatching office to the credit of the corresponding office.

In black ink, on unpaid objects entered by the dispatching office to the debit of the corresponding office.

ARTICLE 6.

Registered letters, which shall be reciprocally forwarded by the postal administration of France and the United States, shall be marked, on the side of the address, with a stamp, bearing in red ink the word "Charge," or the word "Registered," as the case may be.

ARTICLE 7.

Ordinary letters, registered letters, samples of merchandise, and printed matter, sent either from the office depending upon the postal administration of France for the United States and the countries to which the United States serves as intermediary, or from the offices depending upon the postal administration of the United States for France, Algeria, and the countries to which France serves as intermediary, shall be marked on the side of the address with a stamp, indicating the date of mailing and the place of origin.

ARTICLE 8.

The postal administration of the United States shall cause to be placed on the address of the prepaid objects which the American exchange-offices shall forward to the French exchange-offices the impression, in red ink, of the stamp "Paid."

On its side, the postal administration of France shall cause to be placed the impression, in red ink, of the stamp "P. D." upon the objects prepaid to destination; and of the stamp "P. P." upon the objects prepaid by compulsion to any limit whatever of their course, which shall be forwarded by the French exchange-offices to the American exchange-offices.

The stamps "Affranchissement insuffisant," or "Insufficiently prepaid," as the case may be, shall be placed upon letters insufficiently paid.

ARTICLE 9.

Each of the mails exchanged between the postal administrations of the two countries shall be accompanied by a letter-bill, upon which the exchange-offices shall state, with the classifications established by the convention of 28th April, 1874, as follows:

1st. The nature and the number of the objects which the mail shall contain.

2d. The number of single rates relating to the correspondence of the one of the two countries for the other.

3d. The weights or sums to be carried to account for each class of correspondence.

The office to which the mail shall be addressed shall acknowledge the receipt thereof to the dispatching office by the first mail thereafter.

The letter-bills and acknowledgments of receipt of the French exchange-offices shall conform to models D and E, annexed to the present regulations.

The forms of the letter-bill and acknowledgments of receipt, of which the American exchange-offices shall make use in their relations with the French exchange-offices, must accord with the models hereinabove designated.

ARTICLE 10.

The correspondence described in the letter-bill shall be divided into as many packets as this correspondence will admit of lines or special articles.

Each packet shall be placed under a label, indicating the nature and the weight of the correspondence, as well as the number of objects and the number of single-rates or the sums, as the case may be, inscribed upon the letter-bill.

ARTICLE 11.

Registered letters shall be entered by names on the letter-bill of the dispatching office, with all the details which this bill allows.

These letters shall form a special packet, covered with an envelope of white paper, sealed on all the folds by means of the seal of the dispatching office, and surrounded by a string placed crosswise. The ends of this string shall be attached to the bottom of the letter-bill by means of a gum seal.

The letter-bill must bear the stamp "Charge," or "Registered," whenever the mail shall contain one or more registered letters.

ARTICLE 12.

Every mail, after having been tied up interiorly, must be enveloped in gray paper, in sufficient quantity to resist the friction, then tied exteriorly and sealed with wax, with the impression of the office-seal.

The string which shall surround a mail exteriorly must always be without knot.

ARTICLE 13.

In case that, on the day fixed for the dispatch of the mails, an exchange-office should have no object to address to the corresponding office, this exchange-office must nevertheless send, in the ordinary form, a mail, which shall contain only a negative letter-bill.

ARTICLE 14.

The postage or charge upon letters that have become dead, from whatever cause, which the two administrations shall return to each other, by virtue of Article XIII of the convention of 28th April, 1874, shall only be admitted in release of the administration to which these letters shall have been originally transmitted, so far as the condition of their seals shall not give reason to suppose that they have been opened.

However, scurrilous letters and those commonly called decoy letters, may be comprised and admitted in the dead matter reciprocally returned, even though these letters may have been opened.

ARTICLE 15.

Letters not claimed, address poste-restante or in furnished hotels, may, after three months' stay, be returned on both sides, under the conditions fixed by Article XIII, before cited, and the preceding article.

The account of the total of dead matter shall be prepared in bordereaux, conforming to the model F, annexed to the present regulations.

ARTICLE 16.

It is agreed that the provisions of the convention of 28th April, 1874, and of the present regulations, shall be put into execution the 1st of August, 1874.

Done in duplicate and signed at Washington the 9th of June, 1874, and at Paris the 26th of June, 1874.

—The Providence Journal says: Kate Field is the girl for our money. In a recent speech, or article, or lecture, or some other utterance, that blessed young lady says, "If I had my way, journalists should be paid better than any other professional men and women." And why shouldn't she have her own way, we ask? Every girl should have her own way. That is what girls were made for. And especially, why should a lady of such excellent sentiments, so evidently posted in the affairs of life, be interfered with in any manner? Let her have her own way. She adds "if"—we don't see any use in the "if," we leave off the "if" as mere surplusage and go on with the substance of her remarks—"they are clever and honest, they deserve the best of treatment." Of course we are clever, all of us; if we are not, down go the papers, and—well, yes, we are honest. Don't we all say so, and don't we know? Miss Kate is an ornament to her sex and to her profession. When woman's rights are established, she shall have our vote for governor.

A Trapper Trapped.

[Virginia (Nevada) Chronicle.]

A party of hunters from this city, who have just returned from an exhibition into the Sierra Nevada, about forty miles from town, relate the following remarkable incident: On last Thursday afternoon, about 6 o'clock, two of the party were on the trail of a deer, which led them into a remote ravine in the fastnesses of the mountains into which they had not before ventured. The snow being about two feet deep, and the walking very heavy, they became discouraged, and, losing all hope of overtaking the deer, which they had wounded, they abandoned the pursuit. On their return one of them discharged his gun at a hare, and soon after a faint halloo was heard at some distance to the right, as if from some one in distress. Uncertain whether they were not mistaken, and had not been deceived by the whistling of the wind, they shouted aloud, when the cry was repeated. As night would soon come on, they held a consultation and were about proceeding to their camp, three or four miles away, concluding that the noise was made by wandering Indians, or came from a party of wood choppers. They started on, but soon a prolonged and mournful howl was borne down the wind and again reached their ears. They stared at each other a moment, and then by a simultaneous impulse turned in the direction from which the sound proceeded. They went on for some distance, floundering through the snow down a precipitous descent which led them into a gloomy canon. As they drew nearer the voice of a human being could be distinctly heard calling for relief. They answered that aid was approaching. The man's yells of misery were changed to cries of joy, and they could hear him, at intervals shouting, "For God's sake don't go away and leave me!" "Come and get me out! I am caught and starving!" Still they could see nothing, but, guided by the man's cries, and cheering him with hopeful answers as they advanced, they pushed forward, and at last discerned what seemed to be a small cabin built of heavy logs without windows or doors. The snow had drifted against one side of the hut nearly as high as the roof, and, as they could see no entrance, they went round to the other side.

As soon as the occupant saw them he uttered exclamations of the greatest joy, and explained his situation in a few words by stating that he had built a bear trap and had caught himself in it five days before. The door was made of heavy logs, and was so arranged, as to slip down into its place from above. They tried to lift it up, but failed. Finally, by means of a stick of timber which lay near by, they pried it up sufficiently for the prisoner to crawl beneath. He appeared more dead than alive, but by judicious use of a flask of brandy, they were able to get him to their camp about dark, where their companions had a blazing fire awaiting their return. The half famished man ate travenously. He was supplied with plenty of hot coffee and smoked a pipe, after which his strength somewhat revived, and he gave the following account of how he got into the situation in which he was found: He said his name was Thomas Way, and that he had been engaged in chopping wood in the mountains during last summer. Since the first snow fall, about a month ago, he had frequently noticed tracks of bears among the pine trees, and had often tried to get a shot at them, but without success. At last the idea struck him to build a pen such as he had often seen grizzly bears caught in in Lake county, California, where he used to live. He explained that the bear trap is made by building a small, square house of heavy hewed logs, and covering it with a strong roof. The door is of heavy logs also, and slides up and down in grooves. When it is up there is an open entrance about five feet high and four feet wide. A sheep is killed and hung up inside the pen attached to a rope, which is connected with a trigger, so that when the bear enters and seizes the mutton the door falls, and he is caged. Way went to work and completed the trap to his satisfaction, and intended to bait it the same night. Having a curiosity to see how it would work, he went in and pulled the rope slightly, when the door fell down. He attempted to raise it, but was horror stricken, and his hair stood on end, when he found he was unable to budge it an inch. He worked and struggled, but the heavy weight refused to move. The pen worked only too successfully, and he was caught in his own trap. He yelled, shouted, called for help, but knowing that he was miles from a human habitation and in a wild locality where few persons ever ventured, he sank down to sleep in despair. He spent the night in misery and got but little sleep. It commenced to snow, but fortunately he had a heavy blanket overcoat which kept him comparatively comfortable.

The next morning he commenced shouting again until his throat was sore, but was only answered by the howlings of the tempest. He had set his gun by a stump outside, and longed to get it that he might free it off and attract somebody's attention. He soon began to get hungry. His thirst he quenched by pushing his hands through the chinks between the logs and raking up snow and healing it. Thus day after day elapsed, during which his mental sufferings were terrible. "I tell you, men," said he, "I thought of everything I had done in all my life from the time I was a boy six years old." At last a brilliant idea struck him. He had matches and would burn his way out. With the heel of his boot he would kick and grind a log until he had accumulated a quantity of dust and splinters, which he would light with a match and blow the fire with his hat till he had burned a hole big enough to crawl out. All the day previous to that on which he was found he was thus employed, but on trial the scheme would not work. The wood refused to burn, and he lay down to die. That day passed, and the next day he had given up all hope and was calculating how long it would take a strong healthy man to die of hunger. He was in a state of abject stupor, when he heard the report of a gun. He was in doubt whether it was not the effect of his own maddened imagination, but he hallooed with all his might, and kept it up. When his cries were answered he was almost delirious with joy. As the voices approached his visions of death fled, and the realities of life came back like a flood. He was profuse in his gratitude to his deliverers, but declared his purpose of getting out of the Sierra Nevada as soon as possible, and abandoning bear hunting. He said he had had most too close a call, and didn't want any more of it. The next morning he left for the camp of some wood choppers, who were no doubt at a loss to account for his long absence.

Pearson's Victorious Skirmish.

At the last democratic State convention, the Roberts men affirmed that their candidate actually received the majority of votes thrown by delegates, but that bundles of Weston tickets were deposited in the hats by enthusiastic delegates and outsiders who had no right in the convention. It is evident that the Pearson wing of the party is the most honest, but as honest men are more liable to surrender to the machinations of rogues than to resist and make trouble, the fraudulent nomination was acquiesced in. Pearson is the rising politician of the party and bides his time while the ancient leaders go to seed. Weston is politically dead and could not muster a sufficient number of pall-bearers this year to give him a respectable following. Judge Roberts is again in the field, and the vigorous Pearson's strategy is already showing itself. At a recent meeting of the democratic State committee, it was voted to admit none but delegates to the floor of the hall where the convention is to transact its business. This is an important move for the Pearson-Roberts wing, and is a notification to the "regulars" that extra ballot-box stuffing will not be allowed on the fifth of January without trouble. The opponents of Judge Roberts are divided among three candidates, Messrs. Warren F. Daniell, Thos. P. Pierce and Edmund L. Cushing, and if they do not concentrate their forces before the convention meets may be conquered in detail by the shrewdness of Pearson and the faithfulness of the friends of Roberts. The People warns "camp-followers and place-hunters to the rear." What moves may be made by the veteran politicians who have heretofore been dictators in the State conventions remain to be seen, but it is not to be supposed that they will yield their supremacy without a struggle. In any contingency, republicans have nothing to fear from the result. With Charles H. Bell, Person C. Cheney, Dexter Richards (or any one of a score of men heretofore honored by republican votes,) as candidate for Governor, there can be little doubt of a heavy vote, and that in New Hampshire always means a republican victory.

News and Notes.

Governor Kellogg of Louisiana has sent a despatch to the President urging the early departure for that State of the congressional committee appointed to investigate the state of affairs there, expressing confidence in its approval of his administration.

Gov. Ames' message to the Mississippi legislature declares that the present condition of affairs was brought about by violent men for political purposes.

The U. S. Senate financial committee is considering the matter of free banking, a new issue of currency, 80 per cent. to be retired in greenbacks until it falls to $300,000,000, and the greenbacks to be redeemed in gold on Jan. 1, 1879. A majority of the Senate is opposed to the repeal of the legal tender act.

Mr. Samuel Payson, postmaster of North Warren, Me., and his wife were both found dead in their beds Thursday morning, suffocated by coal gas. Another couple were nearly dead when discovered.

James A. Remick, a jeweller doing business on Tremont street, Boston, has been fined $100 and costs on the ground that a number of Eastern Railroad tickets which he had not paid for, were in his possession. The claim of the company was that he had received the tickets from the conductors for sale, the conductors having stolen them.

Three counterfeiters were convicted in the U. S. District Court at Boston on the 15th, which goes to show that the Chief of the New England branch of the secret service is doing his work faithfully and well.

A strange accident occurred recently at the theatre at Antwerp. A shoemaker named Paus, being dissatisfied with his place in the third gallery, was stepping down on a lower bench, when he lost his balance and fell over from a height of nearly fifty feet on the shoulder of a lady seated in the pit, breaking her chair with his weight. He was taken up apparently lifeless, but soon after recovered consciousness, and declared that he only felt a slight pain in the back. He was, however, conveyed to the hospital, where no doubt exists of his recovery. As for the lady, she remained for some moments as it were petrified by the shock, and then fainted. But in a little time she recovered and did not quit the theatre.

The employes of the engineer's department of the Charlestown navy yard have been suspended until further orders, for a lack of funds.

The students of the Central boy's high school in New Orleans appeared at the girl's high school to compel the removal therefrom of a number of colored pupils, threatening to use force if necessary. All the colored girls promptly and quietly left the building, and the boys returned to their own school. This action of the students resulted in a general melee between the whites and blacks in the neighborhood of the girls' school, in the course of which a colored policeman was badly hurt, and a number of other persons were more or less injured.

The Chicago Tribune says: A sheriff who has the names of three gamblers on his official bond is one of the fruits of the "people's" victory last month.

Lee, who was a democratic candidate for election to the 44th Congress in Rainey's South Carolina, district, has filed a notice with the latter that he proposes to contest his seat. Both are colored. A certificate of election has been given to Rainey by the governor of the State. Lee was formerly an employee of the house, and was appointed on Rainey's recommendation.

The citizens of Vicksburg have publicly set forth their grievances, which, if true, are certainly of an intolerable nature; but they do not make it clear why it was necessary to slaughter six score of negroes who were not responsible for the abuses of which they complain.

Captivity and Rescue.

[Topeka Commonwealth.]

The two little girls, named Adelaide and Julia Germain, who were captured by the Indians last September and rescued on the 8th of November by a scouting party from General Miles' expedition, passed through this city yesterday morning, for Leavenworth, in charge of Surgeon Powell. In commenting upon the capture and rescue of these children, the Leavenworth Commercial truly says that in the whole history of frontier warfare, with its chapters of Indian deviltry and savage brutality, there is no sadder story than that which clusters around these orphans. Briefly told, it is this; Last September, a family of emigrants, named Germain, from the Blue Ridge region of Georgia, were on a journey across the plains of Colorado.

They encamped one night on Smoky Hill, not far from Sheridan Station, and while at rest were surprised and attacked by a band of Cheyenne Indians. Of the nine members of the family, five were instantly butchered and four carried into captivity. The father, mother and infant, a grown son and an invalid daughter were cruelly murdered in cold blood, and thus escaped the terrors of captive brutality, infinitely worse than the horrors of death itself. The remaining members of the family—all girls—were placed on ponies and forced to endure the hardships of a rapid flight to the Texas frontier. Two of the girls, Adelaide and Julia, aged respectively five and eight years, were recaptured some days ago. The other sisters, Lucy and Ada, the former nineteen and the latter sixteen years of age, are still held as prisoners, and supposed to be with Gray Eagle's band of Cheyennes.

The misery of the young ladies still in captivity can better be imagined than described. The story of suffering borne by the two children rescued from the savage band was told in their own half-naked bodies, emaciated faces and woe begone countenances. The elder, a frail girl, but old enough to know mental anguish, and comprehend the terrible tragedy which had befallen herself and her own, was a mere walking skeleton, worn to the shadow of death, when her rescuers appeared. The younger, naturally the stronger of the two, and perhaps unconscious of other than physical suffering, bore up much better than her sister did; but she, too, bore hardships, and the heroism of her innocent suffering appealed to every sentiment of sympathy in the warm hearts of the gallant soldiers who rescued her. The officers and soldiers at Camp Supply and in the field contributed so generously to the relief of the children that, after clothing them comfortably, there was left in the surgeon's hands $185 for their use. The children will probably become the wards of the Protestant Orphan Asylum at Leavenworth.

—Detroit, in the absence of a society for the prevention, etc., does the best she knows how. The Free Press says: Yesterday morning a load of wood became imbedded in the mire on Maple street and the horses were unable to pull it out. This enraged the owner of the team, a farmer named Wilkes, to such an extent that he struck the animals several violent blows on their heads. Bystanders remonstrated, which only had the effect of increasing his rage and the severity of his blows. Whereupon two men who had watched Wilkes' brutality from a distance ran over and gave him such a beating that he fell helplessly to the ground. They then threw the wood into the mud, and after leading the team to the pavement they left Wilkes to load up as best he could.

—When a school-ma'am catches the children whispering together these days, says the Milwaukee Sentinel, she doesn't thump them on the head for it. She knows it's about that Christmas present they have clubbed together to give her.

State News.

Frederick A. Marston of Lowell, Mass., has offered to give half an acre of land to citizens of Stratham for town house purposes.

A man has been found at Nashua who thinks that the skull recently discovered in a tin box in that city belonged to a woman named Mary Walsh, who, he says, boarded at his house some time ago, and who had frequent quarrels with a man who called on her, pretending to be her husband. The name Mary Walsh was found on some clothing near the skull. The man thinks he can find the pretended husband.

John W. Towle of Dover and John D. Lyman of Exeter have purchased the farm of the late Benjamin Odiorne, of Barrington, upon which is a large lot of wood and timber, which will be put into the market this winter.

The State farmers' convention will be held at Manchester next Tuesday and Wednesday.

A Lancaster paper says that the house of Col. Ephraim Cross is closed this winter for the first time in 95 years, and that the fire in one of its antiquated fire-places has never been permitted to go out during all that long period.

A few days ago Chas. Wright of Hollis, while chopping in the woods, attempted to push a tree from him, when his ax slipped and the blow broke his leg badly in two places.

Some scoundrel, as yet unknown, entered the Catholic cemetery at Manchester, and defaced about sixty marble gravestones and monuments, breaking the crosses and other emblems. The stones destroyed were among the most valuable in the grounds.

A chap who was out of work, picked up a roll of cloth from one of the boxes in front of a dry goods store in Dover, last Saturday, and made up the street with it. His object was to get into jail, where he could have lodgings for a couple of months.

Peculiarities of Von Moltke.

One reason why Count Moltke is no more of a favorite, says an English writer, and he is anything but popular, is that he is an insufferable prig, and ostentatiously wraps himself up in a mantle of self-conceit. It is told of him that when a simple colonel, he astonished the members of his mess by regularly taking ten Fredrich-d'ors out of his pocket at the beginning of dinner and laying them beside his plate. Regularly after dinner, he pocketed the gold, buttoned up his coat, looked sourly round and disappeared. It was resolved to ask him the meaning of this strange behavior. "Well," he said, "I have noticed that from the time I entered this regiment, the conversation at table has always turned on women, or cards, or horse racing, and I determined to make a present of the ten pieces of gold to the first man who should start a sensible subject. No man has yet earned them." Even on congenial topics, Moltke is never very talkative, being famous for holding his tongue in ten different languages. And when he does open his mouth, it is sometimes to make such extremely unpleasant remarks that the wonder is that his career was not long ago abbreviated by a duel. Probably even in Germany genius is allowed some liberty.

—A remedy named "aqua puncture" has been introduced in France for the treatment of neuralgia. It may be described as a force pump which can be carried about and placed on a table, with a small flexible tube about two feet long, so constructed as to deliver a thread of water from its extremity with such force as to pierce leather. In operating on a patient afflicted with neuralgia, the piston is worked a few times to expel the air from the tube, the point is then held about half an inch from the painful spot, the pump is worked, and the thread of water plays on the skin. Presently a white vesicle appears on the spot where the water strikes; any number of punctures may be made at the discretion of the operator and in proportion to the extent of the pain. At first the skin around the vesicles becomes red; but after a few hours the vesicles and the redness disappears, leaving only a small black point, which is the crust formed by the drying of a drop of blood in the puncture. The operation is described as painful; but the relief it produces is so great that patients always call for a repetition whenever their neuralgic pains return.

—The Society of Pioneers, a San Francisco organization of argonauts, is in a bitter quarrel. The fact that the bond of being fellow forty-niners is not strong enough to assimilate diverse grades of men, ranging from clergymen to barkeepers, is made apparent. At a recent meeting several candidates with bad characters were blackballed, whereat Col. Stack arose excitedly and said: "If this thing's agoing to be run by starched-necked Bible whackers, then I goes in for a row." The incompatible factions are likely to reorganize separately.

—Helen M. Coke writes that "kisses on her brow are the richest diadem a woman's soul aspires to." And yet a fellow who kisses a young lady on her brow while her rosy lips are making motions like a patent clothes-wringer, is not the man for the position.

—A little girl who had just recovered from a severe attack of the croup, on being asked by her Sunday school teacher what she should "do to be saved," replied "I should take syrup and alum.'

—Reading the great Spurgeon's declaration that "a cigar is a thing to thank God for," a school boy bought a cigar. He was afterward seen hanging over a fence, but he was not giving thanks.

Ask any fair-minded physician, or any family in which it has been used; ask the whole Drug trade, why HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR is so popular. Its enormous and constantly increasing sales are based upon the grand fact, notorious throughout the whole country, that it controls and masters every disease leading to consumption.

A Lucky Journeyman.

A journeyman carriage-maker in April last purchased a ticket to the Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., and when the distribution took place he received a sufficient amount of money to buy a lot, and build thereon a neat and comfortable residence, which will be a home for himself and family during their lives. The second and last Gift Concert of the Association will be given on Tuesday, December 29th, and we would advise all who desire to obtain one or more of the large prizes which will be given to the lucky ticket-holders to send without delay for tickets. The Concert will not be postponed; it will be conducted by gentlemen of high character, and Masons and others can place implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of all connected with the management of the drawing. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

An Absolute Safeguard.

Invalids, broken down in health and spirits by chronic dyspepsia, or suffering from the terrible exhaustion which follows the attacks of acute disease, the testimony of thousands who have been raised as by a miracle from a similar state of prostration by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is a sure guarantee that by the same means you too may be strengthened and restored. But to those who stand in peril of epidemics, to all who, by reason of exposure, privations and uncongenial climate or unhealthy pursuits, may at any moment be stricken down, this paragraph is most particularly and emphatically addressed. You who are thus situated are proffered an absolute safeguard against the danger that menances you. Tone and regulate the system with this harmless medicinal stimulant and alterative, and you will be forearmed against the maladies whose seeds float around you in the air unseen.

GILBERT'S LIVER LOZENGES.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THEM.

CARROLLTONVILLE, IND., April 23, 1874.

S. GILBERT: A box of your Liver Lozenges have almost cured me of Dyspepsia of 20 years standing. I have recommended them in many cases, and they have never failed to my knowledge of giving relief, and I have heard several say they were the best remedy they had ever used. A. H. ALLISON, 6S Eld. "DOUBTLESS THE
IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & Co.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it one night. In all these

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 92 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and, soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

One who has tried it says that a cup of coffee is a sure barometer, if you allow the sugar to drop to the bottom of the cup, and watch the bubbles arise without disturbing the coffee. If the bubbles collect in the middle, the weather will be fine; if they adhere to the cup forming a ring, it will be rainy; and if the bubbles separate without assuming any fixed position, changeable weather may be expected.

No. 46 Market street shows well for the children with its extensive stock of sleds, carts, rocking-horses, toy perambulators, cutlery, etc. Sweetser & Clark are a live firm and are sure to keep up with the times.

The programme of Capt. C. P. Patterson, Superintendent of the Coast Survey for the coming year, includes in its field work a hydrographic and topographical survey of Portsmouth harbor; also to make additional triangulation as may be required for the topographical and hydrographic surveys, and the determination of the positions of new light houses from Cape Cod to the eastward. The office work includes the beginning of the drawing and engraving of a chart of Portsmouth harbor.

Rev. James DeNormandie's next historical sketch, on Sunday evening, will be an account of the re-establishment of Episcopacy and the History of the St. John's Church.

Religious Politics Condemned.

The following communication speaks for itself:

The following resolutions were unanimously passed at a meeting of the Official Board of the Methodist Church of this city, held Monday evening, Dec. 7. It was voted to send them to the Zion's Herald, our church paper, for publication. The editor declined to publish them, being under instructions, as we understand, from our Presiding Elder. Having been thus denied the right to be heard through our religious journal, we are compelled to ask a publication of the resolutions in a secular paper. The undersigned thus publish them on their own responsibility, and without the consent of the other members of the official Board. We do it on principle, for we cannot yield our right to be heard, without sacrificing our manhood and self-respect.

W. C. NEWTON,
S. W. CLARKE.

Whereas, A sense of duty impels us to express our convictions upon what we deem a subject of vital importance to the Church,

Resolved, That we view with increasing anxiety the tendency on the part of our clergy to take an active part in politics and to become candidates for political office, fearing that such a tendency is pregnant with injury to the cause of Christ and incompatible with a complete devotion to the duties of the christian ministry.

Resolved, That we earnestly pray the ministry of our denomination to remember that the vows of the Church and of their holy calling are upon them, and that to God and the Church belong their time and undivided labors.

Death of a Hero.

Lieutenant-Commander William B. Cushing died at the government hospital in Washington, on Thursday, aged 31 years. His record during the war abounds in acts of signal bravery and coolness, and on five different occasions called forth expressions of approbation by the department. One of the most notable of these occasions was the desperate fight made from the grounded steamer Ellis in New River Inlet, on the expedition against Jacksonville, in November, 1862, in which he was assisted by six volunteers, who withstood the fire of the enemy until the steamer was disabled, and then rather than surrender pulled a mile and a half in a small boat under the enemy's fire, to a schooner containing the remainder of the expedition. Another still more brilliant exploit was the enterprise of blowing up the rebel ram Albemarle, in the Roanoke River, which was accomplished at the most imminent hazard to the party, engaged in the attempt, one of whom was Mr. Thomas S. Gay of this city. There was not a year during the war that Lieutenant Cushing did not distinguish himself by some signal act of perilous adventure.

—The Chicago Times says that Otis O. Hall of San Francisco was a bank teller, two years ago, at a salary of $2500. He loved Miss Sharon. Miss Sharon loved him. Mr. Sharon was agreeable, but the elder Hall advised Otis to wait a pair of years, travel in Europe, grow worldly-wise, return and marry. All this Otis did as he was parentally advised. He left his situation in San Francisco, made an extensive tour of Europe, and a short time ago returned, the period of his probation having elapsed. He got back just in time to read in the newspapers of the marriage of Miss Sharon, his betrothed, to T. G. Newlands, a young lawyer of San Francisco. It was also stated for Hall's further edification that Newlands had received $1,000,000 in cash with his beautiful bride. Hall got a position as clerk in a Chicago hardware store, but he is not happy.

—Exactly what constitutes "excessive use of ardent spirits" has always been a difficult question to settle. A life insurance company lately resisted the payment of a policy upon a deceased Chicagoan, on the ground that the departed one had imbibed too freely; but, although the company showed that he drank brandy at the rate of two bottles in three days, besides other lighter liquors between drinks, the United States Court has decided that the insured did not violate the conditions of his policy, and that the company must pay up. The company still think that two bottles of brandy in three days is too much for a man with a life insurance policy in his pocket, and proposes to have another trial.

—A Cincinnati youth, who parts his hair in the middle, made a slight mistake at a theatre in that city. In order to obtain a clearer perception of a high note by a singer, he reached in his coat-tail pocket and brought forth what he thought was an opera glass, but what proved to be a revised compilation of Derringer. People in his immediate vicinity were surprised and somewhat frightened to see him elevate the ordnance to his eyes and steadfastly gaze down into its dark caverns of death. It was, upon first impression, thought to be a cool, deliberately planned suicide, but when he quietly put it back into his pocket and brought the real article into requisition the horror melted from their eyes, and it became apparent that it was only a mistake after all. A few hairs whose best lay on the larboard side of the young man's skull had by some means gotten on the starboard side; hence the slight aberration of mind.

—A man took a seat on the head of an empty flour barrel in Detroit, and remarked: "I got down the gun and loaded her up heavy, and just as I was—" At this point the head fell in and the man, or about half of him, disappeared, while his legs loomed up like schooner's masts. He was helped out and a boy hired to rub sweet oil on his back, but in spite of the earnest entreaties of the crowd he would not go on with the story.

—He took a bath, and instead of complying with the request, "Please pull the plug after bathing," he took a card, and writing upon it, "Compliments of J. Wiggins; please pull your own plug," pinned it to the wall, and went his way.

—His name was Wrath, and when he asked his girl to marry him, she gave him a soft answer, and the soft answer turned away Wrath.

—New Zealand is trying to acclimate small birds and bumble-bees from England.

—Fourteen and a half cents a day is what San Francisco pays for each of its paupers.

—Journeyman tailors in China are happy with two cents a day for wages.

—Pure Irish is to be taught in the Joliet, Ill., schools.

SINGERS AND SONGS OF THE LIBERAL FAITH is a volume edited by Alfred P. Putnam, consisting of selections of hymns and other sacred poems of the liberal church of America, with biographical sketches of the writers, and historical and illustrative notes. The editor of this work, pastor of the church of the Savior in Brooklyn, having a settled conviction that scattered through the mazes of literature were a great number of fine hymns, which had never been brought into a collected form, and were really worthy of a corner by themselves, has gathered them from hymn-books, popular compilations, magazines, newspapers and manuscripts, and now presents them to the public as the song and poetry of the Liberal church. Some of the hymns are now published for the first time. The collection covers a wide range of time, going back even to Samuel Johnson, and compasses all orders of intellect, from John Quincy Adams to William Rounseville Alger, from Theodore Parker to John Weiss, and contains very many excellent articles. Several poems by Albert Laighton are included. Roberts Brothers, Boston, publishers. For sale by J. H. Foster.

Your Days Are Few.

Piano and Singing.

THEO. P. MOSES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A in its alphabet to composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice at humbug to beg, borrow or buy bolsters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His any Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Moses will also Tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Address, "THE SUN," New York City.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or transitory interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature will apply to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art-Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the canvasser is given, bearing the fac-simil signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

"DOUBTLESS THE

BEST COUGH MEDICINE

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO. CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World. [Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, to whom LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got ENTIRELY WELL.

And is living now, which facts go to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Gen. Butler on the Finances.

Gen. Butler's speech on the bill of Mr. Kelley of Pennsylvania for the exchange of greenbacks into three sixty-five convertible bonds attracts general attention. Mr. Kelley claims that the bill proposes that when any individual has any money lying idle he may lend it to the government at the rate of 3.65 per cent., recalling it as he might from a savings bank when the time comes for the use of the money; that the government will thus get about $500,000,000 at the low rate of interest with which to redeem the gold bearing bonds now held abroad; that it will relieve the government of its foreign debt; that it will give an increased value to greenbacks, diminish the demand for gold, and thereby reduce the disparity between them and gold; and that it will quicken every industry and restore confidence to the people.

Gen. Butler advocated the bill, and claimed that it was in accord with the position he had held on the subject for many years. It was simply a proposition to allow citizens to come to the government and say, "We have taken your money, and we desire that you will at least pay us interest on it so long as you have it." What was the country suffering from to-day? What shut up or reduced the working hours of every mill in Massachusetts? Why was is that there were 60,000 men in Massachusetts out of employment, 90,000 in New York, and hundreds of thousands in Pennsylvania? Why had all business stopped? Not from want of money. Any one could borrow in New York at three per cent. on call as many millions as he chose to deposit collateral for, but if he wanted money as a business loan he could not borrow it on commercial paper at less than seven, eight, nine or ten per cent. And why? Because it was understood that Congress and the Executive were determined to contract the currency until specie payment was reached. But specie payment there had never been and never would be. It was always a delusion; but specie values they would come to, and they would come to them all the sooner if this bill were passed. The country was coming to specie values. Every interest was in favor of it except that of invested capital. Real estate had been brought down in New York 83 per cent., in Massachusetts 25 per cent., and in Chicago 33 per cent. But invested capital never came down not a dollar. Was there anybody that doubts the country was eaten up by interest? No sane man believed that any honest industry could be carried on by any man who paid more than six per cent. for the use of his money. He was not here to say that Congress should pass laws against usury. When the Lord from Mount Sinai threatened his chosen people against usury, he succeeded so illy that the Jew and usurer had come to be synonymous. Men would make the most of their money, but he [Butler] was here endeavoring to impress on the House the idea that there should not be that condition of law and of government finances which made this usury possible. Why was it that 7, 8, 9, 10 and 15 per cent. was paid for the use of money? It was because of the high rate of interest paid by the government. It was axiomatic in finance that government securities were always at the lowest rate of interest when the government was at peace and when everybody had confidence in its ability to pay obligations. The government of the United States was a borrower to the amount of two thousand, three hundred millions at the rates of 6 and 5 per cent. The next best security was town and county bonds, and they had to pay 6 and 7 per cent. The next best security was railroad bonds, and they had to pay 7 and 8 per cent., and when business and the risks of business came to be considered, the borrower had to pay 8 and 9 per cent. in Massachusetts, and 10, 12, 15 and 20 per cent. in the business centres of the West. Therefore he wanted the government to come into the market as the borrower at a low rate of interest. Then the next range would be nearer to it, and so on until all the rates of interest came down.

He proceeded to analyze the causes of the various financial panics in this country, and to show that they arose from the failure in each instance of a trust company. As to the last panic, he said the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. was not the cause of it, because every business man had discounted their failure six months before. Everybody had known that the Northern Pacific Railroad Company would go through, except the few confiding readers of the religious newspapers who read the advertisements of Jay Cooke & Co. and thought they were as true as the other parts of the paper. [Laughter.] And why had the trust companies failed? Because they were borrowers on call. They borrowed money at four per cent. on call and had to lend it out at higher rates, and when the call was made upon them they could not call in their own loans fast enough, and they failed and all confidence was lost. Every business man knew that he was working over a volcano. If the servant girls of Massachusetts were to call in their wages that they deposited in the banks, every business man in Massachusetts would be broken. They could not stand the pressure one day. Whenever the servant girl made that call, that moment the whole business of the country is dishonored. Would not every man rather have a three sixty-five bond from the government than give his money to trust companies at four per cent?

Mr. Merriam of New York asked Mr. Butler whether he proposed that the thousand million dollars, held by savings banks, should be called in and invested in these three sixty-five bonds, thus producing a chaos in all the departments of business.

Mr. Butler—I do not propose that the thousand millions in the savings banks should be called in and put in 3.65 bonds, but I want the negro of the South to have a place where he can invest his money in 3.65 bonds rather than put it in a freedman's savings bank where he does not get back 3.65 per cent of his capital.

Mr. Merriam—No one would likely to disagree with you in that.

Mr. Butler,—I want the people of this country to have, as the people of Great Britain have, a perfectly safe place to put their money, and then if they put it in a poor place it is their fault and not mine; but if I will not give them a safe place to put their money, but leave it to speculators and robbers to take it away from them, it is my fault and not theirs. That is the difference. I do not think the thousand millions will come out, because our savings banks are speculative machines and divide six or seven per cent. a year in profits, which they ought never to do. I want this change made; I want it gradual. I want if men choose to take their money and put it in three sixty-five bonds, that they shall have the privilege of doing so; and what is the objection to it? The government saves the interest. Is that objectionable? Let your deficit, which is coming at the end of the year, answer.

It will keep the interest at home. The terrible effects of a foreign debt are jus now being felt. We owe in railroad and other debts about $150,000,000 of interest, to be paid every year abroad in gold. Where is that coming from? Not from the earth by gold producing, because we only produce sixty odd millions a year. It must be paid in some other form. How has it been paid hitherto? By selling more bonds. But now that source is stopped, and that is why the whole wheels of business are stopped. I know the proposition is not popular in my section of the country. I am aware that I stood alone against all New England in voting for this proposition when it was up before, and I was told that I should never come back here. I did not much doubt that, but I thought in my own mind, "I shall not stay at home alone." [Laughter.] The republican party is held responsible for the distress that has been brought upon the country. We have become a party with vested capital—a party of landholders and monopolists. The republican party attracted the true men of the country when it started, because it started by bringing up labor. It commenced at the lowest stratum, the slave, and raised him to citizenship, but the war and the necessities of the government brought to the party the capitalists of the country, and at last, when the war was over, we had a party at the head of which were capitalists and at the foot negroes, with not much affiliation between them. [Laughter on the part of the democrats.] There is no occasion for your laughter, as the democratic party is in very much the same condition. The old whig party leaders, the capitalists of that party who would not come into the republican party because they would not go for bringing up the laboring men, finding nowhere else to go, went over and became leaders in the democratic party, and so that is a party now, with the old whig bondholders for its head and Irishmen for its tail [laughter,] and there is very little affiliation between the head and tail, either. We have got into this abnormal condition of things, and the republican party have got for the last time, the opportunity to relieve the country from its distress, to recover its confidence and to show that the people are objects of its care. If we fail now we fail forever, because a party once inaugurated lasts for a generation, and that is, to all of us here, forever. I have now, Mr. Speaker, given you succinctly, not elaborating them at all, my views. The best evidence I can offer of their sincerity, and of the deep conviction with which they are imprinted on my mind, is that I have ventured to hold them in my own section, where they are unpopular, and ventured to do so to my own injury, in view of those who think political life is all there is in the world, but to my own gain, perhaps, in the minds of those who think any business is preferable to politics. I certainly have this gain, that hereafter I can defend or prosecute the United States in my profession as I like.

Mr. Butler's speech attracted great attention, and was eagerly listened to by members, many of whom stood in a circle around him.

—Heroes are frequently met with, even in these degenerate days. Here is a case in which the principal actor certainly deserves honor at the hands of his fellow-men: At the fall of a bridge on the Northern Central Railroad, near Cockeysville, Pa., last week, the locomotive engineer, Jack Furdy, discovered, when on the bridge, that the structure was giving way. An ordinary man would have instantly become panic-stricken, and probably sprung from the locomotive to save his own life, leaving the engine to fall back upon the passenger cars it was drawing, to crush many people in the water below. But Jack Furdy proved his capacity to comprehend and conquer a great danger. Instantly he understood the necessity of getting his engine off the bridge before it went down, and quick as thought he opened the throttle-valve as wide as it could be pulled, when the engine, like a goaded steed, sprang forward, breaking from the coupling by which the train thrown forward from the rail with a momentum producing a shock sufficient to close the valve, and thus stop the locomotive when it was out of danger, as suddenly as it had been started. But the moment of imminent peril was over. The brave engineer, firmly grasping his throttle-valve, was found bleeding profusely from cuts received by the crash, yet not seriously wounded. He had saved the lives of many people by his prompt act of heroism.

Mr. Alberto Plaisted met with a very severe accident resulting in the breaking of his left arm in two places, while riding on a hand car on the P. S. & P. R. R. near Durell's crossing in Kennebunkport. He had been working at the crank, and some one present went to relieve him; in stepping back Mr. Plaisted's arm was thrown in such a position as to be struck from beneath near the shoulder by the crank, breaking the bone; the crank then struck the arm just above the elbow, breaking it again and leaving it in a shocking condition. So great was the force of the blows and the entanglement that followed that the crank was broken, else the arm might have been torn from the socket.

The completion and opening to public travel of the Nashua and Rochester Railroad was celebrated in Nashua, on the 16th. Upon the arrival of the train from Portland the city's guests, to the number of upwards of 250 persons, were welcomed by a citizens' committee and conducted though the extensive works of the Nashua Iron and Steel Company, the manufacturing establishment of the Nashua Lock Company, and the new high school building. The train was again called into requisition, and the party were taken to the mills of the Nashua Manufacturing Company by its private ticket. At all these places the utmost attention was shown to the visitors. The train from Worcester brought another large delegation, so that the total number who sat down to the banquet in the city hall, provided by the ladies of the city, numbered, with visitors, who came in from Hudson by private conveyance, citizens and guests from other places, about five hundred persons. The hall was handsomely decorated. Mayor McKean made an address of welcome at the conclusion of the meal, and was followed by Mayor Westcott of Portland, who expressed great satisfaction at the completion of the railroad which had brought Portland and Nashua in such close proximity and which must largely benefit both cities.

Douglas, one of the burglars killed by the Van Brunts, said while dying that Charlie Ross would go home all right in a few days. The coroner's jury commend the action of the Van Brunts as perfectly justifiable.

A Medium on the Bench.

[Chicago Tribune.]

Among the recent converts to Spirtualism in this city is a Justice of the Peace. Not willing to stop at the foot of the spiritual ladder and receive instructions from others, he has been busied in developing his powers as a medium and at last has come to such a pitch of perfection as to be able to carry on long conversations with the inmates of the world beyond the grave. He no longer wastes his time in visiting saloons, but stays home at night and holds intercourse with Kent, Blackstone, and other dead worthies of the law. It is his great relaxation, when he gets home after a weary session, to light his pipe, mix a glass of punch, and then have a protracted talk with Sir Edward Coke. This is really an improving way of spending the time, and may be recommended to all who desire to become experienced in the law.

These little peculiaritities of the court have thus far had no influence upon the outside world, except to amuse the lawyers who found their way into his presence, whom he would inform how, on the previous evening, he had had a long argument with Story on some obscure point, and had compelled him to own that he was mistaken. Yesterday, however, the matter assumed a serious form, and one lawyer at least is in a quandary as to what he shall do. During the forenoon session a case came up for trial. The attorney for the defence quoted a decision which will be found in one of the early Illinois reports. It was apparently decisive. The lawyer looked triumphantly at the Judge. The latter said:

"Wait a minute; I feel the influence."

Then the Judge grabbed a lead pencil and a sheet of paper. His hand went convulsively, and at the end of five minutes he had scribbled over the entire page. When he was through he said to the lawyer:

"I have just received a message from Judge Lockwood, who was one of the Judges of the Supreme Court at the time this decision was rendered. He authorizes me to say that the majority of the members of the supreme court, who are now in the spirit land, after mature consideration, decided to reverse their former judgment. Please inf.rm the profession of that fact, that they may govern themselves accordingly."

Then the Judge continued: "Under the circumstances, Mr.——, you will see that I can pay no attention whatever to the decision you have quoted, and judgment must be rendered against you."

The lawyer remonstrated, and the Judge finally agreed to postpone the case for one week in order to give Judge Lockwood and his colleagues an opportunity to examine the matter again to see if they are determined to reverse their former opinion. The lawyers are meditating what the result will be if the doctrine of spiritualism makes much further progress—whether it will not be necessary for them to burn all their reports, if Judges in the spirit land are to be allowed to carry on the business of making decisions and of reversing those which they have made while in this world.

Tears Convert a Jury.

[Winsted (Ct.) Press.]

Shearman—Jim Fisk's old lawyer, who managed his railroad iniquities for him, and now Brother Beecher's chief spokesman—became terribly affected in court, one day last week, when referring to Henry Ward, and wept. This reminds us of an incident in the professional life of Origen S. Seymour, late chief judge of the Supreme Court. Mr. Seymour's eyes have always been weak. In college his friends usually read over the exercises to him. He has had to employ assistants as amanuenses, readers, etc., ever since. One day, Mr. Seymour went into court late, to argue a case, with the details of which he was perfectly familiar, for a young lawyer who conducted the examination. The jury was composed of men who were unacquainted with Mr. Seymour. During the close of his argument he spoke mildly, as was his wont, and frequently wiped his tearful eyes with his handkerchief. The facts and equity of the case were really against him—but the jury rendered a verdict in favor of his client, to his and everybody's astonishment. The solution of the mystery was reached when two of the jurymen, being taken to do for their absurd verdict, declared that they "didn't know nothin' about law, but nobody needn't tell them that Seymour wasn't right. No man could 'blubber' so as he did if he wa'n't right—and he knew all about the case!" This was found to have been the bias with the rest of the jury, too, except one man, who yielded because, as he said, "it was no use to quarrel with the —— fools. Seymour cried it into 'em so that they couldn't be stirred, and the case wasn't important enough to split on."

To The Afflicted.

In presenting this valuable remedy to the public, would say that the almost unlimited and wholly unprecedented success it meets with, stamps it at once as the GREATEST DISCOVERY OF THE AGE. On its merits I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician; and so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid, that I am prepared to make contracts on the basis of CURE OR NO PAY, with those who have tried other medicines without relief until they have become too faithless to make another attempt. To substantiate what I claim for this Wonderful Vegetable Remedy, I do not propose to import far-fetched testimonials, but will simply refer to well-known, reliable living witnesses in your own State.
The afflicted's obedient servant,
DR. O. C. GAGE, Saratoga, N. Y.

Portsmouth Mechanic Association.

This important and useful Society was instituted in 1802, and incorporated in June, 1803, under the cumbrous and too comprehensive title of "Associated Mechanics and Manufacturers of the State of New Hampshire,"—which, seeing that the members have always been nearly all Portsmouth citizens, many would be glad to have changed to the usual designation of Portsmouth Mechanic Association. There were at the formation 98 members, which have been increased at one time within a few years to 184; there are now 162. The constitution exempts those who have paid the small annual assessment of $2 for thirty-five years, from further taxation; and 29 are now thus exempt, of whom seven are over 80 years old, and 10 others between 70 and 80. At our request the Secretary has furnished a few facts relative to this well-established and flourishing Association.

At the recent annual meeting, the following members were elected officers of the Association and Board of Managers:

Frank W. Miller, President; Lewis G. Davis, Vice-President; John Knowlton, Treasurer; Benj. M. Parker, Secretary; Franklin N. Paul, Dept. Secretary; Edward J. Moulton, Oliver H. Locke, Isaac Dow, William A. Vaughan, Jr., J. Chaplin Carr, Isaiah Wilson, Trustees. Of these officers, most are experienced members of the Board. The President was one of the Trustees three years, and Vice-President one year; the Vice-President was one of the trustees three years; the Treasurer has had a large experience in the Board, having been Deputy Secretary six years, Secretary three years, Vice-President one year, President two years, and this is his third year as Treasurer. The Secretary also has had a long term in the Board, having been Trustee three years, Deputy Secretary three years, and Secretary fourteen years. The Deputy Secretary has held this position four years; of the Trustees, Mr. Moulton has served two years, Mr. Locke five, Mr. Dow four, and Mr. Vaughan as Trustee six years, Vice-President and President two years each; Mr. Wilson as Trustee six years, Vice-President and President two years each. Mr. Carr is a new officer, having served before only on the building committee.

The Association own the new block on Congress and Fleet streets, known as Mechanics' Block, having three stores in the lower floor; in the second story are four offices which are rented, and the Mechanics' Reading Room,—where the principal newspapers are furnished free for members, and for other subscribers at a small annual fee; in the third story is Mechanics Hall, which is occupied in the daytime by Smith's Academy, and for public uses in the evening.

Of late years, the old custom has been revived, first by the late John T. Dame—of the President entertaining the incoming Board of officers at its inauguration; and on the recent occasion the new officers were entertained at Lincoln Hill. The election of Hon. Frank W. Miller as President would seem especially fitting, not only in itself but on account of the great benefit which has resulted to the Association from the action first successfully proposed by him relative to the establishment of a Reading Room and securing quarters of their own for meetings.

With the small expense of membership in this staunch old Association, and the important benefits accruing, it would seem that all mechanics and manufacturers in this city would desire to be found on their honored roll. The recent report of the Treasurer shows the funds to be about $10,000, and that in a few years the new block of the Association will be free from all debt.

Gifts To The Teachers.

Our schools closed on Saturday last for a vacation of two weeks. At the High School the pupils all assembled in one room, and welcomed their teachers with Christmas greetings. There met the eyes of the teachers several large packages. To the right of the desk stood a barrel more than full and labeled "For Mr. Clarke." When the recipient had succeeded in removing the numerous papers he found that the barrel contained an elegant bronze table or card stand, beautifully ornamented. The package labeled "Miss Bailey" contained a delicate and choice fernery, with terra-cotta base and glass globe sixteen inches high. Miss Hooper received a beautiful writing desk inlaid with silver. Miss Magraw was presented with Bryant's elegant volume entitled "Library of Poetry and Song." Each of the teachers also received a beautiful bouquet. They returned their thanks, in the kindest manner referred to the pleasant months that have passed away since they took charge of the school, and expressed the wish that the future may be as happy, promising to do their part to make it so. After wishing all a "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year," the Principal dismissed the pupils, to assemble again in two weeks.

At the Academy, Miss Hattie L. Hill, teacher of the Girls' Grammar School, received a fine silver card-receiver, gold-lined. Miss Lizzie S. Woods, teacher of the Girls' Intermediate School, received an elegant silver-mounted ink-stand.

At the Walker school, Mr. Buzzell received a silver cake basket and a bouquet; Miss Drake a silver butter knife and a napkin ring, Miss Foye a pair of vases and a napkin ring, and Miss Young a napkin ring.

Mr. E. P. Sherburne, principal of the Haven school, was presented with a splendid silver butter dish.

Miss E. M. Marshall, teacher in the second division of the Haven School, was the recipient of a silver napkin ring.

The appropriation for the batteries constructing at Jerry's Point, to be expended between July 1, 1875, and June 30, 1876, asked for by the Engineer Corps, was $70,000, against $30,000 last year, but the Committee on Appropriations have razeed it to $20,000.

The Adventists have made arrangements to hold their camp-meeting at Seabrook next August, instead of at Alton Bay, having leased grounds within three minutes' walk of the depot.

Scene at a ward seven school-house, the teacher being engaged in asking questions: "Who was the wisest man?" Up went a dozen hands and one chap selected to answer replied: "Father Walsh!" The teacher, a lady, proceeding, succeeded in getting correct answers until she asked: "Who was the strongest man?" Away over in the corner came the response: "Harry Bright!"

Stokell & Co. have chartered schooner Charles P. Dow, and are loading her with apples, etc., for Charlestown, S. C. This firm has also chartered schooner Nellie Langdon, Capt. Collins, to load for Baltimore.

The boys and girls have been having high old times the past week coasting over the half-inch crust of ice that covered the hill sides.

Trafton's masked ball at Great Falls was largely attended. Mr. Willis L. Hidden of this city was awarded a leather medal for being the homeliest dressed man on the floor. Miss Mary Gollinger of Great Falls was the nicest dressed lady, and received a silver goblet. The ball will be repeated.

The interest in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" never ceases. To-night, Mrs. G. C. Howard, whose "Topsy" has delighted thousands on both sides of the Atlantic, appears at the Temple for a farewell performance. The cast of characters includes Mr. G. C. Howard as "St. Clair," C. G. Davenport as "Gumption Cute," Adele Clarke as "Aunt Ophelia," Lulu Newman as "Eva," Joseph Delmer as "Uncle Tom," James Harrison as "George Harris," R. Butler as "Marks," and J. T. Clinton as "Simon Legree." There are five acts, twelve tableaux and thirty scenes.

Wilson & Magraw call attention to the Acme skate, for which they are sole agents at 37 Congress street. Just the things for Christmas presents for the boys and girls.

You can always trade best and cheapest with the men who advertise, and if you consult the advertisements in to-day's paper you will know who they are. An advertiser sells his goods promptly, is able to give better bargains than the slow coaches, his non-advertising neighbors, and finds it more profitable to turn his money frequently than to let his goods lie over another season in the hope of securing large profits.

The fourth annual ball of Kearsarge S. F. E. Co. No. 3 on New Year's Eve promises to be one of the most successful of these generally popular affairs. The cards of invitation show good taste and the printing is finely executed.

The fourth lecture in the Educational course will be delivered in Mechanics Hall by Charles W. Gardner, Esq., to-morrow (Tuesday) evening; Subject, "Language." Owing to some misunderstanding in regard to the Hall, Mr. Gardner was announced for Wednesday evening, but arrangements have since been made as above stated.

Capt. Clark, of Kittery Point, has purchased the gondola Swamscott, which was wrecked off Salisbury Beach with Capt. Benson last summer.

The school committee have rescinded the vote providing that graduates of the high school serving three months as teachers in any of the city schools should be given the preference when vacancies occurred.

The democrats of ward four have chosen Albert Hayes and Edward D. Coffin as delegates to the Congressional convention with instructions to vote for Hon. Frank Jones. George E. Hodgdon and Chas. H. Downs were elected delegates to the State convention.

—Helen M. Coke writes that "kisses on her brow are the richest diadem a woman's soul aspires to." And yet a fellow who kisses a young lady on her brow while her rosy lips are making motions like a patent clothes-wringer, is not the man for the position.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY!

Great Bargains!

HAVING purchased the stock of STOVES and Housekeeping Goods in the well known "Jones Stove Store," and made large additions thereto, we are prepared to offer to our customers and the public generally the best assortment of the most approved and latest patterns of

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Oven Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the concern, which we are bound to close out at any price.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

by MARY BROWN, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an Illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted as great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PREPID, with one year's subscription, for $19; the same, charges NOT paid, $16. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $23; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20.

The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

SCRIBNER & CO.,

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated on the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.,

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have continued so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit.

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of fun and instruction. The department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicrafts, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

All Postage will be Prepaid by us.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of encouraging and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. One $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Address, "THE SUN," New York City.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

— THE —

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY,

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the best specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

"DOUBTLESS THE
BEST COUGH MEDICINE
IN THE WORLD."
[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]
MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO. CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.
Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.
[Signed] ALLEN & CO.
P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.
[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]
No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.
Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.
In ordering another small lot of your invaluable VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,
I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.
Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these TWENTY-FIVE YEARS
It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose LIFE WAS SAVED
By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Consumption of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.
RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE
And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the IRRITATION
Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who BLED AT THE LUNGS
And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got ENTIRELY WELL.
And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.
Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.
As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheapest, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Wrote Beecher thus:

Of all men, surely I have a right to congratulate you on the effectual disposition made by the referee's report of the miserable and shameless slanders cast upon you. I have been the innocent cause of a great sorrow to you. Such wanton aspersion would be intolerable upon a man, but upon a woman, with so little to defend herself, so sensitive even to the very shadow of dishonor, such slanders are atrocious crimes. But now that you have been vindicated, I am content not to have quite had my own way, for I was at first hurt not a little that the case was adjusted without giving me an opportunity, publicly and under oath, to deny the shameful allegations made, and to brand the stories as malignant falsehoods in their relation to you and in their relation to me. You know, assuredly, that I never uttered any alleged injurious statements concerning you, as I know there were never any grounds on your part for such wicked stories. I hope that your health will not suffer permanently. I marvel that you have borne up as bravely as you have.

May you speedily recover your accustomed vivacity and live to see all your former friends made doubly friendly by your trials, and hundreds of sympathizing strangers made warm friends by your unmerited sufferings.

P. S. Don't you know that we have come to the shortest days? After two or three more, every day will have more sunlight in it than its predecessor. May the omen be blessed.

Replied Edna:

Dear Mr. Beecher: Thank you for your letter of yesterday, with its expressions of sympathy at the terrible injustice and cruelty I have had to endure, and with its congratulations upon the end attained. I should have been glad if you could have had opportunity to deny publicly, under oath, this atrocious story; at the same time I attached a little importance to such denial, for it has always seemed to me that the absurdity and impossibility of your ever having uttered a syllable of this slander must be apparent to all the world as it is to myself. And now that the lie has been retracted in open court by those who proclaimed it, with the abhorrence it merits, dismiss it forever. So my heart uplifts itself, and though these are the dark December days, I feel that I am not entering winter, but spring. Trusting that the future will indeed bring you sunlight without clouds, and that your remaining years will be the happiest and most useful of your life, I am, yours cordially,

News and Notes.

In the Pacific Mail investigation at Washington, Irwin, the company's agent, has disclosed the fact that $750,000 was paid him to procure a subsidy, but declines to give the names of the persons to whom the money was paid.

The Newburyport city council elect stands as follows: Mayor, conservative democrat; aldermen, three republicans; one democrat, two doubtful, though probably republicans; common council, ten republicans, seven democrats, and one doubtful.

Count Von Arnim has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment, less five weeks which he has already suffered. The charges of embezzlement fall to the ground.

At Newark, on Saturday, Weston accomplished his great feat of walking 500 miles in six days. He completed his task at 11.40 P. M., having twenty minutes to spare. His last mile was made in eleven minutes fifty-seven seconds.

On Saturday, Irwin, the Pacific Mail witness, testified before the House committee that the company commissioned him to get the subsidy through Congress, promising to furnish a given sum for his own services and whatever money he had to pay to others; that he drew $750,000 from the company, and paid it all out, except a certain sum specified, retained for himself. He refused to state to whom the money was paid.

Superintendent Chipman brought in from the Newburyport mines on Friday specimens of ore as rich in silver and gold as the sample originally assayed by Prof. Richards—over $1400 worth of silver, and $140 in gold per ton. The 100 tons of ore taken to the surface during the last ten days, at a cost of less than $200, is valued at $15,000.

Jesse Pomeroy, when the indictment was read charging him with killing the Millen boy, ten years of age, burst out laughing as he heard the terrible story of his diabolical crime, and at the same time saw the stricken mother of the dead child weeping as though her heart would break.

Newburyport has another fire-bug, seven incendiary fires having been discovered within a fortnight past. Efforts are making to secure the offering of a reward of $5000, and the insurance agents have written to their companies asking them to subscribe.

Springfield Republican remarks: If the movement for a "religious amendment" should ever assume formidable proportions—which is among the possibilities—it might end by putting God in the Constitution, but it would begin by raising the devil in our politics.

A colony of veteran cockroaches left the mailing-rooms of the Louisville Courier Journal, last week, for Boston. They secured situations in the office of the Boston Globe, an eight-page paper which has recently taken to pasting its pages, and the consequence is our Globe comes uncut as of yore.

The official vote of Minnesota for Chief Justice at the late election was: McMillan, republican, 53,074; Wilkin, democrat, 41,033; republican majority, 12,041.

Mr. O. L. Brown, inventor of Brown's type-setting machinery, died on Friday night in Malden, at the residence of his brother after four weeks' illness. His disease was softening of the brain, which had an unusually rapid development. He has twelve intense years to his invention, did not live to see the success or receive honor that may follow from his work.

Gov. Dix has refused to pardon Stokes.

Four hundred of the passengers of the steamship Japan are missing.

State News.

Sometime during the early part of the summer, a roving fellow by name of Ed. Parker, went to the town of Franconia, and hired out to work on a farm. By fair words and pleasing address, he succeeded in winning the heart of an only daughter of one of the principal citizens. Against the will and protest of all, they were married. Two weeks ago, in a business transaction with his new father-in-law, his worthlessness suddenly came to the surface. He at once left and was lost sight of. The next day he was discovered, by his hallooing on a hill near by, wandering through the bushes, pretending lunacy. He had built a fire on the hill, as the weather was rather cool. His father-in-law and a few others succeeded in taming him sufficiently to get him up to them, but he was very wild, refusing to go to the house. Reason at last prevailed and he went, but on getting there he did not know his young wife nor any one else. He was put under keepers, and afterward packed up and put on board the cars at Littleton, with a contribution of $3, for him to leave and go as far as that would carry him, his crazy fit having played out.

Charles Russell of Franconia got his ankle cut very badly while at work chopping in the woods with Louis Caderette. His foot slipped under the axe of Mr. Caderette just in time to receive the full force of the blow across the ankle joint, cutting it nearly off. The physician thinks he can save his foot.

The sword and belt worn by the late General John G. Foster in the battle of Molino del Rey in the Mexican war, and the coat and epaulets in which he graduated at West Point, have been presented to the Grand Army post of Nashua.

At a recent session of the governor and council, they renewed the justice commission of William Whittemore, Esq. of Wilton, who is 94 years of age. He has held a commission since 1847. He performs the duties of his office as well as any man of forty.

Charles C. McKeen of Nashua hung himself, Saturday.

An East Boston lady awoke from a doze recently, and mistaking a set of jewelry which she held in her hand for apple parings, threw it into the stove.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.

CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.

POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

During be year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its bitterest foes, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its prominence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most watchful, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure whatever money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over One Million and a Half of Dollars. For the results of this outlay it asks from each single subscriber to the WEEKLY, Two Dollars; from each subscriber in a club of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.

The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE'S political course, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, in a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old anti-war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to hold mere party ties as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old land-marks, and will defend the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the Nation's faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the hot partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not for its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country have brought new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how glorious; and that the men to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendations of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.

THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes that the mere organ of politicians can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of whatever party solely on its individual merits; commends the President where it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him where it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-avowed principles, and values any party only as a means for obtaining their triumph; waits on no caucus for its opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance, and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of their rulers. It endeavors to combine the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, has no quarrels with other papers, and never replies to or even notice their personal attacks,—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, for matter its readers want.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the popular favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the hard times of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each weekly (by prepaying postage, 20 cents, and waiving the old charge for separate addresses to club subscribers, 10 cents,) and it asks those who think well of it to reciprocate by kindly efforts to increase its circulation.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. Besides a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full page of the best editorials from the Daily, it contains in every number a greater amount of agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is prepared expressly for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States; while among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department are numbered such men as Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard University, the Hon. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Josiah Hoover, L. B. Arnold and others. As its contributors are in every part of the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the original articles every week are illustrated with wood-cuts. The market quotations of farm produce, cattle, provisions, breadstuffs, dry-goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The utmost care is bestowed upon the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the print is always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

Marvellous Beyond Precedent

Why Is It Popular?

Ask any fair-minded physician, or any family in which it has been used, ask the whole Drug trade, why HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR is so popular. The answer will be that the cures of inveterate coughs, which it is everywhere effecting, are the topics of conversation in every city, town and village in the United States. Its enormous and constantly increasing sales are based upon the grand fact, notorious throughout the whole country, that it controls and masters every disease leading to consumption.

A Lucky Journeyman.

A Journeyman carriage-maker in April last purchased a ticket to the Grand Gift Concert of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., and when the distribution took place he received a sufficient amount of money to buy a lot, and build thereon a neat and comfortable residence, which will be a home for himself and family during their lives. The second and last Gift Concert of this Association will be given on Tuesday, December 29th, and we would advise all who desire to obtain one or more of the large prizes which will be given to the lucky ticket-holders to send without delay for tickets. The Concert will not be postponed; it will be conducted by gentlemen of high character, and Masons and others can place implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of all connected with the management of the drawing. Send to Henry V. Moore, Sec'y, Norfolk, Va., for tickets, or Branch Office, Nos. 78 and 80 Broadway, New York.

An Absolute Safeguard.

Invalids, broken down in health and spirits by chronic dyspepsia, or suffering from the terrible exhaustion which follows the attacks of acute disease, the testimony of thousands who have been raised as by a miracle from a similar state of prostration by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is a sure guarantee that by the same means you too may be strengthened and restored. But to those who stand in peril of epidemics, to all who, by reason of exposure, privations and uncongenial climate or unhealthy pursuits, may at any moment be stricken down, this paragraph is most particularly and emphatically addressed. You who are thus situated are proffered an absolute safeguard against the danger that menaces you. Tone and regulate the system with this harmless medicinal stimulant and alterative, and you will be forearmed against the maladies whose seeds float around you in the air unseen.

Local Matters.

The Fire.

About half-past three o'clock, Monday morning, two watchmen in Bridge street discovered flames in the direction of Raynes' ship-yard, a locality they had just left a few minutes before. Some incendiary had set fire to the mould-loft formerly used as a spool factory, and the wind blowing heavily from the north-east made the building a roaring mass of flames. Clouds of sparks were blown across the North millpond and beyond Dover street, the light clouds throwing back a reflection that caused people to swarm to the scene by thousands. The extinguishers saved the ship "Chocorua," which is nearly ready for launching, but the vessel was badly scorched, the flames being driven directly toward it. It is evident that the incendiary desired to burn the ship, the tide being out and the wind fair for the purpose. The flying cinders ignited limbs of trees in the ship-yard and fanned the flames to a brisk blaze. A light snow had fallen on Sunday and protected the roofs of buildings, saving the city from a conflagration which might have been a thousand fold more disastrous. As it was, the loss falls heavily on many persons who could ill afford it. The building was used as a store-house for patterns, ship finishings, and cabin furniture, which were all destroyed, the wheels and rudder of the new ship included. A fine sail-boat which cost $200 two years ago, belonging to Mr. Plumer D. Norton, was burned, as also a dory and two shell-boats, the dory being owned by Mr. Norton. Dr. James R. May owned one shell and Mr. Norton and Mr. James H. Dow the other. Mr. Norton intended insuring his boat last Saturday, but neglected it. He saved the mast and sail. Two boats belonging to the ship were burned and a large lot of Mr. William F. Fernald's lumber. Pendexter and Wilson, who were doing the joiner work for the ship, are the losers of a large portion of the finished stock. The losses to the Raynes estate is about $1500, the building being insured. The stock, boats and tools destroyed were worth about $5000. Some twenty-five joiners and carpenters lost their chests of tools, all being uninsured. The fire will delay the completion and launching of the ship for three weeks.

An African Suicide.

A colored man named George Mitchell, living on Pray street, meditated suicide below the knees on Sunday evening. Jealousy was the cause. His wife stayed out a little later than he thought she should, the night previous, and after she returned Mitchell commenced breaking up housekeeping, which necessitated the appearance of the police, who escorted George to the station, where he remained until Sunday evening, making threats that he would before long be planted at the South cemetery. After returning home he importuned Peter Williams to loan him a knife to draw across his sable throat. Peter's knife being too dull he asked if George desired to die, to which George replied in the affirmative. "Are you going to heaven?" queried Pete, and George petulantly burst out with the negative answer: "I don't want to: I had rather go to the other place." Peter cogitated and thought himself a thought. Then he took George by the hand, bade him a kind farewell and advised him to jump into the river. Away went the disconsolate George to the lower end of Pray street and without further ado leaped high in air and deposited his feet at the bottom of two feet of salt water. Then sober thought, of the second variety struck him and he waded ashore and travelled homeward minus jealousy, minus broodiug grief and one shoe. He had cast his burden of mind on the ocean's bosom and the shock to his nerves had made him once again a man. As he shuffled to the scene of his every day life, the guffaws of the neighbors could not be repressed. Some thought Peter heartless and favored rescuing George, but Peter's remark that they would "see that nigger back again in a minute" quieted them and was prophetic, for George vigorously put in a reappearance, his countenance sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, and his pant legs weeping copious briny moistness. Frye & Co's express carried an order to Boston on Monday for a new invoice of buttons to replace those lost by Peter during his brief season of merriment, and he affirms that he shall laugh and grow fat every time he sees "that foolish colored man." Living down his mad jealousy, with calm command over his erst roused feelings, George still hopes for brighter days and fond communion with his once distrusted superior moiety.

Official Carelessness.

The folly of making changes in the office of Chief Engineer of the fire department on account of politics was manifest at Monday's fire. For nearly an hour after the fire was discovered, Sagamore S. F. Engine No. 2 could not be of service because the stops in the reservoir in F. W. Rogers' wood-yard were covered with ice. We heard an indignant policeman threatening that he would put Mr. Rogers in the lock-up because he had been told that Mr. R. refused to tell where the stops were because a new party was in power. Seeking Mr. Rogers we found that the reservoir, which contained 25,000 gallons of water, had been opened and the steamer was commencing to work. Mr. Rogers said that he was unable to tell the exact place where the stops were located, and that those endeavoring to find them acted like a "pack of wolves." Being blamed for not keeping the stops uncovered, he informed them that for four years previous the Chief Engineer had detailed a man to keep the stops uncovered and clear from ice, but since the democracy came in power it had been neglected. As it was no business of his to perform the duties of sworn officials, no blame could be attached to him. After a long hunt the stops were found, but the fire was nearly out. Ex-Chief Engineer Marston, who was rotated to make room for a democrat, was always prepared for a fire in any locality, and by his foresight saved valuable time by holding every man in the department directly responsible for any neglect of duty, and by visiting the reservoirs and water mains regularly, and arranging his plans for any emergency. The tide being out on Monday morning, it was important that the reservoir at the wood-yard should have been ready for immediate use. The light snowfall of Sunday covered the roofs of the buildings and prevented a more general conflagration which, aided by careless neglect, might have destroyed half the city. The moral of all this is that when the right man is in the right place he should be kept there regardless of his politics.

Eastern Railroad.

The Commercial Bulletin offers some comments upon this well known railroad, the stock of which has fluctuated a few dollars within a few weeks. The Bulletin says: "Eastern has come in for a liberal share of attention, the ball ring having manipulated the price up to 57 on Wednesday. Later it fell off, and at the close was quoted at 53 3-4. It really seems too bad that an old and well known stock like the Eastern, which has been, in times past, looked upon as next in solidity to the rocks along our eastern shore, should become a football for brokers to kick about; yet such is inevitably to be the case, and, unless some piece of good luck which no one can now foresee, comes upon the Eastern Road, its market price will not of necessity be an indicator of the true value of its shares. It has been somewhat unfortunate in its relations with other roads, and has had a hard time generally, but despite all this, if those who would hold and have held it as an investment could only afford to hold on, and stand by the Board of Directors in all efforts to make good the losses of the past by wiser measures in the future, we are satisfied that the time would come when their patience would be rewarded, and the pleasant feature of regularly occurring dividends would again be known in connection with Eastern."

Laconics.

Don't forget the lecture on "Language" at Mechanics' Hall this evening, commencing at half past 7 o'clock. If stormy, it will be postponed to a future evening.

At the fire, Monday morning, Mr. Samuel H. Kingsbury received a severe cut from an axe in the hands of a member of the Hook & Ladder Co. One was using a crowbar, and the other the axe, which descending cut through the buck-skin glove on Mr. Kingsbury's right hand, and inflicted a wound across it.

C. H. Mendum & Co. announce that their holiday gifts must be closed out this week.

Capt. E. S. Warsaw, commander of the burned steamer Japan, was a Portsmouth man. Capt. Thomas A. Harris and wife were passengers on board the steamer which sailed from San Francisco Nov. 14th, and it is probable had been landed at Yokohama where they were bound, before the terrible disaster, which is said to have occurred near Houg Kong. The Japan is the eighth vessel which the Pacific Mail Company has lost in the last five years, including the Bienville, which was only chartered by the company, and the Alaska, which went ashore at Hong Kong, but will, it is hoped, be got afloat again. Her commander, Captain Warsaw, has been in the employ of the Pacific Mail Company for eight or ten years, and is regarded as one of their most experienced officers.

The Adventists will hold their campmeeting at Alton next August and at Seabrook the week following.

The next annual convention of the New England Amateur Printers' Association will be holden in this city in February, at the Rockingham House.

Parties are in Washington urging for a signal station at the Isles of Shoals.

The Cabot street bell ringer soon gets out of breath, judging by the collapse of the alarm on Monday, and the fact that the clapper only touched one side of the bell. Get thoroughly acquainted with the bell some time, Mr. Bell Ringer, and ring it as if you meant business and wasn't in the ninety-ninth stage of consumption.

Mr. Edward N. Anderson, who for twenty years or more has been porter at the navy yard, died after a severe illness just after midnight of Sunday. He was a member of St. Andrew's Lodge of Masons. Mr. Anderson's trips across the river during his term of service would equal twice the distance round the world.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, while possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1875.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE.

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English story-writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE EVENINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press, is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivalled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PAID, with one year's subscription, for $30; the same, charges NOT paid, $16. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $35; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20. The Postage on all New subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

SCRIBNER & CO.,

NO. 654 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of St. Nicholas, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of its great, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. 1.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

All Postage will be Prepaid by us.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the price of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

William Shakspeare.

[Prepared by Dr. A. P. Stevens.]

"William Shakespeare was born at Stratford-on-Avon, in the county of Warwick, in April, 1564. There is a pleasant and poetical tradition, that he was born on the 23d of the month, the anniversary of Saint George, the tutelar Saint of England; but all we know with certainty, is that he was baptized on the 26th. His father, John Shakespeare, was a woolcomber or glover, who had elevated his social position by marriage with a rustic heiress, Mary Arden, possessed of an estate worth about £70 per annum of our present money. The poet's father rose to be high bailiff and chief alderman of Stratford; but in 1578, he is found mortgaging his wife's inheritance, and from entries in the townbook, is supposed to have fallen into comparative poverty. William was the eldest of six surviving children, and after some education at the grammar school, he is said to have been brought home to assist at his father's business. There is a blank in his history for some years, but doubtless he was engaged, whatever might be his circumstances or employment, in treasuring up materials for his future poetry. The study of man and of nature, facts in natural history, the country, the field, and the woods would be gleaned by familiar intercourse and observation among his fellow townsmen, and in rambling over the beautiful valley of the Avon. It has been conjectured that he was some time in a lawyer's office, as his works abound in technical legal phrases and illustrations. This has always seemed to us highly probable. The London players were also then in the habit of visiting Stratford:—Thomas Green, an actor, was a native of the town; and Burbage, the greatest performer of his day (the future Rickard, Hamlet and Othello,) were originally from Warwickshire. Who can doubt then that the high bailiff's son from the years of twelve to twenty, was a frequent and welcome visitant behind the scenes?—that here he imbibed the tastes and feelings which colored all his future life—and that he there felt the first stirrings of his immortal genius! We are persuaded that he began to write long before he left Stratford, and had most probably sketched, if not completed, his Venus and Adonis and the Lucrece. The grammar-school has been made a question of eager scrutiny and controversy. Ben Johnson says he had 'little Latin, and less Greek.' This is not denying that he had some. Many Latin idioms and expressions are to be found in his plays. The choice of two classical subjects for his early poetry, and the numerous felicitous allusions in his dramas to the mythology of the ancients, show that he was imbued with the spirit and taste of classical literature, and was a happy student if not a critical scholar.

His mind was too comprehensive to degenerate into pedantry; but when, at the age of four or five and twenty, he took the field of original dramatic composition, in company with the university-bred authors and wits of his times, he soon distanced them all in correctness as well as facility, in the intellectual richness of his thoughts and diction, and in the wide ranges of his acquired knowledge. It may be safely assured, therefore, that at Stratford he was a hard, though perhaps an irregular student. The precocious maturity of Shakespeare's passions hurried him into a premature marriage. On the 28th of November, 1582, he obtained a license at Worcester, legalizing his union with Anne Hathaway, with once asking the banns.

Two of her neighbors became security in the sum of £40 that the poet would fulfil his matrimonial engagement, he being a minor and unable legally to contract for himself. Anne Hathaway was seven years older than her husband. She was the daughter of a "substantial yoeman," of the village of Shottery, about a mile from Stratford. The hurry and anxiety with respect to the marriage license is explained by the register of baptism in the poet's native town; his daughter Susanna was christened on the 26th of May, 1583, six months after the marriage. In a year and a half, two other children, twins, were born to Shakespeare, who had no family afterward. We may readily suppose that the small town of Stratford did not offer scope for the ambition of the poet, now arrived at early manhood, and feeling the ties of a husband and a father, he removed to London in 1586 or 1587. It has been said his departure was hastened by the effects of a lampoon he had written on a neighboring squire, Sir Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote, in revenge for Sir Thomas persecuting him for deer-stealing. The story is inconsistent in its details. Part of it must be untrue; it was never recorded against him in his life time; and the whole may have been built upon the opening scene in the Merry Wives of Windsor (not written till after Sir Thomas Lucy's death,) in which there is the same wanton writ on the armorial bearings of the Lucy family. The tale, however, is now associated so intimately with the name of Shakespeare, that considering the obscurity which rests, and probably will ever rest on his history, there seems little likelihood of its ever ceasing to have a place in the public mind. Shakespeare soon rose to distinction in the theatre. He was a shareholder in the Blackfriar Company, within two or three years after his arrival; of the fifteen shareholders of the theatre in November, 1588, Shakespeare's name is the eleventh on the list. In 1597, his name is the fifth in a list of only eight proprietors; and in 1606, he was second in the new patent granted by king James. It appears from recent discoveries made by Mr. Collier, that the wardrobe and stage properties afterward belonged to Shakespeare, and with the shares which he possessed, were estimated at £1400, equal to between £6000 and £7000 of our present money. He was also a proprietor of the Globe Theatre; and at the lowest computation, his income must have been £300 a year, or £1500 at the present day. As an actor, Shakespeare is said by a contemporary (supposed to be Lord Southampton) to have been of good account in the company; but the cause of his unexampled success was his immortal dramas, the delightand wonder of his age. "That so did take Elizabeth and our James," as Ben Johnson has recorded. Up to 1611, the whole of Shakespeare's plays (thirty-seven in number, according to the first folio edition) are supposed to have been produced. With the nobles, the wits, and poets of his day, he was in familiar intercourse. The "gentle Shakespeare," as he was usually styled, was throned in all hearts. But notwithstanding his brilliant success in the metropolis, the poet early looked forward to a permanent retirement to the country. He visited Stratford once a year, and when wealth flowed in upon him, he purchased property in his native town and its vicinity. He bought New Place, the principle house in Stratford, in 1602; he gave £320 for 107 acres of land adjoining to his purchase; and in 1605, he paid £440 for the lease of the tithes of Stratford. The latest entry of his name among the king's players is in 1604, but he was living in London in 1609. The year 1612 has been assigned as the date of his retirement to the country. In the fulness of his fame, with a handsome competency, and before age had chilled the enjoyment of life, the poet returned to his native town to spend the remainder of his days among the quiet scenes and the friends of his youth. His parents were both dead, but their declining years had been gladdened with the prosperity of their illustrious son. Four years were spent by Shakespeare in their dignified retirement, and the history of literature scarcely presents another such picture of calm felicity and satisfied ambition. He died on the 23d of April, 1616, having just completed his fifty-second year His widow survived him seven years. His two daughters were both married (his only son Hammet had died in 1596,) and one of them had three sons; but all of these died without issue, and there remains no lineal representation of the great poet."

—A full expose of the Katie King swindle has been made in Philadelphia, the facts having been obtained from a gentleman who unearthed the fraud. He traced the supposed Katie to a boarding house, and after a long continued effort, persuaded her to confess the deception she had been practicing and to produce the gauzy dresses she wore at the manifestations. The production of the latter with a large lot of jewelry, etc., that had been presented to Katie at seances, induced Robert Dale Owen and Dr. Child, two leading spiritualists of that city, to publicly repudiate the swindle.

Pulmocine Cordial.
BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!
Relieve Your Lungs.
For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,
PULMOCINE CORDIAL
Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, etc.,
—USE—
Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.
PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.
THE ALDINE,
—THE—
Art Journal of America,
ISSUED MONTHLY,
"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."
THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the gem by of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times the cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!
The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.
PREMIUM FOR 1875.
Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.
"Man's Unselfish Friend"
Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.
THE ALDINE ART UNION.
The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series are made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.
TERMS.
One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,
SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.
(No charge for postage.)

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or clubbing rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or remitted to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy testers to uphold him in what he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the Book of references, WORKS, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are always in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never present to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where true merit is too often absent. THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.
CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.
POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
During the year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its bitterest foes, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its preeminence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most watchful, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure whatever money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over One Million and a Half of Dollars. For the results of this outlay it asks from each single subscriber to the WEEKLY, Two Dollars; from each subscriber in a club of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.
The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE's political courses, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, for a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old anti-war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to hold mere party ties as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old land-marks, and will defend the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the Nation's faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the blind partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not for its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country have brought new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how glorious; and that the men to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendations of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.
THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes that the mere organ of politicians can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of whatever party solely on its intrinsic moral merits; commends the President where it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him where it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-avowed principles, and values any party only as a means for obtaining their triumph; wails on no caucus for its opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance, and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of their rulers. It endeavors to combine the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, has no quarrels with other papers, and never replies to or even notices their personal attacks,—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, for matter its readers want.
From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the popular favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the hard times of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each weekly (by prepaying postage, 20 cents, and waiving the old charge for separate addresses to club subscribers, in one year) and it asks those who think well of it to reciprocate by kindly efforts to increase its circulation.
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. Besides a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full, practical and best editorials from the Daily, it contains in every number a greater amount of agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is now so expensive for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States, while among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department are numbered such men as Prof. Asa Gray, of Harvard University, Hon. Hon. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Joseph Hooker, L. B. Arnold and others. As its contributors for every year from the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the choicest articles every week are illustrated with woodcuts. The market quotations of grain, provisions, cattle, produce, breadstuffs, dry-goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The usual care is taken to make the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the print is always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

Presidential Expenses.

[Washington Cor. Boston Globe.]

There has always been a popular misapprehension concerning the cost of living in the Executive Mansion. Previous to the war, when everything was cheaper than now, it was seldom suggested that the President's salary of $25,000 a year was inadequate to his support. Quite a number of the ante-bellum Presidents retired from office comparatively poor, but this fact was never regarded nor used as an argument in favor of increasing the compensation of the executive. Their poverty was almost uniformly due to their want of tact and shrewdness in the management of their private affairs or to their utter want of appreciation of the value of money. Of the former, Thomas Jefferson was a notable illustration, and Franklin Pierce of the latter. I have heard Colonel John W. Forney, the intimate friend of Pierce all through his administration, say that the New Hampshire statesman was frequently known to give money out of his own pocket to mediocant office-seekers when he could not secure them a place at the public crib. His successor, James Buchanan, with his shrewd, thrifty Pennsylvania training, knew the value of ten cents—you remember the Fremont-Buchanan campaign song entitled "Ten Cent Jimmy"—and saved money during his term, besides maintaining the fame of the White House for elegant and liberal hospitality. Buchanan's dinner parties both before and after he became President were models in every respect. He always superintended the preparations for them himself, even to the most minute details, and calculated their cost in advance to within a few dollars. During the war, when the premium on gold advanced to 185, and everything else went booming up with it, contractors and others, who had suddenly come into possession of large sums of money, which they scarcely knew how to expend, wondered how "poor Lincoln" lived on $25,000 a year. The truth is, Mr. Lincoln not only managed to live on this sum, but to save something. But for the wild, shoddy extravagance of his wife, he might have saved more, for his own habits and tastes, as well as those of his children, were exceedingly frugal and simple. It was among the gossip of the times that Mrs. Lincoln had other resources, besides the purse of the President, upon which she drew, and there was probably something in it, for her ballooning ideas of living, if humored, must necessarily have swamped Lincoln. The "household," under Andrew Johnson, was most economically administered by his daughters, two sensible, unpretending ladies, who were general favorites, even when their father was a sort of Ishmaelite, politically and socially. Johnson saved between $60,000 and $70,000 out of his salary, but, unfortunately for him, it was grabbed by those Christian bankers, Jay Cooke & Co., in whom poor Andy, like many other misguided persons, placed some confidence.

General Grant is unquestionably the most thrifty President who has occupied the Executive Mansion for years, not even excepting James Buchanan. He will retire at the close of his term the richest of all our Presidents. His extraordinary and uniform good fortune has followed him in the investment of his money as in everything else, and every "talent" has been made to yield a full harvest. Grant's habits and tastes like those of Mr. Lincoln, are very frugal and simple. He has one weakness which, in other men, might lead to extravagance, namely an inordinate fondness for horseflesh. But with his "canny" Scotch shrewdness, he indulges this luxury at comparatively little expense to himself. He is a good judge of a horse and has been known to make some very advantageous "trades" or "swaps." It is said that famous Michigander, who is the terror of the British lion—Zach. Chandler—once sold Grant a pair of horses which did not turn out as represented, and which he purchased on Chandler's word, without having seen them. If the Senator expected to "sell" the President as well as the horses, he was doomed to disappointment, for Grant did not drive them half a dozen times until he discovered their weak points, and he made Chandler take them back and refund. The President's St. Louis farm, which is stocked with some of the best blooded animals in the country, furnishes him all the horses he needs at comparatively little cost. But for the fact that a regular annual sale of thoroughbreds at the St. Louis farm, such as take place at the leading stock farms of Kentucky, might furnish a column or so of scandal for the New York Sun and papers of that ilk, it is probable Grant could make as good a display of fine colts as McDaniel, Alexander, McGrath or the late John Harper. As it is, the surplus stock is quietly worked off privately, yielding, it is said, a good profit. Mrs. Grant, though not the handsomest woman in America, is perhaps one of the best managers. The fact of his having such a wife is only another illustration of Grant's rare luck. If he knows how to fight a battle and drive a horse, she understands all about housekeeping, marketing, shopping, and how to keep the buttons on the children's clothes. These are excellent accomplishments in any woman, or rather they were so regarded when Mrs. Grant was a girl. That was before it was considered the acme of a young lady's glory to be able to "dance the German," and fritter away the hours of an evening with small talk to a vealy, brainless booby. From what I have said of the habits and tastes of the President and of the character of Mrs. Grant, you will not be surprised to learn that Grant saves more of his salary than any of his predecessors. The household of the executive mansion is run on economical principles, and yet there is no lack of hospitality. It is very seldom that it is without a guest or two of some kind. In addition to the customary "State dinners," which consist of members of the Cabinet, of the Diplomatic Corps, Justices of the Supreme Court and mobs of Congressmen, the family or private dining room is frequently the scene of quiet little dinners composed of the President's personal friends. I have heard bon vivants say that the President's dinners are nothing to brag of, either in point of substance or service. In his early days Grant lacked the training which would enable him to compete, in this line, with men like Sam Hooper or the late Charles Sumner. He is not much of a judge of wines, and his stock is mostly selected at random. Champagne is about the only wine for which he has any partiality, and his taste for it is rather acquired than natural.

News and Notes.

The Portland Press believes in "the holy republican party, but not in all the saints."

The President has issued a proclamation commanding all turbulent and disorderly persons in Warren county, Miss., to avoid transgressions of the laws, and to repair to their respective abodes within five days of the date of the proclamation.

The New York Nation has "never met a man of the present day who advocated unlimited issues of paper money who had not a queer look about the eye."

W. P. Ricker of Falmouth, Me, on Tuesday last, placed a tea kettle, with a preparation of opodildoc, on the stove, when it exploded, blowing out the windows of the room and damaging a large amount of valuable goods in the room. Several persons narrowly escaped injury.

The Biddeford Times, always a live paper, is to have a new dress and a new editor, Mr. J. G. Abbott.

Advices from Spain give the report that the army under the republican general, Lopez Domenaquez, had suffered a severe defeat at the hands of the Carlists. It is reported that a German brig was fired on by the Carlists in the harbor of Guetaria, and the vessel afterward sfanding, the boats were fired upon while the republicans were rescuing the crew.

During a furious storm recently, the lightning struck the powder magazine in Scutari, Turkey, and caused a terrible explosion. A portion of the city wall was overthrown, many houses demolished and 200 persons killed and wounded.

The House of Representatives has refused to suspend the rules and adopt a resolution against granting subsidies in aid of private enterprises, the motion lacking the necessary two-thirds vote. The arrest of Irwin for contempt was ordered, and the House adjourned over the holidays.

State News.

Mrs. C. H. Varnum, of Peterboro, fell twenty feet from the high beams to the barn floor a few days since. She was alone, and laid insensible some time before she was discovered. We do not learn that any bones were broken, but the jar to her system was severe, and her escape from death miraculous.

Mary Sawyer of Antrim, a girl about 13 years old, attempted suicide by hanging on Saturday night, 12th inst. She had been corrected by her mistress, Mrs. Greeley, and retired to bed about five o'clock; soon after a strange noise was heard by an occupant of another room adjoining hers. Mr. Greeley hastened to her room and found her with a cord around her neck, tied to the bed post, and she in bed, having placed herself in a position to tighten the cord. She was unconscious, but revived, with medical aid, about eleven o'clock.

'n Horatio, lately burned at Shang-hae, was commanded by Captain W. W. Hardy, of Dover.

In 1661 the duties of Portsmouth schoolmasters were as follows: "To act as a court messenger, to serve summonses, to lead the choir on Sundays, to ring the bell for public worship. To dig the graves, to take charge of the school, and to perform other occasional duties."

A Frenchman named John Fournier was frozen to death Friday night near Glen Ellis Falls, on his way to Bartlett to obtain work. He has for several months lived at Berlin Falls.

The water in Winnipesaukee Lake is unprecedentedly low, for this season of the year.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 21.

Among the improvements in Washington there are none which equal the improvements in market houses. Down to four years ago the markets were in the most dilapidated rookeries imaginable, in which were sold everything from old hinges, old horse shoes and tin ware, to dry goods, fruit, fresh poultry, vegetables and meats; with roots and herbs, live animals and tame fowls on the outside edges as a kind of embroidery. About that time a bill passed Congress to incorporate the Market House Company. The first parties who got possession of it, were so loaded with free stockholders that it broke down and they were glad to abandon it. A second trial with the bulk of the stock in the hands of New England men, resulted in building Centre Market, one of the best market houses in the country. Since that time another elegant market has been built on Capitol Hill, and a combination of the butchers and market men have just about completed another elegant and commodious market house, about half a mile north of the Centre Market. So in the matter of market houses, Washington is now better supplied than any other city in the country, and all within four years. The Centre Market was the pioneer and is now in trouble. It is on land leased from the government. Congress authorized the District government to procure the front land on Pennsylvania avenue, where by the charter the Market Company were to build a fine block. After obtaining the land the District government dug a large hole for basements and foundations and then became bankrupt, and now comes in Morrill of Vermont, who wants to compel the Market Company to finish the building, which the District government failed to do. He began by charging the Market Company with a violation of their charter. The Market Company assert that Morrill was instigated by the Ring who failed to get free paid up stock for lobby work and influence. The choice of stalls was sold for two years, which expired last July, and Morrill's raid encouraged and stimulated a combination of butchers and others who have built up the new market to demand that a new choice of stalls shall not be resold and that the market shall be shut up every other day for the benefit of their new market. Morrill found the Market Company sound every way, except in not building the avenue front, and to escape the responsibility of going farther had the matter turned over the other day in the Senate to the Judiciary Committee, because there was nothing involved but a law question. This leaves the Market Company waiting the action of Congress and in a contest with the butchers' combination, which has always ruled the city in market matters heretofore. The strange thing is what started Morrill of Vermont on a raid against the Market Company, which is a New England enterprise, with seven out of thirteen Directors natives of New Hampshire. It is devoutly to be hoped that before the controversy is over, the people will get cheaper and better meats.

Morrill of Maine has his bill for the government of the District before Congress, which is not likely to pass without great modification.

The King of the Sandwich Islands is just now the hero of the nobbies and flunkies. He is located at the Arlington in grand style, and his servants furnished champagne as regular drink. It is so recently that republican Hayti was refused acknowledgement lest we should have a diplomat with a kink in his hair, that this slobbering over colored royalty seems disgusting, or will when the bills are paid. He and his suite are a very fair looking set of men of modest behavior, who lord it over about fifty thousand people in the capacity of a King and his court. Fifty years ago there were about three times that number, and when Capt. Cook discovered the islands the population was estimated at four hundred thousand.

This decimation of the people of the Sandwich Islands, comes from the almost universal prostitution of the native population. The King himself is reported to be a decendant of a New Bedford seaman who was shipwrecked and found favor in the Islands and became the husband of the daughter of the old King. The authority for this story is the Salt Lake Tribune, which claims to have the account from a cousin of his majesty. The King is not to be blamed for his home or his ancestry, as he was not consulted about those matters, and he is entitled to credit for progress and preferring the bill of fare at the Arlington to missionary soup. What provokes me is to see democrats and republicans who have been horrified by the civil rights bill which lets negroes into the schools and graveyards, cutting and running after this result of miscegenation decked with royalty. King Kalakaua behaves remarkably well and modest among these flunkeys. Both Senate and House adjourned over to Monday, after giving him a formal reception. In democratic eyes the scent of royalty had overcome that of color.

The ladies have been holding a continued tea party in the rotunda of the Capitol, which has been financially successful and I suppose will mollify the opposition of last year so they will vote what Philadelphia wants for the centennial celebration of 1874.

The caucuses which are to fix up a line of policy and of measures to be supported have not been able to accomplish anything as yet; and it is quite doubtful if they will be able to agree upon any bills. In the mean time the House is making good progress with the appropriation bills.

A few days since I met Gen. Joseph C. Abbott, formerly of the Manchester American and Adjutant General of New Hampshire. He is now collector of the Port of Wilmington, N. C., and is extensively engaged in the lumber business and farming. The General says lumbermen are generally "piling up," but his company have been fortunate, furnishing cars for the Carolina railroad. Within a month a dozen or fifteen settlers have come into his neighborhood from the grasshopper region of Kansas. Quite an addition from some sections have recently found homes in Virginia, bordering on the Potomac.

Quite a delegation from Portsmouth are stopping at the Imperial, with the old landlord of the Rockingham. He has made great improvements in the house, and everything betokens one of the best hotels kept in Washington. I hear it is to be the headquarters of the women who hold a suffrage convention here about the middle of January, who have heretofore gone to the Arlington.

The democratic attack upon the Education Bureau, is unkind, but then they look upon it as an enemy of democracy.

The democracy are getting exercised over the Speakership of the next house. The two prominent eastern men, Fernando Wood and Sam Randall, are salary grabbers and advocates of it. Cox is too liberal, and if the grabbers are ruled out, they want it to go west and get the chairmanship of the important committees. Kerr of Indiana is opposed by the inflationist element, which puts them much at sea, in the selection.

The weather as the week closes is very fine and mild. Not much like yours early in the week.

Fashionable society has not got under much headway. Hard times reaches even the fashionable world, and curtails its extravagancies. It is more fashionable to be in mourning for some friend. Besides it is economical. The poor of Washington are having hard times. No district work, with less government employment, has cut off the resources of those who live by labor.

Edward S. Stokes' Case.

It has been rumored for several days that Edward S. Stokes had recently applied to Gov. Dix for a pardon, and that the Governor had expressed his opinion that Stokes will have served the full term of his sentence on the 6th of January, and will then be able to bid farewell to Sing Sing. A representative of the Sun visited the prison, and had a talk with Stokes. Stokes was suffering from asthma, and was pale, and at first gloomy. When asked about the application for pardon he said:

"I will be frank with you. My friends have communicated with Gov. Dix, and he refuses to grant an absolute pardon in my case. His reasons are:

"First—The application was deferred to so late a day that he thought it unfair to expect him to decide, on the verge of his retiring from office, so notorious a case as mine.

"Second—The fact that my full term of imprisonment did not expire until six days after he left office, would of itself be an insuperable objection, even should there be no other.

"You can imagine how annoying such reasons are (particularly after all the legal punishment I had endured,) that six days should be made a fatal objection; and especially is it so when it is known that I laid in the prison, month after month, purposely deferring any presentment until I should have first suffered the full penalty of the law. I expected thereby to avoid refusal upon any just grounds, and those six days are now made an insuperable objection. Here is the Governor's letter to my father:

"DEAR SIR: A few hours after you were here at my house I received the application you referred to for the pardon of your son. I regret to say that I cannot entertain it.

"On the calculation made, the time during which he has been imprisoned would not reach that of his sentence until the 6th of January. I shall not then be in office; and if there were no other objection to my action in the case, that would be insuperable. I am respectfully yours,

JOHN A. DIX."

While the reporter was in conversation with Stokes, an intimate friend of the prisoner called. He had visited the Governor. When he heard the letter read he said:

"Well, this is astonishing. It is all humbug on the part of Dix, making those six days an insuperable objection."

Stokes (shaking his head)—"I am not sure about that. I understand that he is willing to commute, and have heard that he has promised to reconsider the objection expressed in his letter. I am inclined to believe that he will do what is right. I have, on the 6th of January, suffered an imprisonment of the full term prescribed in law, and on that ground, alone, should be discharged.

Stokes' visitor said, "You are all right yet. Gov. Tilden will not support exceptional punishment in your case, notoriety or no notoriety. He believes in equality of justice to all. There is no use hoping for anything from Dix. There is a rumor that your counsel, Mr. John R. Dos Passos, will on the 6th of January, take you out on a habeas corpus, and demand your discharge on the ground that you have served the full penalty."

Stokes—"I object to any such course. There is no doubt in my mind that I have served four years—under the law—in Sing Sing prison and the city prison, but I must submit to the Governor's ruling on that point. It is his duty to see that justice is administered."

At this time Stokes was called away to attend to some machinery which had been thrown out of gear. When he had put it in shape he returned to the office and said that he hoped to return, very shortly, to private life; that he had not given up all hopes as far as Gov. Dix was concerned, and had the most implicit faith in Tilden.

Was it Charlie Ross?

[N. Y. Sun.]

The theory that the body of the boy found in Newark Bay some five weeks ago was that of Charley Ross does not seem to meet with much favor from the New York police, though that Superintendent Walling gives it some measure of attention is shown by the fact that a detective was occupied all Saturday in endeavoring to unravel the mystery. The circumstances attending the finding of the body have been related more than once, and almost always with the object of showing that the remains were not those of Charley Ross; but, singularly enough, no attention whatever has been paid to the most suggestive and suspicious incident in the connection—the body of the boy was dressed in girl's clothes, and every article was entirely new. This, taken in conjunction with the unmistakable likeness between the portrait of Charley Ross and the child taken from the bay at Bergen Point, would undoubtedly afford reasonable ground for the supposition that the boy stolen from Philadelphia met his death at the hands of his abductors in the waters of Newark Bay; and this is the opinion of nearly every one who saw the body of the drowned boy.

The body was found on the 17th of last November. The tide had cast it upon the rocks at Bergen Point, where it was first discovered by an old oysterman, who told Officer Connolly what he had seen. The remains were taken to the Morgue, where a difference of opinion arose as to the probable age of the boy. Chief of Police Whitney thought he could not have been more than three or three and a half years old, but he admits that he may have been mistaken, and the majority of those who saw the body fix the age at four years at the lowest. The hair was light and silky and cut short; the eyes were blue, and the forehead high. Though the remains had been some weeks in the water, the cheeks were full and dimpled, though other portions of the body had been eaten by fishes. The clothes, as already mentioned, were those of a girl. The stockings, which were striped red and white, bore the appearance of never having been washed since they were purchased. A red and black woollen hood, which had fallen off the head, probably by the action of the water, hung from the neck by a blue ribbon, the ends of which were fastened to holes in the hood made with a knife. The dress was also red and black, and of the same material as the hood. The underclothes were of white flannel, and the feet were enclosed in clumsy shoes, much too large, and such as might have been purchased at random. It was at first supposed that the remains were those of a girl, and when it was announced by the doctor that this was not the case some one suggested that it might be the Ross boy, but at first very few shared this belief. It is worthy of note that at the time the body was found Mosher and Douglas were lying a short distance off the shore in their sloop.

Chief Whitney supposed the child had fallen into the water from a canal boat, and in this belief he inserted advertisements in several papers, and sent postal cards bearing a description of the body to all places where such boats load or discharge. No claimant appeared for the remains, however, and after the inquest, which resulted in a verdict by accidental death, they were buried by the county at Snake Hill.

Very soon, however, some one who had seen a portrait of Charley Ross remarked the similarity of the features to those of the boy drowned in the bay. Residents of Bayonne and Bergen Point interested themselves in the matter, and even Chief Whitney admitted, on seeing the likeness, that the features were the same, and added that if he could believe that the boy whose body had been cast ashore was four years old he would certainly incline to the opinion that he was Charley Ross. On Saturday the portrait was shown to several of the residents of Bergen Point, and every one of them was struck by the likeness to the boy buried at Snake Hill. A great many entertained no doubt whatever that the latter was, indeed, Charley Ross; Chief Whitney told the writer that among the persons who had seen the body, his opinion that it was not that of the missing boy, stood in a minority of about one to fifty. Had the hair been cut off, he said, and the expression less animated, the portrait shown him as that of Charley Ross would have been an excellent likeness of the boy whose body was cast ashore.

All Same Chop-Chop.

Some ore was stolen from a gold mine in Sierra county, Cal. The Chinamen of the neighborhood were suspected—simply because they were Chinamen as there was no proof against them. Their dwellings were fired by a mob, and when the huts were well ablaze a miner arrived, out of breath with hurrying with the news that the real thieves had been arrested. Some of the mob began to extinguish the fire; but Joe Warren, a sort of leader among them, mounted a box and said: "Look'y here? Mebbe these yeller skins didn't steal the ore. But it's certin they'll steal some time. It's thar natur'. Better let the huts blaze as a kind o' warnin' for' em." Joe's advice was followed.

Masonic.

The following were installed as officers of St. Andrew's Lodge on Monday evening: John Pender, W. M.; Edwin Underhill, S. W.; Geo. E. Hanson, J. W.; W. N. Ilsley, Treas.; Alfred F. Howard, Sec.; Edward P. Sherburne, S. D.; Henry H. Ham, Jr., J. D.; A. C. Hardy, Chaplain; Wm. F. Batten, Marshal: Wm. A. Hodgdon, S. S.; R. H. Beacham, J. S.; Wm. B. Randall, Tyler.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the newly installed officers invited the members to a fine banquet which had been prepared in the upper hall. At the close of the feast, speeches were made by Past Grand Master John R. Holbrook, Chaplain A. C. Hardy, Past Master J. C. Whittier and others. A pleasant episode of the occasion was the presentation of an elegant Past Master's Jewel to Bro. John S. Cutts.

Democratic Discombobulation.

The onward march of Frank Jones' troops has been unobstructed in three of the seven wards, but there are mutterings that fill the air, and if things are not harmonized there will be lively music at this evening's caucus in ward six. We publish a statement this morning from a true-blue democrat who did effective service for the party at the September election, and isn't to be left out in the cold. The strife doesn't seem to be so much over the candidacy as in consequence of too many leaders desiring to be delegates. There may be, however, a division in ward three, because your uncle Daniel (like our good brother Small) thinks he should run for a second term in Congress, notwithstanding he has been defeated three or four times, hardly recognizing the fact that parties with any degree of life in them cannot afford to waste more than four years on men except in exceptional cases where especial ability or remarkable wisdom entitle them pre-eminently to special recognition.

The democrats of the first ward chose Simon H. Mills and Frank Ayers to represent them at the State convention, and Henry R. Stoddard and Chas. W. Stimson as delegates to the Congressional convention. The meeting passed a resolution favoring the nomination of Hon. Frank Jones.

At the ward five democratic caucus, James D. Butler, Samuel W. Moses, Samuel Barrett and Geo. W. Lord were elected delegates to the State convention. Hon. Frank Jones' friends chose Benj. M. Parker, Josiah G. Hadley, Eben G. Adams and Andrew J. Sides to vote for him at the Congressional convention.

Democratic Fugling.

Editor Chronicle; "Fair play and open dealing" is my motto, and in view of this fact, I wish to expose certain democrats of ward six in their dark lantern meetings. Last night seven of the ward six committee met in secret session and nominated a congressional ticket to submit to the caucus on Wednesday evening, not forgetting to put their own names on, and in their zeal selected five names when only four delegates are allowed. The democrats have blowed long and loud about the rings and cliques of republican rule, but we have yet to learn of anything quite so sly and trickish as this little game of our ward committee. WARD SIX DEMOCRAT.

John S. Tilton isn't far out of the way in his statement in our advertising columns that a robe, a whip or a blanket will make a good Christmas present.

Not So Resigned.

The following is a literal copy of a letter written by an English clerk and sexton who desired an increase of salary and offered his resignation, but was surprised at its acceptance:

Dear Revnd. Sir; I avail myself of the opportunity of troubling your honour with these few blundered-up lines, which I hope you will excuse, which is the ony sentiment of your humble servant's heart. I ignorantly, rashly but reluctantly gave warning to leave your higbly and respectful office & most amiable duty as being your servant & clerk of this your most well wished Parish & Place of my succour & support. But dear sir, I well know that it was no fault of yours, or from any of my most worthy parishioners; It were because I thought I were not sufficiently paid for the interments of the silent dead. But will I be a Judas & leave the house of my God for a few peices of silver? No!—Will I be a Peter & deny myself of a office in His Sanctuary & cause me to weep bitterly? No!—Can I be so unreasonable as to deny (if I live & am well) to ring that solemn toll that speaks the departure of a soul? No!—Can I leave of digging the tombs of my neighbors & acquaintances, which I have many a time made me shudder & think of my mortality when I have dug up the mortal remains perhaps, of some as I well knew? No!—Can I abruptly forsake the service of my beloved church of which I have not failed to attend every Sunday for this seven & a half years, save one? No!—Can I leave waiting upon you, a minister of that being that sitteth between the cherubims & fleeth on the wings of the wind? No!—Can I leave that place where one most Holy Service nobly calls forth & says "These whom God hath joined together, & being a married man, let no man put assunder"? No!—And can I leave that ordinance where you say "Thuss & thuss, I baptise thee in the name of the Father, Son & Holy Ghost" & become regenerate, grafted in the body of Jesus? No!—And can I leave of cleaning at Easter the House of God in which I take such delight in looking down her aisles & beholding her sanctuaries & table of the Lord? No!—And can I forsake taking a part in that service of Thanksgiving of women after childbirth when mine own wife has been delivered these ten times? No!—And can I leave off waiting up the Congregation of the Lord which you well know sir is my great delight? No!—And can I forsake the table of the Lord at which I have feasted for I suppose full thirty times? No!—And, dear sir, can I forsake you who has ever been kind to me? No!—And I know you will not intreat me to leave, neither to retire from following after you, for where you pray there will I pray, where you worship there will I worship, your church shall be my church, your people shall be my people, & your God my God. By the water of Babylon shall I sit down & weep & leave thee oh my church, and hang my harp on the trees that grew therein? No!—One thing have I desired of the Lord which I will require, even that I may dwell in the house of the Lord & visit his Temple more to desire of me O my church than Gold, yea than much fine Gold. Sweeter to me is they service than Honey & the Honey-comb. Now Kind Sir this is the ony desire of my heart, is still to wait upon you, which I hope you will find to be my delight which hitherto has been, but I unthinkingly & rashly said I would no longer, for which I have roared for the omy disquietude of my heart now If you think one worthy to wait upon you, please to tell the church wanders that all is reconciled, & if not I will get me away into the wilderness & hide me in the clifts of the rocks. But I hope to be still your Gehazi & when I meet with my Shunamite to say "all is well." I will conclude with my oft repeated prayer "Glory be to the Father & to the Son elected &c &c. world without end. AMEN!!

—It is told of the late Judge Benjamin Tappan, of Ohio, that when he applied to the judges of the Supreme Court for admission to the bar of that State, he was asked the following questions, to which he gave the answers, as follows: "Mr. Tappan, what is law?" Answer—"An unjust distribution of justice." "Mr. Tappan, what is equity?" Answer—"An imposition upon common sense!" No other questions were asked, and he was given a certificate of admission.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and choicest literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WAGNER, of Glen Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

or, the "SWIDDEN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an Illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PAID, with one year's subscription, for $29; the same, charges NOT paid, $26. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $25; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20. The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have contributed so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of in crest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Stoddard will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give a variety of all ages, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. 1.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $2.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The market of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this only pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 130,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine,' so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

— THE —

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of poetry, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

[PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.
CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.
POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
During the year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its interest foes, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its preeminence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most watchful, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure what ever money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over One Million and a Half of Dollars. For the results of this outlay it asks from each single subscriber to the WEEKLY, Two Dollars; from each subscriber in a club of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.
The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE's political course, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, in a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old anti-war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to hold mere party ties as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old land-marks, and will defend the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the Nation's faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the hot partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country have brought new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how glorious; and that the men to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendations of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.
THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes in that the mere organ of politicians can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of whatever party solely on its individual merits; commends the President where it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him where it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-proved principles, and values any party only as a means for obtaining their triumph; yields no to caucus for his opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance, and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of their rulers. It endeavors to combine the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, has no quarrels with other papers, and only replies, even in self-defence, to their personal attacks,—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, for matter its readers want.
From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the popular favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the hard times of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each week's (by prepaying postage, 20 cents, and waiving the old charge for separate addresses to club subscribers, 10 cents,) and it asks those who think well of it to reciprocate by kindly efforts to increase its circulation.
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. Besides a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full page of the best editorials from the Daily, it contains in every number a greater amount of agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is prepared expressly for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States, and includes among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department men who are numbered each men as Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard University, the Hon. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Joseph Harris, L. B. Arnold and others. As its contributors are in every part of the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the original articles every week are illustrated with wood-cuts. The market quotations of farm products, cattle, provisions, breadstuffs, dry-goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The utmost care is bestowed upon the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the principle always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

What Closed The Saloon.

It was a cold March evening, and the setting sun threw its flood of gold over the great town, glorifying even the dusky mills and factories which usually looked so black and dreary. At the window of a dingy little garret, looking toward the glowing west, crouched a child, watching the river as it sparkled and quivered where the golden arrows struck it, and looking at the great rosy column of smoke which rolled up to the sky, making one think of the pillar of fire which Jehovah once sent to be the guard and guide of his people. She was a queer, elfish-looking little creature, sadly crooked and misshapen, and the roughly carved crutch which lay near told that she was lame, too.

She took her crutch and crept slowly down the old stairs, which shook and creaked most dismally at every step. When she reached the front door she stood looking at the lamps as they were lighted one by one, and at the people as they moved quickly to and fro. Suddenly, just as the stars began to tremble out into the darkening sky, a deep-toned church bell commenced to ring slowly out on the evening air; another chimed in, and still others, till it seemed as if all the bells in the city were ringing together; and to little Nannie Burke it sounded as though they were calling, crying out some solemn message, which she could not understand. An awkward, honest-looking boy hurried past her, toward the better part of the town, where the broad streets and handsome houses were, going in such haste that he did not notice the little figure on the steps, till she called out:

Dick I say, Dick Townsend, what are the bells ringing for? 'tisn't Sunday.

Why it's for the League, answered the boy; they're to have a prayer meeting for them in all the churches, while they're going around.

What's the league? asked the child wonderingly.

Well, now, you are green, said Dick, with a look of compassionate superiority; why, where have you been for this week and more?

My leg's been worse than common, and I have had to stay in the room all the time, said Nannie; but please, Dick, what is it?

Why, said Dick, it's the ladies who are all joined together into what they call a Temperance League; and they are going around to get folks to sign a pledge that they won't drink any more; and then they are trying to make the saloon keepers shut up, and promise to never sell any more whiskey, never, never!

Oh! Dick, cried the girl, while her great eyes glowed and flashed; and do they really do it?

Do it! said Dick; well, I should rather think they did. Why, those women go to them and sing and pray till they just can't stand it. What do you think, Nan! I saw that old fat Keyser, who kept a saloon on Broad street, sobbing like a baby yesterday, and he knocked out the heads of his old barrels, till the whiskey and beer poured down the gutter like dirty water. Father signed a pledge that Mrs. Dr. Graham took down to the mill, and, Nan, he's come home sober, ever since, and that's four days.

Dick, said Nannie, while her voice quivered with eagerness, has Ben Brannan shut up?

No, said the boy; everybody else has given in but him and two fellows on Market street; and they're hoping to bring them to-night; so I must hurry, for I want to be in when it happens.

* * * * * *

At last they reached the establishment whose proprietor had so persistently refused to yield: the saloon was brilliantly lighted, and Brannan himself stood in the door. As the ladies paused, he spoke to them very politely, and they commenced their meeting. It continued for half an hour, and then, in the interval between a prayer and a hymn, he told them that he had listened to them very patiently, and now thought it only civil that they should hear what he had to say. Brannan began by complimenting their music, telling how much he and his customers had enjoyed it; he said he hoped it had amused them to come there day after day, and that he had no objection to their doing so for a few days, but that it was now assuming the shape of a nuisance, and, if they did not discontinue their visits, he would appeal to the law.

He said he had as good a right to make a living for his family as any man in the city, and if he chose to do it by selling liquor, it was nobod 's business. He closed by an emphatic declaration that he had never harmed any one by his saloon, and again told the ladies if they annoyed him any more he would have them arrested.

Just then the great clock in the court house struck nine. It was the hour for closing their meetings, and, while Brannan and his party congratulated themselves upon a victory, the women prepared, oh, so sadly, to go away. Their faith had been so strong, they had believed that God would complete his wonderful work that night; and now they must go, leaving it still unfinished. Suddenly they paused, for a childish voice, which had the depth of a woman's anguish, wailed out, Oh, don't give it up, it's to save my father! Then they parted, right and left, before the bent and twisted figure of Nannie Burke, who pressed to the front of the crowd. As she stood there, with her tattered shawl thrown off, the light from one of the colored lamps falling full on the poor little form, on the floating hair and pale face with solemn eyes, there was something so weird and strange in her appearance that a hush fell upon that great multitude as though she were a messenger from the world of spirits.

Ben Brannan, she said, and the weak little voice grew firm and stern as an accusing angel's, My father, George Burke, is a kind and tender man when he lets the whiskey alone; he earns two dollars a day, and you know that's enough to keep us well We live in a miserable little garret on Vine street; there is hardly enough fire to keep me from freezing, sometimes, and I have had nothing to eat to day, but a piece of dry bread; the money that my father ought to spend on his home goes for whiskey, which makes a brute of him; and yet, you stand there, Ben Brannan, and say you do no harm. It was your whiskey that made my father give me the kick down stairs that left me like this; it is that, that sends him home at night to beat me with that crutch till I cry out to God to let me die; it was your whiskey that made him abuse my mother till she died of a broken heart, and it was you that got him to break the promise he made at her grave, that he'd meet her in heaven. Ben Brannan! cried the childish voice, breaking into wild sobs, at last, and oh, if your whiskey kills him, body and soul, and he's parted from her forever and ever, will you dare to tell my mother, when you meet her at the judgment that you never did any harm.

The unnatural strength which had upheld the child gave way at last; she tottered and would have fallen, had not a tall, powerful looking man pushed his way out from the saloon and caught her away from the kindly womanly hands stretched out for her. Holding the poor, brave little girl close in his arms, while the great tears rolled over his rough brown face, he said:

It's all very true, every word of it. I'm her father, poor lamb, and I've been just such a brute as she's told you; but I'm ready to sign your pledge, to night, ladies, and by the help of God, I'll try to keep it. And now, Ben, turning towards him as he spoke, for the sake of poor fellows like me who are so easily tempted; for the sake of their wives and children; for the sake of your own wife and baby, who is no brighter or prettier than my Nannie was once, I ask you to give up this miserable business.

Brannan had grown very pale while Nannie and her father were speaking; his pretty little wife was sobbing bitterly as she clung to his arm, and the sweet, innocent face of his baby girl looked wonderingly up into his. There was a fearful struggle in the man's stout soul; how could he yield, when he had boasted that he never would? But then, how could he continue to sell the maddening poison which could make a man crush and mangle the delicate form of his own little child? Then as the idea which Nannie had suggested came back to him, and he thought of the possibility of such women as Mary Burke requiring their husbands' blood at his hands, he hesitated no longer.

I'll give in, he said huskily. I thought I could hold out against an angel from heaven, but I couldn't stand that poor lame child.

Then Nannie was caressed and cried over in a way that would have surprised her if she had not been so wonderfully happy; but at last the crowd dispersed, the child kissed Mrs. Brannan and the baby, and shook hands with Ben, and then, muffled in a great soft shawl which one of the ladies had wrapped around her, she was carried home by her father, whom she had won back to the right way, while faithful Dick Townsend trotted close beside them, saying at intervals, Oh, Nan, ain't you glad you went? And the solemn stars, which three weeks before had shone upon almost a hundred saloons, large and small, looked down that night to see the last one closed and victory complete.

—The following is told at the expense of a Biddeford young man who had signed the pledge. He entered one of the barber shops in town and at the close of the shave the knight of the razor commenced bathing the man's face with bay rum, when he was somewhat taken back by an exclamation, "Look out! I have signed the pledge and I won't have that stuff so near my mouth!"

Infatuation and How It Ended.

[Burleigh's N. Y. Letter.]

Last summer, a well known and wealthy manufacturer of New England visited the White Mountains. He became infatuated with one of the waiter girls. He was seventy and the maiden was seventeen. He agreed to give her an education and adopt her, though he had several daughters of his own. She joyfully accepted the proposition, flung her white apron behind the door and started on her new life. Of course the connection could not be very satisfactory to the family. The girl had a vein of shrewdness about her, and insisted that a formal paper of adoption should be drawn up. This was done, and the girl was sent to a well-known educational institution to receive a little polish. A correspondence was kept up between the parties. But to outsiders the matter was not satisfactory, and the principal refused to receive the young lady into the school after the vacation was over. Soon after, the gentleman became crazy and was removed to a lunatic asylum; removed, as the girl said, to get him beyond her reach. The remittances failed, and of course there was trouble in the new school into which the girl had entered. On the passing away of insanity, the infatuation of the old man seemed to go with it. He tried to break up the correspondence, without success, and the family exerted all their influence to recover the fatal bond of adoption; but the girl held on to it. She had, besides, a bushel of letters breathing the most ardent affection. A pecuniary negotiation was set on foot, which at first the maiden repudiated. She professed to be devotedly attached to the old man, and did not want money. But it was discovered that the document, as a legal claim, was not worth the paper it was written on. Then the young lady came to terms and the sum of $8,500 healed her broken heart and wrung from her an obligation that she would trouble the old man no more. She does not propose to go in search of her apron.

An Expensive Entertainment.

Some one by the name of Jenkins has been trying to see if he cannot out-do the description of the Sharon wedding. Here is the result, which certainly accomplishes its end, and eclipses the Arabian Nights and the Count of Monte Cristo into the bargain:

The marriage of Malia, daughter of De Louza Cabral, the great diamond merchant of South America, to George Arthur Throckmorton, late of Kentucky, but now engaged in railroading in Rio Janeiro, throws the magnificence of the Newlands-Sharon nuptials into total eclipse. The father of the bride is the richest man in the world, his fortune being estimated at several billions. Mr. Throckmorton himself is no beggar, for he counts his dollars by the millions and will some day be richer than his father-in-law. The wedding took place at Cabral's residence, near Rio Janeiro, and the number of guests exceeded one thousand, the invitations being enclosed in boxes of sandal-wood, costing $1200 each. The rooms were decorated with camelias set with diamonds; one hundred music boxes, set with precious stones, played the wedding march, and a pavement from the railroad depot to the mansion, more than a quarter of a mile, was spread with camel's-hair shawls. The bride's dress is literally indescribable. It cost millions of dollars. The bride's gifts number 1840—among them a dinner set of 280 pieces, given by the mother, each piece bearing the Cabral-Throckmorton monogram in diamonds, the whole costing $4,000,000; one thousand yards of point lace; 365 dresses; a title deed for a magnificent town and country house in each capital in the world; a steamship, with a full complement of sailors under contract for ten years, service; one dozen milk-white Arabian steeds; a necklace of thirty of the largest and finest diamonds in the world, with a fantastic face cut upon each stone—the necklace costing $16,980,000.75. There were other wonderful presents in profusion.

In Alton, nearly two years ago, a man undertook to make a legal tender of $10 to John W. Currier, in his office in that town. Currier refused to take the money or have anything to do with it, and the person making the tender laid it on a table and refused to take it away, and so there it yet lies—in plain sight and within reach of all who go in.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it is provided in the Constitution of the United States that the United States shall protect every State in the Union, on application of the Legislature, or of the executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened,) against domestic violence; and

Whereas it is provided by the laws of the United States that, in all cases of insurrection in any States, or of obstruction to the laws thereof, it shall be lawful for the President of the United States on application of the Legislature of such State, or of the executive, (when the Legislature cannot be convened) to call forth the militia of any other State or States, or to employ such part of the land and naval force as shall be judged necessary for the purpose of suppressing such insurrection, or of causing the laws to be duly executed; and

Whereas the Legislature of the State of Mississippi, now in session, have represented to me, in a concurrent resolution of that body, that several of the legally elected officers of Warren county in said State are prevented from executing the duties of their offices by force and violence; that the public buildings and records of said county have been taken into the possession of, and are now held by, lawless and unauthorized persons; that many peaceable citizens of said county have been killed, and others have been compelled to abandon, and remain away from, their homes and families; that illegal and riotous seizures and imprisonments have been made by such lawless persons and, further, that a large number of armed men from adjacent States have invaded Mississippi to aid such lawless persons, and are still ready to give them such aid; and

Whereas it is further represented as aforesaid, by said Legislature, that the courts of said county cannot be held, and that the Governor of said State has no sufficient force at his command to execute the laws thereof in said county and suppress said violence, without causing a conflict of races and endangering life and property to an alarming extent; and

Whereas the Legislature, as aforesaid, have made application to me for such part of the military force of the United States as may be necessary and adequate to protect said State and the citizens thereof against the domestic violence hereinbefore mentioned, and to enforce the due execution of the laws; and

Whereas the laws of the United States require that, whenever it may be necessary, in the judgment of the President, to use the military force for the purposes aforesaid, he shall forthwith, by proclamation, command such insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes within a limited time;

Now, therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby command said disorderly and turbulent persons to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes within five days from the date hereof, and that they refrain from forcible resistance to the laws, and submit themselves peaceably to the lawful authorities of said county and State.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States the ninety-ninth. U. S. GRANT.

[SEAL.]

By the President:
HAMILTON FISH,
Secretary of State.

—"Speaking of shooting ducks," says Dr. F., "puts me in mind of the great storm that occurred when I lived on the island. As you are well aware, our island was near by Casco bay; an awful storm arose, and was so fierce that it drove all the ducks in the bay into a pond, covering about an acre, near my house. In fact, so many ducks crowded into that pond that I could not see a drop of water." "Sho," says Smith, "did ye shute any of 'em?" "That's what I was coming at. I went into the house, and got my double barreled shot gun, and discharged both barrels right in the midst of them, but, to my astonishment, they rose in the air, leaving not a solitary duck in the pond!" "Good gracious! ye don't say!" says Smith; "didn't ye hev any shot in yer gun, or what in thunder was the trouble?" "Well, I was coming to that," said Dr. F.; "it astonished me at first; but as soon as the ducks rose a few hundred yards in the air and commenced to separate a little, the ducks began to drop, and, whether you believe it or not, I picked up twenty-nine barrels of ducks, and it was a poor season for ducks, too. You see the ducks were wedged in so solid in the pond that when they rose they carried the dead ones into the air with them, and when they separated, down came the twenty-nine barrels of dead ones."

Many of our readers will remember the vivid story told by Mrs. Leonowens in the Atlantic, several months since, of an incident which occurred in the Siamese royal household while she was a resident therein. The youngest of the many wives of the old king fell in love with one of the courtiers, and an elopement was planned. The plot was discovered, but not the name of the lover. The young wife, Choy, was horribly tortured, together with her confident, who was a wife of the lover. The latter, in spite of all, refused to reveal the name demanded, but Choy, unable to bear longer the terrible blows of the whip, at last confessed it, and the three were put to death. This affecting story has been wrought into a poem by "H. H.," under the title of "THE STORY OF BOON," and with a great deal of power. It appeared originally in the Independent, and attracted very general attention before taking on its present form. Published by Roberts Brothers, Boston.

A Valuable Medical Treatise.

The edition for 1875 of the sterling Medical Annual, known as Hostetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost, of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States and British America, and indeed in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. This Almanac has been issued regularly at the commencement of every year for about one-fifth of a century. It combines, with the soundest practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the calendar, astronomical calculations, chronological items, &c., are prepared with great care, and will be found entirely accurate. The issue of Hostetter's Almanac for 1875 will probably be the largest edition of a medical work ever published in any country. The proprietors, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

"I am the Last of Six!"

One rainy forenoon something less than a year ago, a pale cadaverous youth walked into the store C. N. CRITTENTON, No. 7 Sixth Avenue, and in weak, husky tones, interrupted frequently by a dry, hacking cough, stated that he wanted a couple of bottles of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. "I am the last of six," he said, "the others all died of consumption, and I am going fast. I will try this new remedy, but I have no hope." He did try it, and to some purpose. He took, in all, twelve bottles, and is to-day in perfect health—lungs sound, cough gone, not a sign of pulmonary disease remaining.

The Directors of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., assure the public in the most positive manner that their Second and Last Grand Gift Concert will take place upon the 29th inst., (as advertised elsewhere,) or the money will be refunded to purchasers of tickets. Your days are few for the securing of prizes. There will certainly be no postponement. Take due notice thereof, and govern yourselves accordingly.

Hair Restorers, &c., &c.—All sulphur and lead compounds have nearly disappeared; their poisonous mixtures having been found both ruinous to the public health and death to the human hair. Messrs Perry Davis & Son, Proprietors of the Celebrated Pain Killer, have lately introduced the Bearine which is rapidly taking the place of all other hair preparations, being a health-giving dressing perfectly delightful to use, prepared from the pure grease of the Canada Bear. 12

The Piano Form.—The different merits of the grand and square instruments are discussed in this wise by the Rural New Yorker:—"We spent some little time lately in examining the grand and square grand pianos recently produced. The grand piano, powerful and sweet as its tone is, and, therefore, a desirable instrument, is not pleasing in outline; and takes up much room in the parlor. A square piano, if it can be had without too much sacrifice of essentials, looks better and is more convenient. The WATERS' square grand is, so far as eye and ear could determine, just the thing needed. The tone is remarkably even, the treble being brilliant without metallic ring, the base (overstrung) sonorous, and entirely free from the muffled tone so frequently observable in new pianos. The sustained, singing tone was exceedingly well developed. The power, sweetness, purity and evenness of the tone were perfectly satisfactory."—N. Y. Home Journal.

The naval appropriation bill passed the national House of Representatives on Tuesday. It amounts to $17,000,000. The Senate passed the finance bill, 32 to 14.

Gen. Gilman Marston of Exeter is developing considerable strength as a Congressional candidate.

The educational lecture on "Language" by Chas. W. Gardner, Esq., at Mechanics' Hall, Tuesday evening, was replete with practical suggestions, gracefully delivered and an eminently creditable production. Mr. Gardner's experience in school matters make his essays worthy the attention of teachers and parents, while his pleasant delivery and the absence of all unnecessary gestures add greatly to the effect of his aphorisms. Possessing a keen sense of humor, the lecturer interspersed frequent droll illustrations of old style teaching, which brought to mind the experiences of all present. We hope the managers of the course will induce Mr. Gardner to favor our citizens with another lecture on some different topic ere the close. Mr. Chas. C. Guppy of the Times favored the audience with some common sense remarks at the close of the lecture, and finished with readings from various authors, which showed great discrimination and the possession of much dramatic power and expression. The next lecture will be given on Jan. 19, by Mr. G. H. Jenness, of Rye; subject, "Physical Geography; the World we Inhabit."

A section of the new Nashua & Rochester Railroad several feet in length, laid over a marsh, sank a number of feet while a train was passing over it.

Marshal Marden escorted quite a delegation from South Mill street to Judge Page's presence on Wednesday. The eloquent magistrate disposed of them in short order and provided for their residence at Brentwood—Jerry Sullivan 90 days, Andrew Wilson 60 days, Charles Appleby 60 days, and John Williams 60 days. The parties were granted the privilege of expending a sufficient sum in payment of the trouble caused the authorities. Phebe Adams was offered the privilege of going to jail or furnishing bonds in the sum of $500 for appearance at the next term of court to answer to the charge of keeping a noisy and disorderly house.

First Lieut. Stanhope E. Blunt is transferred from the 13th Infantry to the Ordnance department, and is ordered to duty at the Frankford arsenal, Pennsylvania.

The Wallace Sisters, supported by a brilliant company, full orchestra and band, will appear at the Temple on Tuesday next, in the Drama "Minnie's Luck, or the Ups and Downs of New York Life." The sisters are reported to have the best company on the road and all along the line, from Springfield, Worcester, Pittsfield, etc., is the same story told, "full houses." State News.

A young man named Henry W. Hunter, a short time since left Portland for the White Mountains, since which time nothing could be heard of his whereabouts. His father, residing in Pittsburg, Pa., recently received a letter from Fred De Rosher, assistant observer on Mt. Washington, which states that the day Hunter intended to have started for the summit, the wind was blowing a gale and it was raining hard. The path he was to have taken is a very dangerous one. The probability is that Hunter wandered from the path, and, becoming bewildered, lost his way and perished in the valley.

The New Hampshire musical festival will begin at Concord January 11, and continue four days. Mrs. Smith, Miss McQuesten, the Messrs. Winch, the Temple Quartette, the Beethoven Quintette club, Master Albert Von Raalte, Master S. W. Jameison, Blaisdell & Iugall's orchestra, and Mrs. Martha D. Shepard, are among the vocal and instrumental talent engaged.

The Granite Hame Works at Sunapee harbor have shut down because of dull times.

A band of genteel swindlers, calling themselves German pedlers, have been victimizing the farmers in Merrimack county. They made their head-quarters at Concord, where they secured six or eight well-known citizens to introduce them, and having as many teams, with a pedler and citizen in each team, would call on the wealthy farmers and sell them dry goods, represented to be bankrupt stock and first quantity at apparently nominal prices. When the pedler has left the purchaser finds he has one or two decent articles, while the rest are worthless. They reaped a rich harvest in the vicinity of Concord, and then decamped.

"DOUBTLESS THE

IN THE WORLD."

[From one of the Oldest, and very best Houses in America.]

MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.

Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.

[Signed] ALLEN & CO.

P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.

[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]

No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Here was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Great Bargains!

HAVING purchased the stock of STOVES and Housekeeping Goods in the well known "Jones Stove Store," and made large additions thereto, we are prepared to offer to our customers and the public generally the best assortment of the most approved and latest patterns of

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in other and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it, to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MARKET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Oven Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the concern, that we are bound to close out at any price.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE."

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present each marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and choicest literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SARA HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PAID, with one year's subscription, for $26; the same, charges NOT paid, $16. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $35; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20. The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

SCRIBNER & CO.,
NO. 654 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit.

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of interest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and in-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

All Postage will be Prepaid by us.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of great moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruptions that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and shelters no favorite from shame.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possession of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quality of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; while, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the commission is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

THOS. P. HONES, thorough and tasteful Teacher of Music, from A to Izzard, in its alphabet, composition and arrangement, has concluded not to accept a recent call to go South again, but will retain his permanent location in the grand "Old Town by the Sea" where he was born,—and renews the offer of his services as above, with unabated zeal and love for this branch of human refinement. He is no novice or humbug to beg, borrow or buy boisters to uphold him in an art he does not fully understand in every phase of its beauty; but would respectfully point to the best of references, WORK, and ability to discover, develope and train inherent talent to accomplish splendid results. His pupils are shining in private and public, here and elsewhere. His many Musical Exhibitions—such as others seldom or never permit to the public—have been and will still be his solid credentials, aside from fawning favoritism where merit is too often absent. Terms, $12 for twelve weeks (twenty-four lessons) at his Music Room, or $15 at the pupil's residence, for Piano or Scientific Vocalization, separately or together. Mr. Hones will also tune Pianos,—a business "familiar as household words" to him,—and solicits orders.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.
CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.
POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
During the year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its fitness for this, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its preeminence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most watchful, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure what ever money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over One Million and a Half of Dollars. For the results of this outay it asks from each single subscriber to the WEEKLY, Two Dollars; from each subscriber in the of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.
The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE'S political course, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, in a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old anti-war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to gold mere party ties as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old land-marks, and stand beyond the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the National faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the hot partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not for its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country have brought new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how glorious; and that the man to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendations of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.
THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes that the mere organ of political cliques can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of whatever party solely on its individual merits; commends the President where it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him where it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-avowed principles, and values any party only as a means for obtaining their triumph; but has no no cause for its opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance, and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of their rulers. It endeavors to combine the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, has no quarrels with other papers, and never replies to or even notices their perpetual attacks,—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, for matter its readers want.
From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the popular favor it has so continuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the hard times of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each week's (by prepaying postage, 20 cents, and waiving the 10 cents for separate addresses to club subscribers, 10 cents), and it asks those who think well of it to reciprocate by kindly efforts to increase its circulation.
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. Besides a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full page of the best stories, it has the Daily's fullness in every number a greater amount of agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is prepared expressly for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States; while among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department are numbered such men as Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard University, Prof. C. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Josiah Hooper, L. B. Arnold and others. As its contributors are at every place in the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the original articles every week are illustrated with wood-cuts. The market quotations of farm produce, cattle, provisions, breadstuffs, dry-goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The utmost care is bestowed upon the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the print is always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

How Wilkins Got a Subscriber.

[Rutland (Vt.) Globe.]

One night last week a Whitehall gentleman was in the Troy train returning home. At Saratoga a gentleman from Rutland took a seat behind the Whitehaller. In a few moments a conversation was opened between the two. Ascertaining that our friend was from Whitehall, the Rutland gentleman asked him if he knew Wilkins, editor of the Times.

"Know him! I ought to know him, for he is very intimate with my wife."

"You don't say?" replied the Rutland man in astonishment.

"Yes, sir. I don't want it repeated; but I have indisputable evidence that he has been on terms of the closest intimacy with her."

"But, my friend, you don't live with the woman?"

"Yes, sir; strange as it may seem, I do. Oh, sir, you little know what a man will put up with from the woman he loves. This intimacy has been carried on for many years right under my very nose, and yet by the love I bear the woman I have never yet broken with my wife."

"But you cannot possibly put up with such conduct on the part of your wife? If she is intimate with Wilkins, I should think you would brand that villain before the world. I would not submit. No, sir! I would not, never!"

The Rutland man had worked himself up to a pitch of excitement, when the train stopped at Whitehall.

"Good night, sir!" said the Whitehall gentleman, "I hope we will meet again. I thank you for the interest you have taken in my affairs," and the two gentlemen shook hands and parted.

Just then the conductor entered the car when the Rutland man stepped up and asked him who the gentleman was he was just conversing with.

"That man," said Conductor Holcomb; "don't you know him? That is Wilkins, editor of the Whitehall Times."

"Sold, by thunder!" said the Rutland man, putting his finger into his pocket and taking out something. "Mr. Conductor, will you please give him this card and accompanying $5, and tell him to send me his paper so long as the money lasts?"

Refused.

[St. Louis Herald.]

This is a familiar word to country publishers, says a contemporary. Every little while a paper is returned to the office of publication with this word written on the margin.

The party to whom the paper was addressed did not want it any longer.

Therefore, the postoffice official is directed to write 'refused,' thereon, and sling it back into the publisher's box.

The publisher receives the paper, turns to the book to erase the name, when lo!

There is money due him for six, nine or more months.

There is a sameness in this respect with all refused papers.

The refuser owes for his paper.

Nine times in ten this is the case.

Of course it is not right to intimate that the party returning the paper is aware of this.

The word 'Refused' frightens very few publishers. It is the inspection of the account of the subscriber that does the heavy scaring.

Ah! there's the rub.

There's just where the joke comes in.

Or, in the words of the poet, 'It is there where the gazelle entereth and browseth.'

It's the rub because perhaps the subscriber has left the country, or perhaps he may be one of those who ought to leave, or it is an insult to his dignity, you know—although said dignity permits and occasions the necessity of the dun. And between the three, perhaps, there is hardly a choice.

A little advice to those who are disposed to stop papers by refusing to receive them through the mail may be wholesome.

It is cheaper and far better to call at the office, pay what is due, and in a respectable manner order the paper to be stopped.

That's business.

But to refuse at the postoffice—It ain't nice.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1874.

News and Notes.

It seems that Senator Hamlin is the first choice of a large majority of the republicans of the Maine legislature, and that he can be defeated by no fair means. Should he be thrown by trickery; it wouldn't be surprising to see him looming up strongly for the Presidency. Mr. Hamlin has great elements of strength with the people, and with Senators Cragin and Anthony has a reputation unsullied and a record of which any modern statesman might be proud.

Mr. John S. E. Rogers, for thirty-two years publisher and editor of the Gloucester Telegraph, retires to a more exacting business, and will be succeeded by Mr. Alfred F. Stickney. The paper will be enlarged to thirty-two columns and will put on a new suit with the New Year.

Stokes was sentenced Oct. 29, 1873, to four years' imprisonment, and he reckons ingeniously that he has only a fortnight longer to stay. He counts in the two years he was in jail waiting for a verdict and another year for "good conduct," under the law which gives the wardens power to grant a commutation of from two to four months for every year of a term of imprisonment. Stokes wants two months for each of the first two years, and four months on each of the last two.

The Louisiana returning board has made its report, which gives 46 conservatives and 47 republicans to the house of representatives, and declares the election of four conservative and two republican congressmen.

Mr. Beecher publishes an editorial in the Christian Union, in which he gives a brief account of the course of the action at law brought by Theodore Tilton and of his own intentions in that suit for the future. He claims that the object of the bill of particulars demanded by Tilton is not to prevent the plaintiff from introducing any evidence which he may have. The defence of this suit will never proceed upon any theory which does not recognize the honor of Elizabeth Tilton as at least equally worthy of protection with the name of Henry Ward Beecher. Finally, there will be no compromise.

News is received of the foundering of the barque Amity, from Philadelphia for Antwerp, and the loss of eighteen of her crew.

A span of horses got frightened by the cars at Burlington, and ran down the track before them, the driver being unable to check them before reaching the tunnel, where there was no chance to turn out, and the train was close by. He accordingly lashed the horses, and jolted over the ties through the tunnel, and on nearly half a mile, before he could escape from the track and save his team.

A couple were married at New Haven, while sitting in a carriage, the clergyman standing on the curbstone, one party to the contract being unable to get out on account of bodily infirmity.

A duel was fought on the 23d near the Alabama and Mississippi State line between H. Tardy and B. D. Say, insurance-men. Tardy was killed at the first fire.

State News.

A Mrs. Morrill went from Candia to the Hazeltine House, in Mancherser, unattended, took poison whilst in a state of melancholy, and died. Her husband was sent for and arrived before she died. Domestic troubles are supposed to be the cause of the suicide.

Moses Johnson, of Unity, has a white cow, which may be considered a healthy specimen. She girts plump eight feet, and weighs 2,200 pounds.

A Hanover man is largely engaged in trapping skunks. Last year he sent to Boston 900 skins, the year before 1500, and this year he expects to send 2000. The oil of the animal is extracted for medicinal purposes, and the skins, which bring about $18 per dozen, are made into ladies' cloaks.

An association has been organized in Hanover for planting and protecting shade trees.

Dr. Albert Lull, of Nashua, recently lost his portmonnaie, and made the discovery while sitting in the house. He had been at work in his garden and thought he might have lost it there. Stating as much to his black-and-tan dog, he directed him to go for it. The dog left the room and soon returned with the missing pocketbook. On another occasion this dog found a twenty-five cent scrip in the street, and of his own accord he picked it up and carried it to his master. Although he has had inst no ructions in finance, he appears clearly to understand the value of money.

Hon. W. H. H. Mason of Moultonboro' is a democratic candidate for Congress in this district.

The dwelling-house owned and occupied by Thomas Shea, in the west part of Hancock, was destroyed by fire on the 21st. The contents were mostly saved. Three large barns in close proximity to the house escaped the flames. Shea lives alone, and before he could obtain assistance the fire was beyond control.

Thomas Atkinson of Groveton, while surveying timber at Stratford Hollow on Monday, was killed by a log rolling upon him from a high bank on the river. He leaves a wife but no children.

Messrs. Leavitt & Homan, owners of the State lands in Pittsburg, have bought the mill privilege just above North Stratford, and proposes to commence at once upon the dam, and will the coming season put up a mill capable of sawing 10,000,000 feet of lumber a year. They propose contracting to have 10,000,000 feet a year hauled upon the lake from their lands, and run the same down the river.

The Cost of Living.

[Phila. Ledger.]

A comparison of the prices of the staples of the country in wholesale markets in November, 1859, 1864, and 1874, shows that prices are nearly as low, and in some cases lower, now than before the war, if they are reduced to the gold standard. Wheat is selling at about the same prices in currency as it sold for in gold in 1859. Corn is selling for half what it did in 1864 (the year when gold touched 285) and about the same price, gold values, as it did in 1859. Cotton is worth a little more than in 1859, but is about one-ninth the price reached in 1864. Provisions, sugar, and coffee show a heavy decline, but the present currency quotations are above the gold prices of 1859. Dry goods show a great decline since 1864, prints being below the prices of 1859. Beet was rather higher in the local market before the war than to-day. Sales were reported in the Ledger in November, 1858, for 7 to 9 cents per pound. The corresponding cattle report published this year quotes sales at from 4 to 7 1-2 cents. But before these articles reach the consumers items of cost are added to them, which have not been reduced in proportion to the reduction in prime cost. The tax rate of 1859 on real estate was $1.75 on a very low valuation of property; to-day it is $2.20 on a cash valuation. A house which was worth $1,500 in 1859 could not be bought for twice that amount now, and rents are from two to three times as high now as before the war. While it is true, therefore, that what are often called the "necessaries of life," have been reduced in price at wholesale to nearly the prices which ruled in 1859, it is not to be inferred that the cost of living to working men has been correspondingly reduced. Provisions consume about one-third to one-half working men's incomes. The other half is expended for rent, clothing, fuel, lights, and other expenditures of all kinds, and in many of these there has been no reduction from ante-war prices. But with a reduction in the prime cost of provisions, there will undoubedly come in time a reduction in the value of things for which corn, wheat, etc., are exchanged; in other words, a reduction in all the many things which together make up the real cost of living.

Death of a Lilliputian Queen.

[N. Y. Mail.]

No visitor at Barnum's Hippodrome, during the run of the "Congress of Nations," failed to notice and admire the beautiful, smiling little four-year old, who occupied the post of honor in front of the lilliputian chariot. This was Minnie Hogle, the pet of the company, and daughter of W. F. Hogle, a prominent attache. Minnie died suddenly two days ago, and her associates mourn her as their own. For a child Minnie had quite a record.

She is the youngest person, so far as is known, who ever made a balloon ascension in this or any other country. In October last, when the Hippodrome was in Cincinnati, Professor Donaldson and Press Agent Thomas, with five lady passengers, made an ascension in a violent rain storm. Just before leaving the earth, Minnie expressed a desire to go, and her father consenting, she was passed up to the Professor, who was standing upon the concentrating ring twelve feet above the basket. As the great air ship moved off, the child in the Professor's arms kissed her hand to the cheering crowd, and merrily shouted "good bye" with the rest. Immediately the rain came down in torrents, but this only seemed to increase her happiness, and her ringing laugh was heard long after all other voices had faded away in the distance.

At an immense elevation Professor Donaldson was seen to lie down, take Minnie by the wrists and pass her down over the edge of the ring to Mr. Thomas below, who could just reach her feet by standing upon the edge of the basket. In this manner the brave little child was taken into the basket with the ladies, who, in some measure, could protect her from the storm. With the pelting rain, the rapidly drifting clouds and the dark, murky sky for a background, the incident doubtless did look dangerous to the 50,000 spectators below, many of whom were disposed to censure the Professor until he explained afterward that it was perfectly safe, however hazardous it may have appeared from a distance. Little Minnie was the heroine of the day, and the lavish "notices" were carefully laid over for her to read in the future when she should have grown old enough to understand them.

Making it Warm for Him.

The Burlington Hawkeye man says a man who lives out on Columbia Street was kept down town by business until a very late hour, and his wife knowing how cold he would be when he got home, put an iron on the stove, and when she heard him open the gate, she jumped up and hurriedly wrapping the iron in a piece of flannel chucked it in bed for him to warm his great ugly feet by. The man was cold and taciturn and cross. He crawled into bed with a growl, and shuddered with cold as he stretched himself out. Then he gave a yell that lifted the roof of the house and jammed his head through the headboard, and screamed fire, and waltzed out on the floor and around the room in the dark, straddling rocking chairs and breaking his shins on bureau corners, and knocking down brackets with his shoulders and upsetting one or two things, and filling the darkness with weird, fantastic profanity. When his wife lighted the lamp they discovered a beautiful photograph of a sadiron on the bottom of that man's foot, and it was found that the flannel had somehow got off the footwarmer. The man says that hereafter, if he must sleep with a hardware store, he wants it put in cold.

On His Muscle.

[Akron (O.) Beacon.]

When "picture agents" indulge too freely in that beverage which makes their brain swim, it is then that they imagine that every body is talking about "their girl." It was one of this kind of individuals who entered the Beacon news room, just as the shades of night were falling, last evening, with intentions most foul. He demanded to see a compositor named ——, in a tone that made the "devil" turn pale. With heavy tread he approached his intended victim, and no sooner had he come face to face with him than he drew forth from his waistcoat a treacherous instrument with which he said he was going to cowhide the typo. His actions, however, were arrested by others who were near by. "Slugs" 11, 6, 8, 1, and others were chewing spaces to keep themselves from laying hands on this "overloaded" wretch, and had he not, in as clever a way as he did, apologized to the foreman for making a disturbance, he would have been ejected in a manner that would have presented pictures in colors to his visionary organs such as he never canvassed for.

—Parson Brownlow tells a good story of an old Presbyterian bachelor preacher, known almost as a woman-hater until he was fifty years old, when he married and settled somewhere among the mountains of North Carolina. The parson says: Our bachelor friend was preaching on the sinner's excuses, "I have bought a piece of ground, and wish to go and see it," said one. "Here is want of inclination to attend to divine things," said the preacher. Another said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen, and must needs go and prove them." This seemed a case of necessity. A third says, "I have married a wife and therefore cannot come." "Here is a case of natural impossibility, from which we may infer," continued our bachelor preacher, "that one woman will pull a man farther from the Lord than ten steers."

—Mr. Tyler, in his "Primitive Culture," thus applies to the children's "Song of Sixpence," the law of the interpretation of myths: Obviously, the four and twenty blackbirds are four and twenty hours, and the pie that holds them is the underlying earth, covered with the over-arching sky; how true a touch of nature it is, that when the pie is opened—that is, when the day breaks—the birds begin to sing! The king is the sun, and his counting out his money is pouring out the sunshine, the golden shower of Danae. The queen is the moon, and her transparent honey the moonlight. The maid is the rosy-figured dawn, who rises before the sun, her master, and hangs out the clouds, his clothes, across the sky. The particular blackbird who so tragically ends the tale by snipping off her nose is the hour of sunrise.

—The Whitehall Times says that as Dwyer of the Sandy Hill Herald was standing on the railroad depot platform at Fort Edward lately, conversing with a friend, he felt something jerking at the loop of his congress gaiters. He turned quickly and discovered the baggage man trying to get a check strap through his gaiter loop, which he had mistaken for the handle of a Saratoga trunk.

Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.

In ordering another small lot of your invaluable

VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,

I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.

Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose

LIFE WAS SAVED

By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.

RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE

And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. Will is she

IRRITATION

Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who

BLED AT THE LUNGS

And coughed frightfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 150 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got

ENTIRELY WELL,

And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.

Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.

As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.

Local Matters.

Christmas!

In everything but the presence of "beautiful snow" there is evidence that Christmas has come. Evergreens and "truckle-carts," confectionery and choice books, toys and substantials are displayed about the quarters of traffic with an abundance that dazzles the senses of the youthful members of the community and delights the hearts of young and old. Hallowed by ancient custom, the close of another year's joys and sorrows is before us, and the fitting testimonials so plentifully passing from donors to happy recipients, increasing by legions in this modern age, serve to bind in stronger bands friends of many a year. Relic of a custom that heathenism and Christianity alike sought to perpetuate, the religious element holds it as sacred, while those not possessed of a superfluity of veneration and reverence find the occasion one which warms "the cockles of their hearts" and make all mankind akin. That our readers may find the anniversary as pleasurable in fact as in anticipation is our sincere wish, and we wish them, one and all, a MERRY CHRISTMAS.

A Surprise.

Miss A. C. Morgan, principal of the new boarding school for young ladies in this city, was completely and agreeably surprised by the conduct of the pupils of the school on Miller Avenue, on Tuesday. Before separating for their homes to spend Christmas, the young ladies very successfully arranged a plan to completely nonplus their devoted teacher; which having perfected, they invited Miss Morgan into the dining room, where Miss Emma Sise of this city, on behalf of the school, asked her acceptance of a handsome silver tea service as a token of their affectionate regard; after which teachers and scholars and a few invited friends partook of an elegant collation, which had been clandestinely spread without the knowledge or consent of the said principal. Then followed vocal and instrumental music, by pupils, all and singly, with dancing, and mirth, and what not, including a beautiful bouquet for each of the teachers—after which school was dismissed till after the holidays; and just as well so, seeing that all discipline over the young minxes was at an end. But what a Virginia reel that was; and how nice Auld Lang Syne went, with all hands clasped, and dancing round in a ring! The decoration of the rooms with flowers and leaves was very tasteful and beautiful.

Shovel Off.

Editor Chronicle; Notwithstanding the fact, that Chap. 14, Sec. 3d, of the city ordinances, relative to the removal of snow and ice from our sidewalks, has repeatedly been brought to the notice of our citizens by publication, it has been disregarded by the Middle Street Baptist Society for years, with perhaps a very few exceptions, when the police have received and noticed complaints from persons who reside on Middle street, beyond the church. After nearly every storm, the snow remains untouched, and even if the walk is cleared, the snow slides from the roof, which makes it nearly as bad, and this generally remains until the next snow storm. It is not desirable to subject a religious society to the fine imposed by this ordinance, and one would suppose there were men connected with this Society who would give this sidewalk their attention, inasmuch as many are compelled to pass over it daily. Must they be summoned before the police court, because they disregard this ordinance? I trust not. B.

Laconics.

The grand ball of the Apollo Club at Congress Hall, which has been looked forward to by the young folks as the event of the holidays, comes off to-night, and the ladies are up to their eyes in preparation. Between eight and nine o'clock, there will be a concert by the Naval Band, and at nine the grand march will be played, the music being new in this country and especially fine.

Mr. Wallace R. Moses, formerly of this city, has established himself at Atlanta, Georgia, as a teacher of stenography.

Engineer Theodore Davidson has sued the Eastern Railroad to recover $20,000 for damages for injuries received while he was running an engine over the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth Railroad, at the collision of freight trains at Kennebunk.

Printers keep Christmas, and we shall therefore issue no CHRONICLE to-morrow.

We clip the following from the Portland Press: The Maine Central, it is said, has a sufficient surplus to declare a dividend on its stock, but by the terms of the contract with the Eastern, the directors cannot declare a dividend until the latter does so. It is understood that the Eastern is not in a condition to make a dividend, consequently the stockholders of the Maine Central must be deprived of such a luxury until the Eastern is prepared to do so. This, the wise ones say, is the cause of the restiveness of the Maine Central people.

Frozen poultry was plenteous in the market, Thursday, but prices were well sustained till the temperature grew threatening. Turkies sold after noon at 25 cts. per lb.

The following is a correct list of the vessels in the port of Portsmouth laid up for the winter: Schrs. Ceres, Hattie Lewis, G. W. Raitt, D. K. Ham and Emily A. Staples of Dover; Wingaersheek of Ogunquit; James Baker, of Boston; John Wesley, of Rockport; Henry Adelbert, of Dennis, Mass; Lizzie M. Stewart, Mary Willey, Jessie Williamson, Jr., T. J. Trafton, H. B. Gilsou, Mary and Eliza, Free Wind, Active, Loella, Union Flag, Velocipede, Wm. H. Y. Hackett, Daniel Marcy, Gov. Goodwin, Mayor Jones, Mystery, Unison and War Eagle, of Portsmouth; Patriot and Lucy Amelia, of Newcastle; Gen. Grant, of Hampton; Arcola, of Bath.

Frye & Co. took charge of a large box and package of clothing on the 22d, collected in this city for the Kansas sufferers.

It is astonishing what a number of damsels and masculines pay court to Judge Page, listen to his persuasive orations and decamp for Brentwood. Mrs. Fannie Hoffman was one of the number, on Thursday, the complaint being the keeping of a disorderly house and $300 bonds not forthcoming. Minnie Howard promised to lead a better life and was not sentenced. Then Lyman Clark paid in $14.18 for being indecent and disorderly.

Barnabee has rich entertainments in store for Portsmouth.

The democratic would-be delegates to the Congressional convention from the sixth ward who appointed themselves a committee to nominate took a back seat, and Samuel R. Thompson, James McClure, John Dixon and John Conlon were chosen. George B. French, Richard T. Call, James Norton and William T. Frye were elected to attend the State convention. We understand that the Congressional delegates favor the nomination of Mr. Jones.

Ezra H. Winchester, Esq., arrived home a few days sluce in seven days from San Francisco.

At the annual convocation of Washington Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons, held on Tuesday evening, the following officers were elected for the edsuing year: B. F. Webster, H. P.; H. G. Tanton, K.; W. A. Ashe, Scribe; John Nutter, Treas.; O. G. Fernald, Sec'y; John Dame, Capt. of the Host; J. R. Holbrook, Principal Sojourner; C. W. Norton, Royal Arch Captain; H. H. Ham, Jr., Master of Third Veil; S. G. Whittier, Master of Second Veil; T. E. O. Marvin, Master of First Veil; W. B. Randall, Tyler.

There will be Christmas services to-day at St. John's church, at 11 o'clock A. M. and 7.30 P. M.; and at the Unitarian church at the usual morning hour.

Mr. Horace W. Waldron, station agent of the Concord Railroad, has sued the city for damages sustained by Mrs. Waldron on account of an incumbrance of the highway on Hanover street. Mrs. W. was, in October last, going to Mr. Critchley's store, corner of Hanover and Bridge streets where the street was dug up, to repair a drain by Mr. Critchley, and falling in received the alleged injuries, for which damages to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars are claimed by Mr. and Mrs. Waldron in this action.

The usual semi-annual dividend of the Concord and Portsmouth Railroad will be paid at Mr. Hackett's office on Wednesdey next, Dec. 30th.

One day this week, an old worn out horse attached to a fish peddler's wagon fell exhausted in the street. The combined efforts of his owner and several other men were insufficient to get him upon his feet. An officer of the S. P. C. A. was informed of the case, and the poor brute was quickly put beyond the reach of suffering.

The Christian Union for December 15th contains a pleasingly written contribution on A. P. Peabody, D. D., from the pen of Amanda B. Harris.

Rev. Wm. A. Rand will be married at his church to-day, in Seabrook, the happy partner of his future joys and sorrows being a Miss Eaton of that place. We extend to Mr. Rand Christmas greetings, and the wish which we know is re-echoed by hosts of personal friends in this vicinity, that his married life may be peaceful as when one lies down to pleasant dreams.

There is to be a Christmas ball at Brackett's Academy, Greenland, to-night, with an oyster supper.

The Christmas tree at the Court Street chapel afforded lots of satisfaction to the little folks. The Unitarians have one at the Court street vestry this evening.

Rev. John A. Goss will lecture on "God's Love," at the Court street Christian chapel, Sunday evening.

The Journal says the wind was "discreet" in being north-easterly on the morning of the fire at the Raynes ship-yard.

What is the use of saying that the water gave out on Thursday? Everybody knows it.

Wagner stares visitors out of countenance, and expects to be hanged.

The Portland Press intimates that the Maine Central Railroad is to annul the ninety-nine years' contract with the Eastern.

A superior entertainment may be anticipated Monday evening, as the Misses Wallace have acquired a great reputation, and wherever they have appeared the press has accorded them unstinted praise.

Mr. Francis A. Drann of this city has been appointed acting boatswain in the navy.

Our correspondent S. O. R. accepts our wager that Mr. Small cannot carry this county, or city, and names the Portsmouth grange as the contingent beneficiary—in a communication too bitterly personal (against a man who may not be the democratic candidate) for us to publish. According to the offer mane, S. O. R. must appear on the scene the day before election with the funds necessary to cover the greenbacks to be deposited at that time—if the republicans are so foolish as to drag Mr. Small a third time.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and cho-ens literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE SEVTHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an Illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, and embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a finished number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES P AID, with one year's subscription, for $20; the same, charges NOT paid, $16. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $25; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20. The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

SCRIBNER & CO.,

NO. 654 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar flavor of Mr. NICHOLAS, which has conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of fun in great, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory. Its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men who think politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

—USE—

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the proofs of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE,

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or, intended to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

Bible Canvassing.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A Bible canvasser called into a house on Macomb street the other day to see if he couldn't sell a book. A small lame girl opened the door, and just as he entered a man sitting on the edge of a forlorn-looking bed raised a fiddle to his shoulder, and commenced scraping out a tune.

"Have you a Bible in the house?" asked the canvasser as he crossed the room.

"Nary Bibe," answered the man; "and

Old Dan Tucker
Dreamt a dream!"

"Or a hymn-book?" continued the canvasser.

"No, nary; and—

If you love me, Mollie, darling,
Let your answer be a kiss."

"I am agent for the sale of this Bible," said the canvasser, taking the volume out of his satchel.

"Couldn't buy one cover, and—

Oh, darkies, how my heart grows weary,
Sighing for the old folks at home."

"I can sell you the book for a small amount down, and the balance in weekly payments. A great many—"

"Bibuls are all right, but I've got a sore foot and—

'Twas a calm, still night,
And the moon's pale light."

"If you do not care to read the book yourself you should not refuse your child permission," remarked the canvasser.

"And the old woman's up stairs, sick with fever, and—

They took her off to Georgia
To toil her life away."

"But it seems hard to think that you are permitting yourself and family to live in ignorance of religious—"

"Bible is all right, and I'd encourage 'em if times wasn't so blasted—

Ha! ha! ha! you and me,
Little brown jug, don't I love thee."

"I have a smaller edition than this. You can have that by paying 50 cents down and 25 cents per week until paid up."

"No use, stranger," replied the man; "there hain't nothing to do, money is tight, and—

I've wandered this wide world
All over."

"I wish you would cease that fiddling and singing for a moment, and let me talk with you," said the agent.

"Bibuls is all right, you is all right, and—

Oh! this world is sad and dreary,
Everywhere I roam!"

"Won't you stop just one moment?"

"I would like to oblige, but now's my reg'lar time for fiddling and singing, and—

Up in a balloon, boys,
Up in a balloon."

"Then I can't sell you a Bible?"

"Don't look as if you could, for—

I've wandered through the village, Tom,
I've sat beneath the tree."

And the canvasser left the house in despair.

Samuel Blaine's Excursion.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A farmer's team came along, with a hay-rack, and Samuel took a seat on the "binder." He rode a short distance, and then let go and stepped into the coils of a rope dragging behind, and, before he knew what was up, he was dragged along through the slush. He gave an awful yell as he realized his situation; but the farmer lost his hearing years ago, and sat on his seat as stiff as the Cardiff giant, while the horses ambled along at an even pace. "Whoop! Hey! Say, you! Oh, murder!" yelled Samuel, as the slush ran up his pantaloons and his back was raked on the knobby street; but the farmer was thinking of home, sweet home, and he didn't reply. "You, there! whoop! Hi! Ho! Grashus and blazes!" roared Samuel, as he slid on his back and side, and felt his coat going over his head.

The farmer drove up Fourth to Lacrosse, and then went west, and there wasn't a hub or pond of water that Samuel Blame didn't find. Sometimes he was on his back, and then he would glide for a while t'other side up, and he kept up a yelling which made people run to the windows. Some boys observed his situation, but they thought it was a new kind of way to "catch a bob," and they yelled: "Bully for Samuel Blaine!"

"I'm being drawed to death—stop yer hosses!" shouted Sam; but the farmer was thinking about a grave on the hill-side, and he never turned his head. A man stopped on the walk and yelled, "Say, you've got a boy there!" but the farmer nodded his head and kept on. Finally, as he turned into Eighth street and headed for Michigan avenue, he looked around. Seeing Samuel coming up behind, rolling over and over, he thought the boy was trying to catch on, and he put the "bud" to his horses and went three blocks further and drew up at a grocery. When they discovered the boy's situation, they said it would take forty pounds of glue to mend him up, and one man advised killing him at once, so as to save Mrs. Blaine a doctor's bill; but wiser counsel prevailed and they carried him home.

Careless English.

A lady and gentleman were crossing our meadow one cloudy day, when suddenly it began to rain.

"Won't you be kind enough to hoist my umbrella?" said the lady.

"Certainly," said the gentleman.

I was astonished at this, for if "won't" means anything at all, it means will not; and therefore, according to my translation, the gentleman really had told the lady that certainly he would not be kind enough to hoist her umbrella!

But no. Even while [illegible] he opened that useful article, an[illegible] gracefully over his companion.

"Thank you!" s[illegible] earnestly.

"Not at all," said [illegible] still more earnestly And on they went.

"Why, the fellow flatly contradicted the lady," said I to myself. "How outrageous!"

But no, again, for they were on the best of terms, and the lady smiled sweetly at his words.

Yet the birds say that this sort of talk is quite usual among genteel beings.

News and Notes.

Mayor elect Cushing of Newburyport having declined the office, a new election will be held.

Congressman Small has a poor champion in the Haverhill Bulletin, whose weak tirade against our position requires no answer, being principally composed of mis-statements. We cannot help remarking, however, that it was but a few months ago that the Bulletin's editor appeared in our counting-room and "set up" Mr. Small in a way that was exactly opposed to his present views. Still more recently he has stated that he was so situated that he "must say a good word for Small"—for which we excuse his impudence, more especially as it is harmless. The Bulletin man is the only editor within forty miles of this Congressional district who can be "induced" to favor another renomination for Mr. Small.

The Saco night watch are so slow in sounding fire alarms that the firemen have tendered their resignations.

Lizzie Chase Hutchinson, wife of Asa B. Hutchinson, of the famous family of singers, died of apoplexy on Sunday week, at Rashford, Minnesota. She was a native of Nanucket and had been engaged in a temperance crusade.

The officers of the British ship Basilisk, which returned to England, December 11, after a voyage of nearly four years, report important discoveries made by them. The Basilisk has surveyed 12,000 miles of coast line, added at least twelve harbors, several navigable rivers and more than 100 islands to the existing chart of Torre's Straits and Eastern New Guinea. A new and shorter route has been found between Australia and China. Two lofty mountains, about 11,000 feet high, on the northeast coast of New Guinea, have been named Mount Gladstone and Mount Disraeli.

Details of the great gale on the English coast of the 10th, 11th and 12th insts., show that the marine disasters were much more numerous than for many years. The whole extent of the coast was strewn with wrecks and vessels in distress. The boats of the National Life-boat Institution were of great service and saved sixty-one lives.

The boiler of a portable pumping engine at Foster's wharf, Boston, exploded on Thursday, killing John Woodford. Three other persons were slightly injured.

Two terrible disasters are reported from England: On the day before Christmas an express train on the Great Western Railroad, while heavily laden with passengers, ran off the track near Oxford, going fifty miles an hour. All the cars went over a steep embankment. Thirty-four were killed, five died of their wounds, and some fifty more were injured. A broken rail caused the accident. While London was horrified over the disaster, news came of an explosion at Bignall Hill colliery, at North Staffordshire, thirty miners being killed. Thousands flocked to the place, including the families of the miners. The bodies were so blackened and mutilated on being recovered that many could not be recognized.

There is very great depression in shipbuilding on the Clyde, and the number of workmen has been reduced to one-half.

Speaking of the nomination of Nathaniel White for Governor by the prohibitionists, the Lowell Courier says: "Mr. White owns the Eagle Hotel in Concord, where report says the thirsty wayfarer can manage to get his balm, and as an expressman Mr. White is annually instrumental in bringing more liquor into the State than the entire prohibition party ever prevented from being drunk."

Josie Mansfield has recovered $25,291.31 from the estate of James Fisk for two promissory notes passed to her in 1868.

Cheshire county manufactures more woolen goods, consisting of beaver cloth, diagonals, flannels, horse blankets, etc., than any other county in the State, amounting in value to about $3,400,000, in usual times, a year. The granite business is increasing yearly, and is destined to be the heaviest business done in the county. There are immense quantities on the line of the Cheshire railroad at Keene, Troy and Fitzwilliam, while the proposed Manchester and Keene railroad will greatly increase the facilities for marketing the granite, as it will run near the celebrated Roxbury quarries.

J. B. Wilber's steam cider mill at Fremont has ground out 700 barrels of cider this season.

A young man of South Hampton, of good habits and a constant attendant at church, has been refused by twenty-five maidens of that town at divers times.

A few days since information was solicited through the advertising columns, of a Boston paper of a man named Powell, or Farwell. It appears that the man was Joseph Farrell, who had been employed in Ashburnham. In company with another man he applied for shelter at the house of a Mr. Kelly in New Ipswich, and was refused because of a recent case of varioloid in the house. He then went to the barn, fell asleep, and at midnight was found nearly frozen to death. He was taken into the house, and lived from Friday, Dec. 11th, till Tuesday, 15th, when he died.

Patrick Sullivan, forty years old, broke through the ice while drunk, Thursday, and was drowned in the Merrimack river at Manchester.

Addresses were made by gentlemen prominently connected with the agricultural interests of the State, and papers upon appropriate topics were presented and read.

A Primitive Wedding.

[Boston Adv.]

South Seabrook was intensely agitated Thursday afternoon by the marriage of its popular minister, Rev. William A. Rand, to whom is due in a very large measure the removal of that stigma that attached to the inhabitants of South Seabrook in years gone by, before Mr. Rand began his labors. The marriage, the first ever solemnized there with any public demonstration of interest, and the only event of the kind that has ever taken place within the classic walls of the village church, has for weeks been the chief topic of conversation in all circles of Seabrook society. Several invited guests were present, and representatives went from Newburyport, Amesbury, Salisbury, Hampton, Portsmouth, Boston and elsewhere. The vestry in which the wedding was held was in the lower portion of the unfinished church building, and it was a very curious vestry. Mottoes of every description covered the walls, hung in promiscuous contiguity. In one place "Thou shalt not steal," was placed near by "Gentlemen will please not spit on the floor or smoke in this room." In another, "The eyes of the Lord are in every place," was opposite "Warning to reckless drivers." Again, "Children, obey your parents," was below "Advice to teamsters." In other places were pictures; as a sample Holbein's "Dance of Death;" close by was a picture of the "Black Valley Railroad;" next to it a map of Essex county. The pillars of the vestry were wreathed with green, and in front of the end that answers for a chancel was an evergreen arch. Near by on a table were the presents, including a prettily worked motto, "The Lord will provide." About four o'clock the procession entered, the bridegroom accompanied by his brother, Rev. Mr. Rand of South Boston, the minister in charge, and severant al others. After a minute spent in expectant hush, the bride, Miss Isabelle Eaton of South Seabrook, entered, accompanied by her grandfather. She was preceded by her sister, Miss Georgie Eaton, leaning on the arm of the bridegroom's brother. The bride was most tastefully and becomingly attired in white tarlatan, with orange blossoms in her hair. Her sister was dressed in pink and white tarlatan and wore rosebuds. Rev. Mr. Pratt of Seabrook opened the services with a short prayer, the audience getting up on the seats to hear. Rev. Mr. Chase of East Salisbury then read the old English ritual of matrimony from an Oxford edition of the prayer book printed in 1726, and owned by the lady's father. He gave her away, and the ring was used as in the Episcopal service. Rev. Mr. Beaman then offered prayer, and Rev. Mr. Rand asked a blessing, as in the ritual. Rev. Mr. Waters of Andover seminary offered prayer, and Rev. S. J. Spalding, D. D., of Newburyport, pronounced the blessing. This closed the service, and the happy couple then received the congratulations of the assembled villagers, each after his or her own fashion.

Among the wedding presents were a handsome set of Shakspeare's works presented by Mr. Rand's classmates at Andover, and the usual silver-ware. Miss Eaton is twenty-two years of age, and her betrothed ten years her senior. He moved to South Seabrook eight years ago, and began a truly Christian work in bringing the colony once known as the "Algerine" into the ranks of civilization. During the term of his valued labors rumor has it that he was a faithful exemplar of muscular Christianity, as indeed ten years ago he must have found such style of argument positively necessary.

The Hunt For Charlie Ross.

Many interesting incidents connected with the search for Charley Ross have been obtained from the detectives employed in the case by the citizens of Philadelphia. The detectives began the search in July, and since then they have scoured the United States and Canada, and even crossed the Atlantic in the hope of finding the kidnapped boy. The work has cost over twenty thousand dollars. One of the largest items has been the expense of circulars, cards, and posters. Seven hundred thousand circulars have been issued containing the particulars of the abduction, descriptions of the boy and his kidnappers, and photographs of Charley. These have been sent to every police officer, Sheriff and constable, and posted in every railroad station, police office and post-office in the country. Two men were speedily detailed to attend to their distribution in Canada. The circulars were also posted in the vessels in most of our sea-ports. The printing, mailing, and the photographing have cost $8,000. Several thousand letters and telegrams have been sent to the detectives in answer to the circulars. Every communication has been answered and all trails followed. The correspondence has been so extensive as to require an extra corps of clerks.

Between five and six hundred children have been reported as Charley Ross. In numerous instances, where clues were thought to have been obtained, officers have been sent on investigations to distant places, only to find that the children had been trained to answer the questions intended for the identification of the missing boy, and that their keepers had been moved to the deception in the hope of having them ransomed. Twenty-five detectives were engaged at one time in making as many investigations.

The gypsies led the detectives on many long and fruitless chases. Over 200 bands were heard from as having children that were thought to be Charley Ross. Most of the children that were sought in the gypsy camps turned out to be stolen, and in several instances their parents were found. One little boy whom the officers came across in the tents of the gypsies was returned to his father and mother in Rockland county, N. Y., after two separations. They never expected to see him again.

The detectives believe that, directly and indirectly, half a million persons have been engaged in the Ross hunt. They can only explain the failure to find him on the ground that he is either dead or that the kidnappers left him in an obscure place with some recluse who has never heard anything of the case.

—As a Council Bluffs woman was doing her washing, one of her children fell into a kettle of water. The mother seized the infant, whose heart-rending cries indicated the terrible nature of its injuries, and deposited it upon a bed, while she ran to a neighbor's to get him to run for the doctor. Before the doctor arrived, all the neighbors had gathered, and among them, had undressed the screaming infant—very carefully, so that the scalded skin should not peel off—and sprinkled it with flour. At length the doctor arrived, almost at the same moment with the terror-stricken husband, whom also the messenger had found and bidden to "go home and prepare for the saddest news." The doctor made a careful examination of the infant, and promptly advised the mother to put a shirt or something on the child, so it might not freeze to death. The assembled neighbors one after another, felt of the water in the kettle, found it icy cold, and quietly separated.

—Recently the local paper at Grass Valley said: "The prettiest girl in Grass Valley doesn't carry herself straight enough when promenading." For a week after all the Grass Valley girls stalked about like so many ramrods; and every girl said, "That horrid paper! Ma, don't I walk straight?"

—The Shanghae newspapers protest against the construction of railroads in the Chinese Empire, because railroad travel is dangerous.

Local Matters.

The Christmas Ball

Of the Apollo Club was attended by about sixty couples, including ladies and gentlemen from Dover. A fine concert by the Naval Band was commenced at eight o'clock, lasting an hour, and before the grand Victoria march was commenced, the gallery was crowded. Mr. C. W. Varrell was chief marshal, and A. P. Pfeiffer and A. N. Wells assistants—J. H. Hazel, C. N. Thompson, C. P. Lamprey, M. F. Crowley and C. E. Akerman being aids. These young gentlemen are especially to be commended for their admirable arrangements, which caused everything to pass off smoothly. The ladies' orders of dances were very elegant and will be prized as keepsakes of the first Apollo ball. Entering into the spirit of the occasion, many of the ladies were dressed in elegant costumes, displaying exceeding good taste. The managers secured the attendance of a florist, and the button-hole bouquets were a feature of the occasion. Congress Hall was tastefully decorated with bunting and pictures, and nothing was omitted in the preparations calculated to make the ball a success, which it was in every particular, Virginia Reel closing the festivities shortly before five o'clock in the morning.

A Surprise.

Christmas-eve being the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Adaline Mendum, the Eastern and other roads centering into Portsmouth were taxed to their utmost capacity in bringing the children and grand-children together at the old homestead on Fleet street. The old lady was absent from her home at the time, owing to a little sharp maneuvering on the part of one of the grand-children who was let into the secret. After all had collected a carriage was despatched and a message sent to Mrs. Mendum that she was wanted at home, that it was not prudent for young ladies to be out too late at night. She was soon on hand and alighted from the carriage with her usual elastic step, not dreaming that anything was going on out of the usual course at her old quiet home. To her great surprise she found the house filled to its utmost with children, grand-children and relatives, who tendered their warm congratulations. The old lady was almost overcome with joy; all she could say was: "The Lord be praised" for having spared her life to meet these dear children on this seventy-fifth birthday. After being presented with many useful and valuable presents, all partook of a splendid supper, each one doing justice to the good things.

The following day, Christmas, Mr. C. H. Mendum entertained the children, grandchildren and a large number of relatives and friends at his mansion on Middle street.

There are eight children and thirty grand-children living, and but for the death of one little one a few months since, four generations would have been represented. *

Christmas Carollers.

Editor Chronicle; I wish to take advantage of the columns of your paper, for the purpose of expressing the thanks of the citizens living in the vicinity of the South Mill Bridge, for those beautiful Christmas carols so finely sung by the Andrews family on Friday morning last. I learn that it is a practice of these singers, in obedience to a time-honored custom in England, to celebrate the advent of Christmas morn by serenading their friends. And in so doing, they are justly entitled to great praise for their excellent music. They made their serenading tour on the evening alluded to, in a large wagon, in which were four singers (with a house-organ for accompaniment) forming a quartette of male and female voices that is difficult to excel. At least, this was my opinion of it, on the morning in question. The hour was rather unseasonable (2 o'clock A. M.) or they would doubtless have been invited to the hospitalities of somebody's house; although I am informed that they seek no applause or favors, to dispense their pleasant notes quietly and even incognito, rewarding themselves by the pleasure it affords them. May they live to enjoy many a merry Christmas, says

OLD SOUTH MILL BRIDGE.

Crash Music.

The sad wail of the flute and a noise like the impingement of a boot-heel upon the surface of a resonant flour barrel, gave notice shortly after midnight of Thursday that Christmas was at hand, and the picolo band was about. In the absence of the main part of the music, i. e. the air, people were for a time unable to ascertain what was the intent of the players, and some were of the opinion that Santa Claus had been dethroned by Santa Cruz; but the powerful alto and bass instruments served in time to guide them toward extricating the disguised music from its threatened annihilation, and we detected a resemblance to the Christmas carols which the sweet singers of England favored us with a half-dozen years ago—which, however, changed to less etherial harmony, and while we were endeavoring to unravel the strains from the thick mists of memory, they went "marching thro' Georgia" as if He whose birth-day they celebrated had taken a lively interest in the advance on Savannah! As increasing distance brought peace to our ears and somnolence stole on our senses gently once more, the musicians were struggling with "Mulligan Guards" with a terrific intensity which showed their confidence that they would eventually conquer it—or die!

P. & D. R. R. Accident.

On Christmas morning, when the 7.15 train from this city reached Dover, Engineer Pingree while endeavoring to make a flying switch discovered that the pin of the reversing rod of the engine had fallen out, rendering it entirely useless. The engine struck two freight cars standing on the track, throwing them into the street. The engine was badly damaged, and Engineer Pingree was considerably shaken up by being thrown against the boiler. The train was delayed about an hour. Engineer Hawkes was detailed to bring the wrecked engine back to Portsmouth.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the use of the court-house for Dec. 28th was granted the ladies of St. John's church.

The use of the State street ward-room for Dec. 31st was granted Kearsarge S. F. E. Co.

Eugene Sheafe's petition for the use of the Elm street ward-room one evening each week was referred to the committee on lands and buildings to fix the rent.

Voted to re-number the houses on Hill street.

Under suspension of the rules an ordinance relating to the fire department was passed.

The committee to whom was referred Judge Page's petition for an alteration at the station house were authorized to have it carried out.

The claim of Dr. F. E. Potter for damages sustained near Newcastle bridge was referred. Aldermen Hatch, George and Marvin were appointed a committee to procure plans and specifications for a new school-house.

Laconics.

Our correspondent, "S. O. R.," is not employed by Uncle Sam and never was—so the Times is in error in crediting his statement as coming from a navy yard workman.

The Dover Point railroad bridge is to be strengthened by ice cutters.

Capt. Mathews brought into our office on Saturday an old hat which had been fished up from one of the docks, having some five feet of sea-weed grown through its roof, clinging to it like the hair of a mermaid.

Mason's hill has been the scene of merry coasting parties of late—boys and girls by day, and ladies and gentlemen after dark. Double runners are the most popular arrangements.

Fifty religious conversions are reported in Greenland.

Elias P. Wentworth of Greenland having sued the town of Stratham for $12,000 damages for injuries received from being thrown from a carriage in that town, the case has been referred to a Portsmouth attorney.

Rumors have been prevalent that Hon. Frank Jones will succeed Mr. Chas. F. Hatch as Manager of the Eastern Railroad.

Judge Page's Saturday matinee after Christmas was attended by John Thompson, whose assault on Daniel Donovan cost him $15.04; by Thomas Collins, whose drunkenness secured him thirty days' residence at the county house; by Simeon Pickering, whose common drunkenness secured him sixty days at the same place; and by James Gallagher, who was fined for being drunk.

William Anderson, son of the late porter at the navy yard, has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his father.

On Saturday, a young daughter of Mr. Elwood Hutton had a narrow escape from death at Noble's island. As the engine "Othello" was approaching the junction of the Eastern and P. & D. R. R., the little girl with some others ran in front of it about three feet ahead. The Hutton girl fell and rolled just clear of the track, so near that the engine passed over a portion of her dress.

Mr. Nathaniel Wiggin has purchased the farm of Jonathan Buzzell on Boyd's Road in this city, and buildings thereon, for $3000.

The Skies Brightening.

The New York Economist sees a rift in the cloud that has been overhanging the business of the country. It says that the three months' contraction of production agreed upon by the cotton and woolen manufacture will expire on the 1st of January and information from the leading manufacturing centres shows that the mills are all preparing to start in full operation at that time, as stocks in all the large wholesale centres are now very low. In the iron trade similar favorable indications are also apparent. It says that capital is also abundant, and raw material and labor cheap. At the present time heavy amounts of money are lying idle, and there is no probability that capitalists will ever obtain a more favorable time for its investment. During the three weeks from the 1st of January next a total of not less than $150,000,000 will be distributed in dividends on government, railroad and other securities in New York alone. If other business centres are included, the aggregate will be largely increased, and will reach a total of hundreds of millions. Of course much of this money is only available for what is called income account, but still there will remain considerable balance for investment and speculation, and much of it will go into reproductive industries where it will be more directly under the control of the investors. The Economist, therefore, looks for a decided improvement in business on or before the 1st of January.

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, said by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK Improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

"DOUBTLESS THE
BEST COUGH MEDICINE
IN THE WORLD."
[From one of the Oldest and very best Houses in America.]
MESSRS. CUTLER BROS. & CO.
CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 13, 1872.
Please send us TEN gross small and FIVE gross large "Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam." This is doubtless the best Cough Medicine in the World.
[Signed] ALLEN & CO.
P. S. These parties have sold this Balsam for over thirty years.
[From one of Boston's most estimable citizens.]
No. 5 Worcester Sq., BOSTON, March 18, 1873.
Messrs. CUTLER BROS. & CO.
In ordering another small lot of your invaluable
VEGETABLE PULMONARY BALSAM,
I should like to tell you what I know about it, in order that others may have the benefit of my EXPERIENCE.
Since this Balsam first came to my notice, in 1848, I have kept it constantly in the house, never allowing myself to be out of it over night. In all these
TWENTY-FIVE YEARS
It has not failed in a single instance in my own case to give the desired relief; and I will say the same in regard to my mother, whose
LIFE WAS SAVED
By it as I cannot but think. Hers was a case of Congestion of the Lungs, and although attended by a most skillful physician, she seemed to fail constantly, so that we despaired of her recovery, when an old friend and neighbor persuaded her to try this Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam. The result was most gratifying, I assure you.
RELIEF WAS IMMEDIATE
And recovery rapid. She is now over 82 years old, and is active and well. Whenever she gets a severe cold, which happens once in a while, she takes thirty to sixty drops, according to the violence of the cough, which has always yielded in a day or two by taking the Balsam only on retiring at night. With it the
IRRITATION
Is at once subdued, and a good night's sleep secured. I will mention another case, that of a young lady acquaintance, who
BLED AT THE LUNGS
And coughed painfully, had night sweats and was fearfully reduced. She left Boston for her country home, 100 miles away, as we supposed to die. I sent her a bottle of your Balsam, and soon had the satisfaction to hear that she was much better. She continued taking it for a while and got
ENTIRELY WELL,
And is living now, which fact is to be ascribed mainly to the use of the Vegetable Pulmonary Balsam.
Very truly yours, JOHN CAPEN.
As there are many imitations, be careful to get the genuine. Price in large bottles, which are much the cheaper, $1; small bottles, old style, 50 cents.
CUTLER BROS. & CO., Wholesale Druggists, Proprietors, Boston.
For sale by Apothecaries generally.

Across the Atlantic.

NUMBER VI.

I think I said I would give you my impressions of England, her people, railroads, hotels, etc. I must have said something to that effect, for now that I write out the words, they sound just like me; just like the green, unsophisticated Yankee I am. Did you ever know an American to be 'abroad' three weeks who was not possessed of the idea to write a book, no matter if he hardly knew enough of his mother tongue to correctly construct three sentences in succession? Or for that matter an Englishman either. It runs in the Anglo-Saxon blood, I guess.

If a man wants to know how great a fool he can be, how swelled out with insufferable egotism he can get to be in the shortest possible time, let him go to Europe. He will find out provided he is not a natural born ass before he starts. I "write about England, her people, etc!" The idea! What do I know to write about?

I have a friend now in the States who was in Madrid during one of the revolutions of the government, and in Spain altogether, about five months. This season he was in the country again for a period of three weeks, making observations, and taking notes; and now is at home again busily writing up his book about Spain, her people, and her peculiar institutions. I do not know just what the title of the book is to be, but it will be something like the above. Is'nt that richness? In his last letter to me he writes, full of enthusiasm to the brim, that there has been only one good book upon England written, and none upon France or Spain worth reading. He is going to do one of those countries on a capital of a very little knowledge of the language, and less than six months' experience in the country. Now, my friend will write a first-rate, readable book; there is no question about that, for he has ability of the highest order; but what about his impressions? What would you give for his conclusions? During a portion of my long, weary voyage across the Atlantic, I beguiled the hours in reading a book of travel written by a prominent journalist of Boston. The time of his visit to England and Europe was, I think, just before the Franco-Prussian war, and the book is capitally written and very interesting. Quite a portion of it is devoted to England, some of the odd things and ways Americans meet there, her railroads, newspapers, etc. One day my captain, a fine, gentlemanly person by the way, and possessed of rare intelligence, had the book in hand for a few hours, and then, with a look of strong disgust upon his features, brought it to me again, saying: "I would not read that book if I were you, Mr. Stevens. If you are going to visit England try and do so with your mind disabused of prejudices, and not filled with such a mass of lies as are in that book. Nearly everything I have read in it respecting England and her institutions is either a gross misrepresentation, or a direct falsehood;" and then he went on to explain his statement. We had a good-natured discussion over the book, as well as about America; but though we did not agree upon all points, and I did not find his own mind entirely free from prejudices, still I had to admit that he might be, and ought to be, better posted regarding his native country, and the ways of her people, than my author was.

Well, you will say this does not sound like being puffed up with egotism. Not a bit, and for the best of reasons. I had my attack early, and have recovered from it. I had it bad, though. I went from one coast of England through to the opposite coast. I visited her great city of London, and saw the store where Victoria buys her "Old Tom;" roamed over the mighty docks of Liverpool, and saw specimens of her human vermin stand on their heads, and crack filberts with their teeth; explored her old Castles where lies are coined by the cart load; visited her walled towns, and ancient Cathedrals, and ate peanuts and taffy while meandering through the streets of her inland towns and villages, and conceitedly thought myself fully competent to write a book, and tell all the wonders and glories of their little kingdom by the sea.

Perhaps I should have done so anyway, but fortunately, or unfortunately, as it may be, my stock of egotism did not hold out. There was not enough in my composition to last me through. I console myself with the thought that what is my loss is the world's gain. I have wandered. I said I would give my impression of England, her hotels, railroads, etc., etc., and as I said, so will I do though I begin my task with fear and trembling, mentally vowing that once out of this I will never be such a fool again—never! at least, not until another favorable opportunity presents itself. I do not propose considering the history of England at their time;—you will find the whole of that in any of the guide books,—or yet to take up and dissect her people,—let the doctors do that; or yet to tell you everything that has ever been found out respecting her institution, ways, manners, customs, etc., but simply to speak to you of some of the things I saw, and tell you some of the thoughts suggested by journeying through her territory, always with that strict regard for truth which is a part of my nature.

Perhaps sometime I may write a real book of travels in England, taking up and carefully considering every thing of interest in and about the country. I feel myself fully competent to do this only give me time. Sir Joshua Reynolds, England's great painter, once said that he could do anything anyone else could provided he gave to the task two to three times the amount of time they gave; and I guess he could, for he was a very wonderful man. I am somewhat like the great artist in some respect, and have a measure of the same confidence in myself, though I am not quite so sure about the time that would be needed. I know I could do what I have said, but think I should want about two hundred and fifty years for preparation.

We will commence with personal impressions: and now on the start, to show you how little dependence can be placed on first impressions in a strange land, I will tell you something that rather humiliated me the very first day of my arrival in England. It will, at least, serve to show how easy it is to be mistaken. Now I am not a proud, stuck-up sort of a man, at least I am not usually so. In fact I do not remember of feeling that way to any considerable extent more than twice in my life, and those times were very excusable. One was when I was elected president of that august political body, yclept the Common Council of the city of Portsmouth. And the other was when the Governor called his whole board of advisors together, and after mature consideration of all the bearings appointed me Justice of Peace and Quorum for the whole State of New Hampshire. I felt a commendable degree of pride in those events. I looked upon them as epochs in the history of my life, and the history of my native State, and possible I put on airs. If I did I know my admiring fellow citizens forgave me for it.

Well, when our ship was going into berth at Liverpool, and before any of us had landed, all at once a cannon was heard, the bells of the city broke out in a gladsome ring, and soon, down past the long range of docks there came marching a gallant array of troops in the Queen's livery, followed by a long line of carriages, men on horseback, more soldiers, more carriages, and more men on horseback, and more soldiers,—an almost interminable procession, until it seemed the whole city of half a million must have turned out. My face flushed at once, and my heart for a few moments beat in full accompaniment to the drums in the procession. Surely thought I, this must be for me. My friends at home, wishing to do me additional honor have telegraphed that I may be expected about this time; and the boat which so mysteriously streamed down the Channel yesterday, and after taking the name of our ship, as mysteriously steamed back again, without another word, was the boat sent out by Her Majesty, or at least, by His Worship the Mayor to ascertain the exact time of my arrival. Such is fame! thought I; and then I strove to look as if these sort of things were every day occurrences to me. I must admit I felt a little flustered, as I thought over what I would say in reply to the welcoming speech, waiting patiently all the time for the procession to pass by, at least, as much of it as would bring in view the carriage intended for me; but still so great was my outward control that I even condescended to smile upon our Captain and intimate to him that he would see something soon which would surprise him. I think I stood there, just like Lot's wife, for nearly an hour, waiting to be surprised by the visit of the committee until at last, beginning to feel just the least bit of confidence, I ventured, in as off hand a manner as I could assume, to inquire of an urchin sitting on the edge of the wharf eating melon peel, what all this commotion and display meant? "Don't yer know?" said he, "Hi guess yer don't take ther papers where yer came from."

I mildly informed him I did not know,—though I felt guilty of telling a lie at the time—or otherwise I should not have asked. And then I hastened to add that the newsboy had somehow forgotten to deliver our morning paper for the past few weeks.

"Well, Mr. Hamerican man, Hi'll tell you then. This is the first day of the visit of my friend ther Duke of Edenbugger, who comes down from London to hopen ha ball, and desecrate han Horphan Hasylum." *

Did I hear aright! Yes! And this was the miserable ending of all my exalted expectations. Even the little gamin on the wharf seemed to divine my disappointment, for he offered to give me a piece of his melon peel for the paltry sum of a penny. I felt crushed and homesick, but I didn't do anything rash in my sorrow. I only said: Sich is fame! Now this unbosoming of my private grief and disppointment may seem foolish and uncalled for to you. I admit men less philanthropic than I am would keep it to themselves; but I do it for a purpose,—for the purpose of a comparison. I was to give my impressions of England, and at the same time vouch for their real worth. In this little episode you have the first really distinct impression I received upon catching sight of an English city, and you see how little it was to be depended upon.

No, it is well enough to write about museums that have been written about scores of time before; of old towns, old Roman walls, old Castles, and old Cathedrals of which anything may be said and not too much said after all. But this writing about a country one knows nothing about; about a people one has never lived with, and with whom you are not even in sympathy; and of institutions the genius of which the writer is profoundly ignorant, is something for only him to do whose spirit of vanity and egotism saturates his whole system. Selah!

Since leaving Liverpool I have been asked several times by countrymen abroad if I saw the Duke of Edinburgh. Yes, I saw him. An ordinary sort of a good looking young man he was too, with his hat on, but with his hat off I should have known him at once to be a high swell of some kind. He carries his patent of nobility on the top of his head—he parts his hair in the middle. I bought a picture of him for a penny, to take home to my boy, that he may ever have a correct model before him in growing up. This parting of his hair in the middle makes the duke look every inch a prince. By the way, I must speak of this just here. I know my letter is growing tediously long, but you will remember that I promised to remove stumbling stones away before the feet of those who come after me. This is one of the stones I had in mind. Do not be afraid, I am not going to rake over any of the mental or moral characteristics of the English people, much less an English prince. This matter refers to a physical outlook and has a bearing upon every American youth who crosses the Atlantic.

No tourist's book I have ever read, and no letter of foreign travel, that I remember of, have ever spoken of this distinctive mark of the higher classes of England. I blame them exceedingly for this, for the lack of the knowledge which might then have been imparted puts our young kings and princes who come over here under a painful disadvantage. I hardly know when I have so acutely felt my utter insignificance and inferiority as I have upon several occasions when sitting in the coffee room of some of the principal hotels, with a half dozen or so of the lords of creation—I always took them to be Dukes, Earls, Viscounts, etc., after seeing Prince Alfred and his suites—around and near me, all of them with their hair parted in the middle. I tried to make the people in the hotel understand my own importance, but bless you, it was no use; those fellows with the middle part, always got the first attention. I soon learned that it was one of the distinctive marks of gentle blood—they do not say blue blood over here, they call it gentle blood; but it means the same thing I guess—and that even the waiters in the restaurants so adorned themselves. I do not shame to say that I tried to ape the fashion, in fact I admired it, it makes the upper part of the face look so manly and fearless; but somehow, I presume from having been jerked about so much by my front lock when a youngster at school, my hair wouldn't part there worth a canceled postage stamp.

I trust I have earned the lasting gratitude of my countrymen, who contemplate coming abroad, for speaking of this. If I had only known it in season, and spent the time on my hair that I did on my side whiskers, during the voyage, my stay in England might have been even more pleasant than it was.

I got to my hotel at last,—I am commencing to speak of my impressions again—, but it was by a roundabout way. The grand ovation to the Prince, (who by this time, my natural serenity having returned, I did not envy a bit,) and the immense crowd in the streets, would not let my cabman get to the Washington Hotel, where I intended to go, so I was put down at the Adelphi. I was glad of this afterwards. I liked the Adelphi. It is a first class English hotel, but slow, O, so slow. You must order your breakfast the night before if you wish to have it the same day you get up, but not forgetting to do this, you will get a breakfast fit for an American sovereign. Such mutton, and muffins and fried sole cannot be had down at Parker's. Yes, I have nothing but good to say of the Adelphi, rambling, old-fashioned and unhotel like as it looked; and it was with regret the next morning that I called for my bill, and changed my quarters to the Washington, where I had directed my letters to be sent. This hotel is advertised as being built expressly on the American model, and managed on the American plan; but visitors abroad will soon learn that any pretentions of this kind, whether in Liverpool, London, or Paris, are but bait for gudgeons, and are a delusion and a snare. The nearest approach I have seen to an American hotel out of America, is here in Paris (writing from P. now) where at Hotel Chatham, one can have a good breakfast, cooked to order in fifteen minutes, of scrambled eggs, beef-steak, fish-balls and buckwheat cakes, The Washington Hotel, however, is a well kept house and a trifle less slow than the Adelphi, though I like the last named full as well. I presume the reason they call it an American Hotel is because it has a regular billiard room, and a bar; though after noting that fact, the resemblance ceases, for the tables are but three in number, and are old fashioned six pocket affairs, brought probably from the ruins of Pompeii; and the bar is presided over by two well-dressed, good looking, and modest appearing—if modesty be possible in such a position—young women. I doubt, however, if these same young women know anything about the art of mixing a sherry cobbler, a brandy smash, an eye-opener, a stone-wall, a kerosene cock-tail, or a Virginia rail-fence. I doubt it very much, notwithstanding the name of the hotel, and I am happy in the possession of those doubts. I do not think they would be modest young women if they did know how. All the hotels I have visited in England, some twenty in number, seem to be managed after one model. There are three presiding geniuses in each. A porter, who attends to you and your baggage, and assigns you a room. A head waiter, who seems to be,—well, yes, a manager of everything, and a head waiter too. I guess that is about it. He smiles upon you when you go into the coffee room, and waves you to a seat; and if he is somewhat rotund in figure, and slightly gray haired, impresses you with the conviction that he is some nobleman in disguise. I liked those head waiters. They look lordly, but they are not stuck up a bit. They will accept a shilling from you if you insist upon it. The third figure in the group is a young lady who sits among a lot of books, behind a glass fence,—that is not exactly the word I want, but is the nearest that occurs to me now,—and whose business it is to keep an account of what you have for breakfast and dinner, and how many drinks and cigars you have, "baths," "arrowroot and gruel," "sundries," "newspapers," and "sheets of paper." These young females may be as learned as Lady Jane Gray was, but it will not do you any good if they are. All you can get from them is the amount of your bill, and "I don't know, sir; ask the porter." Happy porter! He can tell you anything you want to know, and so he gets the most shillings and sixpences. On the whole I like English hotels. I know it is the fashion for our people to come over here and abuse everything they see, and in particular the hotels. I have a book before me now in which I find the following:

"In London, nothing is ever ready, and everything must be ordered in advance. It is a positive wonderment to me that the swarms of Englishmen, whom one meets in the well-kept hotels of Berne, Lucerne, Wiesbaden, Baden Baden, etc., can, after enjoying their comforts and conveniences, endure the clumsy manners of hotel-keeping and the discomforts of the London hotels, or that landlords of the latter can persist in hanging back so obstinately from adopting the latest improvements."

There you have it. Don't you wonder London still stands, or at any rate that her hotel keepers have not all given up their business? He has given his impression of England you see. Well, perhaps I am slow. I am glad of it I if am. What is the use in being in a hurry, and making everybody hate you? I have eaten hundreds of poorer meals in our own hotels than the very poorest one I have had set before me in England. They do do things slow here, but they do them well. The cooking is only a little ways behind that of the French, and is a hundred times more honest. A.P.S.

Tilton Again.

Theodore Tilton has addressed the following card to the public concerning the two trials, the one civil and the other criminal, involved in his controversy with Rev. Henry Ward Beecher:

"Mr. Beecher's pronunciamento in the Christian Union of this week requires me to reply as follows:

First, I have charged the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher with seduction and adultery. These charges I have already proved to the full belief of three-quarters of the people of this nation, including almost unanimously the legal profession, who above all other classes are most competent to weigh evidence. I now wait to repeat and solemnize this proof in a court of law. To this end two actions are pending in the city court of Brooklyn. These are—First, a civil suit instituted by me against Mr. Beecher; second, a criminal indictment procured by Mr. Beecher against me. The first of these causes, namely mine against him, is continually thwarted by his strange and unexemplified demand for a catalogue of the particular dates and places at which he committed his acts of adultery. What is the practical effect of this demand? The sexual intimacy between Mr. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton extended (according to their own account of it) from the fall of 1868 through the whole of 1869 into the spring of 1870, overlapping three successive years, and yet Mr. Beecher, while publicly asking for what he calls the fullest investigation, requests me to dwarf and shrivel my proof of this prolonged criminality to two particular days, namely, October 10 and 17, 1868, a limitation which his counsel are willing to enlarge so as to include an entire autumnal month, during most of which Mr. Beecher was absent from Brooklyn, sheltered in a safe alibi beyond an opportunity to crime. It is an affront to ethics and equity, and a miracle impossible to limit Mr. Beecher's fourteen months of adulteries to two days. Accordingly I give the public due notice that so far as the civil case is concerned (which is controlled by me) I shall go into court on the first day when I am permitted to carry all my evidence with me, but never while I must leave nine-tenths of this evidence outside the door. In other words, to try Mr. Beecher for adultery with the adultery carefully forbidden to be proved is a farce, which I am not harlequin enough to play in these sad days.

Second—Meanwhile, since Mr. Beecher is seeking to baffle my case against him, I challenge him to end this by-play of strife over a bill of particulars by calling up his case against me. This he has the power to do at any moment. What is this case? On the third of October last Mr. Beecher went before a grand jury in Brooklyn and by his own oath procured against me an indictment for libel. This indictment furnishes the best case to test the real issue between Mr. Beecher and me. This real issue is not whether he shall pay me $100,000 for ruining my home (though not a penny of this money would I accept if a hundred juries should multiply it to a million), but simply whether Rev. Henry Ward Beecher is guilty of seduction and adultery; and whatever complications may exist in my civil action against Mr. Beecher for damages eliciting his ceaseless demand for particulars, on the other hand simplicity itself is not more simple than Mr. Beecher's criminal case against me for libel if I accused him falsely. In this criminal case I shall neither trouble him for particulars, nor drive him from the special term to the general, nor drag him to Albany to the court of appeals, nor compel him to try his cause with a mere tithe of his evidence, nor in any manner impose upon him a gossamer weight of difficulty in his bringing me to justice. Moreover, in the criminal case he will be relieved of his ill-omened fears of civil damages. He will have the attack instead of the defence. He will be entitled to the last word to the jury, and if I have borne false witness against him, he will be able not only to prove me guilty, but to send me to the penitentiary.

Third—I am advised and believed that the cunning managers of Mr. Beecher's safety are seeking to contravene the ends of justice by the following stratagem, to wit: As soon as Mr. Beecher's counsel shall have restricted me so as to make inadmissible my proofs of his fourteen months of adultery, thus cutting the very heart's core out of the civil suit, their plan then is to suddenly withdraw the criminal indictment against me, which withdrawal is to be explained to the public by Mr. Beecher's chief champion and fellow-sufferer under a charge of seduction, the editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, as an act of unexampled magnanimity shown to me by Mr. Beecher. By this plan of operations I am to be prevented from trying Mr. Beecher in the civil suit. Mr. Beecher is at the same time to be saved from the grim necessity of trying me under the criminal indictment, and so by these two devices Mr. Beecher is to escape trial altogether. I respectfully request all fair-minded persons to unite in determining that Mr. Beecher shall not have the moral support of the community in thus compelling me to restrict my proofs of his adulteries of 1868, 1869 and 1870 to two days, nor in his scheme of first procuring against me a criminal indictment for temporary effect, and then withdrawing it from subsequent trial.

Fourth—Touching Mr. Beecher's renewed demands for impossible particulars, I here repeat in substance that my counsel presented before the court a fortnight ago, in prompt fulfilment of their pledge to supply at a half-hour's notice all the particulars which we possessed. They are these: That the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher committed acts of adultery with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton on the 10th and 17th of October, 1868, and at intervals thereafter till the spring of 1870. That the said acts were committed at 124 Columbia street, and 174 Livingston street, in the city of Brooklyn; that confessions of these acts were made by Mrs. Tilton on the 3d of July, 1870, and other times; that similar confessions were made by Mr. Beecher on the 4th of December, 1870, and other times; that the confessions were made to Mrs. Martha B. Bradshaw, Mrs. Emma R. Moulton, Mr. Francis D. Moulton, myself and others; that the confessions of Mr. Beecher were made to Mr. and Mrs. Moulton, myself and others, to say nothing of a series of Mr. Beecher's letters by which he makes plain confession of his guilt to all who can read and think; and I respectfully submit that the statement of particulars, of which the foregoing is a digest, and which was laid by my counsel before the court and the public many days ago, is sufficiently explicit to warrant me now in demanding that Mr. Beecher shall either be stopped by public opinion from imposing unheard-of restrictions on my evidence in the civil case, or else that he shall forthwith begin his criminal prosecution. Furthermore, I ask all just men to join with me in declaring that if Mr. Beecher should still further clog and hamper the civil action on the one hand and at the same time shall withdraw the criminal prosecution on the other, thus using both these cases to only prevent me from submitting to a jury the general fact of his long continued adultery, Mr. Beecher shall then be deemed to have confessed judgment and must stand self-acknowledged as guilty before the civilized world."

Warmoth Kills His Man.

A personal encounter took place in New Orleans on Christmas day between ex-Governor Warmoth and Mr. Byerly, proprietor of the New Orleans Bulletin, in which the latter received injuries inflicted with a knife which afterward caused his death. Warmoth is under arrest.

The difficulty arose from a newspaper discussion. It was precipitated by a published letter from Governor Warmoth, in which he severely criticised an editorial paragraph in the Bulletin advocating the re-establishment of the Star cars for negroes upon city railroads. This brought out a vigorous editorial in the Bulletin, reviving the old issues, and teeming with damaging charges against the ex-governor, who answered the same in a personal card published in the Picayune.

Mr. Jewell one of the editors of the Bulletin, challenged Warmoth to fight a duel, to which Warmoth acceded. Meeting Byerly, publisher of the Bulletin, on the street, however, a fracas resulted, in which Byerly was killed.

Mr. Jewell, on being interviewed said: Governor Warmoth brought to the Bulletin office the proof sheets of a letter written by him in reply to an editorial published in the Bulletin upon Star cars, After reading it I advised him against publishing it, being so entirely inconsistent with his present political position that it would necessarily expose him to severe criticism, in which I would be forced to join. He expressed his willingness to take all such consequences, whereupon I had the article published in the next day's issue, accompanied with such editorial remarks as I deemed pertinent to the issue. Having thus brought himself prominently before the public as an unqualified advocate of social equality, I published a second editorial, reviewing his entire public career. In reply to this he published a card over his own name in the Picayune, which I considered a personal reflection upon myself of such an unwarranted character as to justify me in demanding of him personal satisfaction. This message was borne by my friends Washington Marks and John Overton, and accepted by him. The meeting was subsequently arranged. Mr. Byerly was present on Christmas day when the consultation of my friends took place, when, considering himself also aggrieved by Warmoth's card, he expressed himself determined to seek satisfaction in a different manner from that selected by myself. In regard to the hostile encounter which ensued I know nothing about Byerly's intention, nor had I any intimation that anything of the kind would occur. Warmoth's present incarceration in the parish prison merely delays action in my own difficulty, and he will be held to a strict accountability as soon as released.

Gov. Warmoth said after the occurrence: "Several days ago I published a courteous letter in the daily papers in answer to a proposition made by the Bulletin to establish the Star cars upon the city railroads. This letter showed that the conservative party did not sanction that recommendation, and that it was both injudicious and unwise. I took this letter to the Bulletin office myself and saw both Mr. Byerly, the manager, and Mr. Jewell, one of the editors. Jewell objected strongly to its sentiments and Byerly told me, "Governor, if you publish that letter we will ruin you." Before leaving I said, "Gentlemen, disagree with me as much as you choose—dispute and controvert my sentiments and I won't complain, but don't attack me personally." The next day the Bulletin contained a violent and abusive personal attack upon me. The same evening an anonymous letter also appeared abusing me outrageously. The next morning's issue came out with a column-and-a-half leader, charging me with all kinds of political enormities. The next day I published a card, showing that Jewell had offered to vote for the printing bill, providing he received $50,000 worth of printing for the paper he then edited. Early next morning (Christmas) I was waited upon by two friends of Jewell, who demanded an abject apology. This I promptly refused.

Whereupon they asked me if I would accept a challenge to fight a duel, remarking at the same time that it was generally understood that I would not fight. I replied that I would not fight if I could well avoid it, as I was not a fighter, and that it would be time enough to answer the question about duelling when I was challenged. Later in the day the affair was confided to our respective friends. They met at eight o'clock last evening, and agreed that Jewell and myself should fight in Alabama on Monday morning, the weapons to be duelling pistols, and distance ten paces. These terms having been accepted, I did not, of course, apprehend an attack, especially not from any one connected with the Bulletin. My understanding of such matters is that antagonists, pending a meeting, should be courteous, and I was just on the eve of tipping my hat to Mr. Byerly, in front of whom two ladies were walking, the street being crowded, when he struck me with a heavy stick on the head, inflicting a wound two inches long over the left temple, extending back from the forehead. He struck me three times, when I clinched with him, in the meantime taking my knife out of my pocket with my arms around his shoulders. I got my hands together and opened the knife. Just then I fell, Byerly falling on me. Soon after we fell a policeman took the knife out of my hands, and some of the crowd pulled Byerly off. I understand he has been cut, and that I am accused of doing the cutting.

I regret exceedingly that I have been forced to do this issue. I had hoped to get through life without being a party, either directly or indirectly, to such an unfortunate occurrence. I am no fighting man, but on the contrary have always had the greatest distaste and horror of personal altercations. This one was certainly not of my seeking nor could I possibly have avoided it.

—"Maria Monk's daughter" (Mrs. St. John Eckel) makes the following confession as to how she cured her pug nose: "At night I would take a long garter and fasten it around my face, drawing it so tightly over the tip of my nose that I could hardly breathe through my nostrils. During the day I used to pull on the nose. In two years I succeeded, and the pug had disappeared. How much did I not suffer for this vanity!"

—A lady who was suffering from a chest disorder recently, called in a physician to learn if she were in danger of dying suddenly. Imagine her astonishment when the doctor told her husband, in her presence, that there was no mitral lesion, but the thoracic impulse was diminished, which might be due to the thickness of the parietes of the thorax— possibly to a diminution of cardiac force.

Laconics.

The Wallace Sisters, Jennie, Minnie and Maud, will perform here this evening, supported by a "powerful combination of acknowledged metropolitan artists and full orchestra, 33 in number." The Portland Argus says of them: Those very charming young ladies, the Wallace Sisters, appeared at Music Hall last evening, supported by a capital company for the burlesque business. The Wallaces are very pretty, sing fairly, dance finely, and have a nameless witchery in their ways. The orchestra is especially excellent. The entertainment, we may safely say, is one of the most pleasing that has happened along for many a day."

Margaret Henderson had her arm badly injured by being caught between the belt and pulley of a loom in Kearsarge Mills, Monday.

Mr. George A. Jones, agent of the Barnabee company, was in town on Monday arranging for the concert and operetta performances. Tickets for these entertainments may now be purchased at Preston's drug store, and we advise all who wish to obtain choice seats to do so immediately. A fine photograph of either Mr. Barnabee or Mrs. Smith will be given to each purchaser of tickets to the concert and operetta.

Officers of the S. P. C. A. took a half starved and lame old horse from a fish pedlar, Monday. The animal was promptly killed as an act of mercy.

Our old friend "Buggins" is likely to be the democratic nominee for Senator in this district, and it would be one of the pleasures of this life to vote for him if he were only a republican and not opposed by such an excellent candidate as Dr. Hall.

Two children of Mr. Chas. A. C. Gray died on Sunday, the little girl forty minutes after her brother's decease, of scarlet fever.

The pupils of Smith's Academy have a vacation until next Monday. On the day before Christmas, Master Robert Simes, on behalf of the scholars, presented Mr. Lewis E. Smith, the careful and painstaking Principal, an elegant rosewood clock, which will ornament the school-room hereafter. Miss Susie Christie's present was a gold pen and a pen-holder of pearl and gold. The teachers responded happily.

The pupils of the grammar school taught by Mr. Durgin presented their faithful teacher with a beautiful silver castor, on Christmas Day.

Meetings of the Board of Agriculture will be held at Rye, Jan. 12th, at 10.30 A. M., and at Seabrook, Jan. 7th, at 10.30 A. M., continuing day and evening. In addition to other subjects there will be discussions on "Grass and Hay" and "Poultry and Eggs."

Lieut. Thos. M. Gardner, U. S. N., commanding U. S. S. "Speedwell" at this naval station, fell on the ice while walking in the street in Boston on Saturday evening, and dislocated one of his shoulders. He was taken to the Adams House.

The U. S. steam yacht "Portfire" sunk at a navy yard wharf, last Friday night, having been caught under the edge of the wharf by the rising tide. Workmen are engaged in raising her.

Sch. "Kossuth," of New York, Capt. Dodge, with lumber from Calais, Me., put into this harbor on Sunday afternoon. While beating up the river she went ashore on Clark's Island, and bilged. Steamer Clara Bateman with two gondolas is taking off the deck load, when it is expected the vessel will float. The Captain and crew were hospitably received and cared for by Civil Engr. B. F. Chandler and others, of the Navy Yard.

News and Notes.

Henry Ward Beecher has been sued by a dentist for payment for three sets of artificial teeth.

The five constitutional amendments recommended by Governor Kellogg of Louisiana, and adopted by his legislature, are all carried according to the count of both parties in the returning board. The official report gives Duputlet, republican candidate for State treasurer, 958 majority.

Advices from Russia state that the Grand Duke Nicholas has been pronounced insane and placed under guardianship.

Those wicked New York aldermen took King David to see the Black Crook.

The emigrant ship Cospatrick has been burned at sea, and 465 passengers perished.

Boston is preparing for King Kal's arrival on Friday.

Rice, Gage & Co., proprietors of the Grand Pacific Hotel at Chicago, have failed, their indebtedness amounting to $2,000,000.

The political excitement in New Orleans continues, and the democrats threaten to seat their representatives who were counted out by the returning board. There is fear of trouble on the fourth of January. Gen. Sheridan's appointment to succeed Gen. Emory is regarded as a menace. Public sentiment inclines to regard the Warmoth homicide as justifiable upon the grounds of self-defence.

Hon. Gerritt Smith died in New York on Monday.

A singular case is reported by a member of the medical fraternity of Keene—that of a young married lady, only sixteen years old, who gave birth to a twelve pound child three weeks ago, and on Friday last presented her husband with another full grown and healthy baby. Mother and children are doing well, but the father is in a fever of anxiety concerning what the future has in store for him.

A Valuable Medical Treatise.

The edition for 1875 of the sterling Medical Annual, known as Hostetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost, of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States and British America, and indeed in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. This Almanac has been issued regularly at the commencement of every year for about one-fifth of a century. It combines, with the soundest practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the calendar, astronomical calculations, chronological items, &c., are prepared with great care, and will be found entirely accurate. The issue of Hostetter's Almanac for 1875 will probably be the largest edition of a medical work ever published in any country. The proprietors, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp, will forward a copy by mail to any person who cannot procure one in his neighborhood.

Mechanical Tinkering

Cannot arrest the decomposition of the teeth. Nothing will do this but that pure disinfectant and preservative which, under the name of SOZODONT, has become a staple of the toilet throughout the world.

"I am the Last of Six!"

One rainy forenoon something less than a year ago, a pale cadaverous youth walked into the store C. N. CRITTENTON, No. 7 Sixth Avenue, and in weak, husky tones, interrupted frequently by a dry, hacking cough, stated that he wanted a couple of bottles of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. "I am the last of six," he said, "the others all died of consumption, and I am going fast. I will try this new remedy, but I have no hope." He did try it, and to some purpose. He took, in all, twelve bottles, and is to-day in perfect health—lungs sound, cough gone, not a sign of pulmonary disease remaining.

The Directors of the Masonic Relief Association of Norfolk, Va., assure the public in the most positive manner that their Second and Last Grand Gift Concert will take place upon the 29th inst., (as advertised elsewhere,) or the money will be refunded to purchasers of tickets. Your days are few for the securing of prizes. There will certainly be no postponement. Take due notice thereof, and govern yourselves accordingly.

Hair Restorers, &c., &c.—All sulphur and lead compounds have nearly disappeared; their poisonous mixtures having been found both ruinous to the public health and death to the human hair. Messrs Perry Davis & Son, Proprietors of the Celebrated Pain Killer, have lately introduced the Bearine which is rapidly taking the place of all other hair preparations, being a health-giving dressing perfectly delightful to use, prepared from the pure grease of the Canada Bear. 12

JOSEPH H. FOSTER.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE,"

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to deserve the title, to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series,

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its pre-eminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in their subjects.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an Illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a thousand Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PAID, with one year's subscription, for $29; the same, charges NOT paid, $16. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $25; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20.

The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

SCRIBNER & CO.,

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their sympathies; it does not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is no be-falling off, but an increase of its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of St. NICHOLAS, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit:

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be fuel of in crest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridelag will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Natural Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages, Poems, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed whenever condensed, but in full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the price of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, $5 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the rarest productions of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. It is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native talent. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while giving due prominence to the pictures of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to the productions of foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend"

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series so made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates. Cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.
CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.
POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.
During the year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its bitterest foes, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its preeminence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most watchful, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure whatever money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over One Million and a Half of Dollars. For the results of this outlay it asks from each single subscriber to the WEEKLY, Two Dollars; from each subscriber in a club of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.
The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE'S political course, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, in a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old and war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to hold mere party ties as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old landmarks, and will defend the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the Nation's faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the best partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not for its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country have brought new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how glorious; and that the men to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendation of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.
THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes that the mere organ of politicians can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of what ever party solely on its individual merits; commends the President when it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him when it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-avowed principles, and values any party only as a means of promoting them; triumph; waits on no caucus for its opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance, and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of the rulers. It endeavors to consume the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, and quarrels with other papers, answer reply to or even notice their perpetual attacks—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, or in matter its readers want.
From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE solicits a continuance of the popular favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the hard times of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each week's (or proportionately for 30 weeks, or a year) the old charge for separate addresses to club subscribers, 10 cents,) and it asks those who think well of it to reciprocate by kindly efforts to increase its circulation.
THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. Besides a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full page of the best editorials from the Daily, it contains in every number a great amount of agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is prepared expressly for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States; while among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department are numbered such men as Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard University, the Hon. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Josiah Hooper, L. B. Arnold and others. As its contributors are in every part of the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the original articles every week are illustrated with wood-cuts. The market quotations of farm produce, cattle, provisions, breadstuffs, dry goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The utmost care is bestowed upon the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the print is always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

OLD TIMES ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

[MARK TWAIN.]

When I was a boy, there was but one permanent ambition among my comrades in our village on the west bank of the Mississippi River. That was, to be a steamboatman. We had transient ambitions of other sorts, but they were only transient. When a circus came and went, it left us all burning to become clowns; the first negro minstrel show that came to our section left us all suffering to try that kind of life; now and then we had a hope that if we lived and were good, God would permit us to be pirates. These ambitions faded out, each in its turn; but the ambition to be a steamboatman always remained.

Once a day a cheap, gaudy packet arrived upward from St. Louis, and another downward from Keokuk. Before these events had transpired, the day was glorious with expectancy; after they had transpired, the day was a dead and empty thing. Not only the boys, but the whole village felt this. After all these years I can picture that old time to myself now, just as it was then; the white town drowsing in the sunshine of a Summer's morning; the streets empty, or pretty nearly so; one or two clerks sitting in front of the Water street stores, with their splint-bottomed chairs tilted back against the wall, chin on breasts, hats slouched over their faces, asleep, with shingle-shavings enough around to show what broke them down; a sow and a litter of pigs loafing along the sidewalk, doing a good business in water-melon rinds and seeds; two or three lonely little freight piles scattered about the "levee," a pile of "skids" on the slope of the stone-paved wharf, and the fragrant town drunkard asleep in the shadow of them; two or three wood flats at the head of the wharf, but nobody to listen to the peaceful lapping of the wavelets against them; the great Mississippi, the magnificent Mississippi, rolling its mile-wide tide along, shining in the sun; the dense forest away on the other side; the "Point" above the town and the "Point" below, bounding the river-glimpse and turning it into a sort of sea, and withal a very still and brilliant and lonely one. Presently a film of dark smoke appears above one of those remote "Points;" instantly a negro drayman, famous for his quick eye and prodigious voice, lifts up the cry, "S-t-e-a-m-boat a-comin'!" and the scene changes! The town drunkard stirs, the clerks wake up, a furious clatter of drays follows, every house and store pours out a human contribution, and all in a twinkling the dead town is alive and moving. Drays, carts, men, boys, all go hurrying from many quarters to a common center—the wharf. Assembled there, the people fasten their eyes upon the coming boat as upon a wonder they are seeing for the first time. And the boat is rather a handsome sight, too. She is long and sharp and trim and pretty; she has two tall, fancy-topped chimneys, with a gilded device of some kind swung between them; a fanciful pilot house, all glass and "gingerbread," perched upon the "texas" deck behind them; the paddle-boxes are gorgeous with a picture, or with gilded rays above the boat's name; the boiler deck, the hurricane deck, and the texas deck are fenced and ornamented with clean white railings; there is a flag gallantly flying from the jack-staff; the furnace doors are open, and the fires glaring bravely; the upper decks are black with passengers; the Captain stands by the big bell, calm, imposing, the envy of all, great volumes of the blackest smoke are rolling and trembling out of the chimneys—a husband-ed grandeur created with a bit of pitch pine, just before arriving at a town; one crew are grouped on the forecastle; the broad stage is run far out over the port bow, and an envied deck-hand stands pituresquely on the end of it, with a coil of rope in his hand; the pent steam is screaming through the gauge cocks; the Captain lifts his hand, a bell rings; the wheel stops; then they turn back, churning the water to foam; and the steamer is at rest. Then such a scramble as there is to get aboard and to get ashore, and to take freight and to discharge freight, all at one and the same time; and such a yelling and cursing as the mates facilitate it all with! Ten minutes later the steamer is under way again, with no flag on the jack-staff, and no black smoke issuing from the chimneys. After ten minutes the town is dead again, and the town drunkard sleeps by the skids once more.

My father was a Justice of the Peace, and I supposed he possessed the power of life and death over all men and could hang anybody that offended him. This was distinction enough for me, as a general thing; but the desire to be a steamboatman kept intruding, nevertheless. I first wanted to be a cabin-boy, so that I could come out with a white apron on and shake the table-cloth over the side, where all my old comrades could see me; later I thought I would rather be the deck-hand who stood on the end of the stage-plank with the coil of rope in his hand, because he was particularly conspicuous. But these were only day-dreams—they were too heavenly to be contemplated as real possibilities. By and by one of our boys went away. He was not heard of for a long time. At last he turned up as apprentice engineer or "striker" on a steamboat. This thing shook the bottom out of all my Sunday-school teachings. That boy had been notoriously worldly, and I just the reverse; yet he was exalted to this eminence, and I left in obscurity and misery. There was nothing generous about this fellow in his greatness. He used always to manage to have a rusty bolt to scrub while his boat tarried at our town, and he would sit on the inside guard and scrub it, where we could all see him and envy him and loathe him.

And whenever his boat was laid up he would come home and swell around the town in his blackest and greasiest clothes, so that nobody could help remembering that he was a steamboatman; and he used all sorts of steamboat technicalities in his talk, as if he were so used to them that he forgot that common people could not understand them. He would speak of the "labboard" side of a horse in an easy, natural way that would make one wish he were dead. And he was always talking about "St. Looey" like an old citizen; he would refer casually to occasions when he "was coming down Fourth street" or when he was "passing by the Planters' House," or when there was a fire and he took a turn on the brakes of "the old Big Missouri;" and then he would go on and lie about how many towns the size of ours were burned down there that day. Two or three of the boys had long been persons of consideration among us because they had been to St. Louis once and had a vague general knowledge of its wonders; but the day of their glory was over now. They lapsed into a humble silence, and learned to disappear when the ruthless "cub" engineer approached. This fellow had money, too, and hair-oil. Also an ignorant silver watch and a showy brass watch-chain. He wore a leather belt and used no suspenders. If ever a youth was cordially admired and hated by his comrades, this one was. No girl could withstand his charms. He "cut out" every boy in the village.

When his boat blew up at last, it diffused a tranquil contentment among us such as we had not known for months. But when he came home the next week, alive, renowned, and appeared in church all battered up and bandaged, a shining hero, stared at and wondered over by everybody, it seemed to us that the partiality of Providence for an undeserving reptile had reached a point where it was open to criticism.

This creature's career could produce but one result and it speedily followed. Boy after boy managed to get on the river. The minister's son became an engineer. The doctor's and the postmaster's sons became "mud clerks;" the wholesale liquor dealer's son became a bar-keeper on a boat; four sons of the chief merchant and two sons of the county judge became pilots. Pilot was the grandest position of all. The pilot even in those days of trivial wages, had a princely salary—from a hundred and fifty to two hundred and fifty dollars a month, and no board to pay. Two months of his wages would pay a preacher's salary for a year. Now some of us were left inconsolable. We could not get on the river—at least our parents would not let us.

So by and by I ran away. I said I never would come home again till I was a pilot and could come in glory. But somehow I could not manage it. I went meekly aboard a few of the boats that lay packed together like sardines at the long St Louis wharf, and very humbly inquired for the pilots, but got only cold shoulder and short words from mates and clerks. I had to make the best of this sort of treatment for the time being, but I had comfortable day-dreams of a future when I should be a great and honored pilot, with plenty of money, and could kill some of these mates and clerks and pay for them.

Months afterward the hope within me struggled to a reluctant death, and I found myself without an ambition. But I was ashamed to go home. I was in Cincinnati, and I set to work to map out a new career. I had been reading about a recent exploration of the river Amazon by an expedition sent out by our Government. It was said that the expedition, owing to difficulties, had not thoroughly explored a part of the country lying about the head waters, some four thousand miles from the mouth of the river. It was only about fifteen hundred miles from Cincinnati to New Orleans, where I could doubtless get a ship. I had thirty dollars left; I would go and complete the exploration of the Amazon. This was all the thought I gave to the subject. I never was great in matters of detail. I packed my valise, and took passage on an ancient tub called the Paul Jones, for New Orleans. For the sum of sixteen dollars I had the scarred and tarnished splendors of "her" main saloon principally to myself, for she was not a creature to attract the eye of wiser travellers.

When we presently got under way and went poking down the broad Ohio, I became a new being, and the subject of my own admiration. I was a traveller. A word never had tasted so good in my mouth before. I had an exultant sense of being bound for mysterious lands and distant climes which I never have felt in so uplifting a degree since. I was in such a glorified condition that all ignoble feelings departed out of me, and I was able to look down and pity the untravelled with a compassion that had hardly a trace of contempt in it. Still, when we stopped at villages and woodyards, I could not help lolling carelessly upon the railings of the boiler deck to enjoy the envy of the country boys on the bank. If they did not seem to discover me, I presently sneezed to attract their attention, or moved to a position where they could not help seeing me. And as soon as I knew they saw me, I gaped and stretched, and gave other signs of being mightily bored with travelling.

I kept my hat off all the time, and stayed where the wind and the sun could strike me, because I wanted to get the bronze and weather-beaten look of an old traveller. Before second day was half gone, I experienced a joy which filled me with purest gratitude; for I saw that the skin had begun to blister and peel off my face and neck. I wished that the boys and girls at home could see me now.

We reached Louisville in time—at least the neighborhood of it. We stuck hard and fast on the rocks in the middle of the river and lay there four days. I was now beginning to feel a strong sense of being a part of the boat's family, a sort of infant son to the captain and younger brother to the officers. There is no estimating the pride I took in this grandeur, or the affection that began to swell and grow in me for those people. I could not know how the lordly steam boatman scorns that sort of presumption in a mere landsman. I particularly longed to acquire the least trifle of notice from the big stormy mate, and I was on the alert for an opportunity to do him a service to that end. It came at last. The riotous pow-wow of setting a spar was going on down on the forecastle, and I went down there and stood around in the way—or mostly skipping out of it—till the mate suddenly roared a general order for somebody to bring to him a capstan bar. I sprang to his side and said: "Tell me where it is—I'll fetch it!"

If a rag-picker had offered to do a diplomatic service for the Emperor of Russia, the monarch could not have been more astounded than the mate was. He even stopped swearing. He stood and stared down at me. It took him ten seconds to scrape his disjointed remains together. Then he said impressively: "Well, if this don't beat hell!" and turned to his work with the air of a man who had been confronted with a problem too abstruse for solution.

I crept away, and courted solitude for the rest of the day. I did not go to dinner; I stayed away from supper until everybody had finished. I did not feel so much like a member of the boat's family now as before. However, my spirits returned, in installments, as we pursued our way down the river. I was sorry I hated the mate so, because it was not in (young) human nature not to admire him. He was huge and muscular, and his face was bearded and whiskered all over; he had a red woman and a blue woman tattooed on his right arm—one on each side of a blue anchor with a red rope to it; and in the matter of profanity he was perfect. When he was getting out cargo at a landing, I was always where I could see and hear. He felt all the sublimity of his great position, and made the world feel it too. When he gave even the simplest order, he discharged it like a blast of lightning, and sent a long, reverberating peal of profanity thundering after it. I could not help contrasting the way in which the average landsman would give an order with the mate's way of doing it.

If the landsman should wish the gangplank moved a foot further forward, he would probably say, "James or William, one of you push that plank forward, please." But put the mate in his place, and he would roar out, "Here, now, start that gang-plank for'ard! Lively, now! What 're you about? Snatch it! Snatch it! There! there! Aft again! aft again! Don't you hear me? Dash it to dash! are you going to sleep over it? 'Vast heaving! 'Vast heaving I tell you! Going to heave it clear astern? WHERE 're you going with that barrel? For'ard with it 'fore I make you swallow it, you dash-dash-dashed split between a tired mud-turtle and a crippled hearse horse!"

I wished I could talk like that.

When the soreness of my adventure with the mate had somewhat worn off, I began timidly to make up to the humblest official connected with the boat, the night watchman. He snubbed my advances at first, but I presently ventured to offer him a new chalk pipe, and that softened him. So he allowed me to sit with him by the big bell on the hurricane-deck, and in a time he melted into conversation. He could not well have helped it, I hung with such homage on his words, and so plainly showed that I felt honored by his notice. He told me the name of dim capes and shadowy islands as we glided by them in the solemnity of the night, under the twinkling stars, and by and by got to talking about himself. He seemed over-sentimental for a man whose salary was $6 a week—or rather he might have seemed so to an older person than I. But I drank in his words hungrily, and with a faith that might have moved mountains if it had been applied judiciously. What was it to me that he was soiled and seedy, and fragrant with gin? What was it to me that his grammar was bad, his construction worse, and his profanity so void of weakness, rather than strength in his conversation? He was a wronged man, a man who had seen trouble, and that was enough for me. As he mellowed into his plaintive history, his tears dripped upon the lantern in his lap, and I cried, too, from sympathy. He said he was the son of an English nobleman—either an Earl or an Alderman, he could not remember which, but believed he he was both; his father, the nobleman, loved him, but his mother hated him from the cradle; and so while he was still a boy he was sent to "one of them old ancient colleges"—he couldn't remember which; and by and by his father died, and his mother seized the property, and "shook" him, as he phrased it. After his mother shook him members of the nobility with whom he was acquainted used their influence to get him the position of "lob-lolly boy in a ship;" and from that point my watchman threw off all trammels of date and locality, and branched out into a narrative that b istled all along with incredible adventures, a narrative that was so reeking with bloodshed and so crammed with hair-breadth escapes and the most enraging and unconscious personal villainies, that I sat, speechless, enjoying, shuddering, wondering, worshipping.

It was a sore blight to find out afterward that he was a low, vulgar, ignorant, sentimental, half-witted humbug, an untraveled native of the wilds of Illinois, who had absorbed wildcat literature and appropriated its marvels, until in time he had woven odds and ends of the mess into this yarn, and then gone on telling it to fledglings like me, until he had come to believe it himself.

Daily Chronicle.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1874.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 28.

The brilliant gathering of the season so far was the New England Sociable. Mr. Hinkley, the Unitarian minister here, with Ben. Perley Poore did up the speaking, Mr. Irwin furnished the poem, Miss Jennie Foster, a cousin of your judge of that name, presided at the piano, Mrs. Converse, a New Hampshire lady, gave them some fine singing, and Donck's band the music for a brilliant array of dancers.

ADDITIONAL TAXATION.

Garfield on Monday introduced a bill to appropriate $30,000, to pay for the high time over the King of the Sandwich Islands, including the champagne furnished to his servants as steady drinks. Mr. Loughredge of Iowa introduced a bill to restore the income tax, which goes to Dawes' committee, who also have a bill to revive the tax on tea and coffee, putting three cents a pound tax on coffee and fifteen cents a pound on tea. The income tax is the most just tax ever laid, and one that imposes no burden whatever upon business or labor, while the tax upon tea and coffee comes mostly from the laborer. The giving of a ration of coffee to the soldiers of Europe about the time our tax was taken off, increased the demand of coffee for consumption beyond its increased production, and prevented any decline in its price here. Tea, coffee and incomes would yield about $29,000,000 of revenue. It would be pretty safe to say that any party that should tax tea and coffee without trying incomes might as well put its house in order to vacate.

FINANCIAL.

The Senate caucus agreed upon a financial bill which has been passed. It is a strange compound, and I do not care to analyze it to show that it dares not materially contradict my prediction that not much was likely to be done this session besides passing the appropriation bills. It would seem to provide a cheap way of getting silver to melt down and export, and after four years to convert greenbacks into five per cent. gold bonds. Not having much faith that free banking is the way to get to specie payments at this time, I don't take much stock in the measure just passed. There is but one way to specie payments, and that is to contract the currency down to about four hundred millions of paper. It is not at all probable there will be any addition to the banking capital, as the average earnings of banks upon their capital for the last year was but seven per cent. Their surplus fund, which is more than twenty-five per cent. as much as their capital, earned enough to make their dividends between nine and ten per cent. The fact that four millions of bank circulation were surrendered and their bonds withdrawn more than was called for the last year makes it certain that but few new banks will be started, and these will not be either West or South.

THE HOLIDAYS.

The adjournment of Congress, has taken most of the members to their homes, and most of the strangers and interested parties in legislation with them. The Departments were closed for Christmas and furnished a crowd to the almost deserted streets. The holidays are almost universally observed here and furnish an immense retail trade, for the usual presents. A strange feature of its observance to a northern man is the resemblance to our Fourth of July among the boys, who are well stocked with fire crackers, trumpets, pistols and ammunition, while the larger ones use muskets and ring the bells.

RETURNING REPUBLICANS.

Developing Presidential candidates, is a kind of science, well understood here, as well as how to kill them off. Office holding support is more dangerous, as a rule than its opposition. The third term talk of the National Republican has been very damaging to the administration; because it made all the embryo candidates for the succession jealous, and semi-hostile. It now declares the misfortune of the party to be want of leaders in Congress. (Is that aimed at Morton and Blaine?) Vice President Wilson is anxious for party harmony, to secure success. He wants to bring back the departed liberals to the fold again. The Chicago Tribune is back. The New York Tribune is reported as desirous to get back, and was ready to support Dix, provided the State convention would denounce a third term; and because it did not, lent its batteries to Tilden. The other members of the independent press, as they style themselves, don't like the bill of fare presented by the democracy, and are ready now, and even anxious to prevent a democratic success at the Presidential election. It was their management at Cincinnati, which made Greeley the democratic candidate and ensured republican success in 1872. Bowles of the Springfield Republican, Halstead of the Cincinnati Commercial, White of the Chicago Tribune, Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Grosvenor of the St. Louis Democrat, were free traders, and wanted Trumbull or Charles Francis Adams, but were determined to defeat Judge Davis, who was a tariff man. They were assisted by Carl Shurz, with the German element, and the free traders, and succeeded; but contrary to all their calculations, Greeley's bailing of Jeff Davis with his amnesty made him a favorite with southern members and the friends of Davis joined them to make Greeley the nominee. This defeated the free traders, the quadrilateral independent press and the democracy with them. They have now become disgusted and powerless with the democratic party and now want to name and support the next republican nominee. They say kind things of Wilson. Halstead of the Commercial a long time since published a full broadside of his paper in the interest of Washburne as a candidate. The Springfield Republican had a pleasant article in the same direction soon after but it somehow didn't take to their satisfaction. Watterson and Bowles have recently been in Washington, looking over the situation, consulting on Presidential candidates and writing racy letters to their papers. The Journal man thinks the next House of Representatives very deficient in brains on the democratic side; and predicts failure to meet the requirements of the people. He also suggests Bristow as a growing man and a very passable candidate for the Presidency. Bowles starts out with Wilson as strong candidate for the party and especially for Massachusetts, but follows it with suggestions in regard to Bristow which would make him a much stronger one. The New York Sun has been throwing out feelers in the same direction. All these movements are indicative that the independent press mean to opppose the democratic candidate for the Presidency and support the republican candidate, if they can only discover who is to occupy that position, and get out letters patent in advance claiming him as their nominee. Secretary Bristow has so far shown that he has a level head upon his broad shoulders and can stand all this talk, and keep the Presidential bee from buzzing in it, if anybody can. He stands on the perilous edge of difficulties, with possible and positive Presidential candidates growing jealous of him, because his executive abilities have so brought him to the public attention, that the independent press select him as most likely to win, after the old stagers have been worked too much to run well. Capture of a Swindler.

A man giving his name as O. Bailey, claiming to be largely engaged in crushing quartz in Placerville, Cal., and to have arrived in New York city on the 18th instant, reached Manchester on the 22d, and immediately contracted with S. C. Forsaith & Co. for a lot of machinery amounting to $1690, to be shipped to California. In payment he gave a draft on Duncan, Sherman & Co., of New York city, bankers, who deny all knowledge of Bailey, and say that he has no credit at their banking house. At his hotel, just before leaving for Vermont, he represented to Mr. Forsaith that he had dropped his pocket-book containing his money, and requested that Forsaith would telegraph to Duncan, Sherman & Co., to send him some money. On these representations he obtained a loan of $30, giving his check on the New York bankers as before. He left on Thursday, and on Saturday City Marshal Simons started in pursuit of him, and on Sunday, at one o'clock, arrested him in Montpelier. It has since been ascertained that he swindled Swain, Lurbine & Co. of Lowell in the same way, their bill for machinery being $2400. Before the arrival of Marshal Simons in Montpelier he had purchased machinery of the Lane Manufacturing Company amounting to $720, paying in forged drafts on Duncan, Sherman & Co., as before. He also obtained loans of money in Lowell, the same as in Manchester, giving his check in payment. He is a man about 29 years old, of fine address, and carries with him a large amount of tracts and other religious publications. In Montpelier he took a prominent part in the exercises of one of the religious societies. It is believed that he has not given his right name, though he has made a written confession of his swindling operations in New England.

—An a mind-reading seance in Worcester a young lady undertook to practice. She failed several times, but at length, having selected her lover as a subject, discovered that he was "going to kiss" her. And she was right.

—A Springfield man recently took a bath in the dark. He managed well enough, only he got hold of a piece of stove blacking instead of soap, with a marked results.

Burning of the Cospatrick.

The ill-fated ship Cospatrick sailed from London September 14, in command of Captain Elmslie, on a voyage to Auckland, New Zealand, and was spoken October 28, in lat. 11 S., lon. 34 W., which shows she must have been in a more southern latitude when destroyed by fire than that stated in the despatch. The Cospatrick was an English sailing ship of 1200 tons register, built of teak wood at Maulmain (India) in 1856, and was owned in London. But three of the 500 passengers are known to be saved, the second mate and two seamen. These were picked up by the British ship Sceptre, after having been ten days in an open boat, subsisting part of the time upon the flesh and blood of the others who died in the boat.

Dispatches from Maderia give the following additional particulars: The fire broke out at midnight, November 19th, and within half an hour enveloped the vessel nearly the entire length. There was a scene of the wildest confusion. But two boats succeeded in getting away. Each of them contained thirty persons. These remained alongside the ship until Nov. 19, when her hull was completely burned out and she sunk. The two boats then started for land. They kept together for two days when a gale arose, and they became separated. One of them has not since been heard of.

—The intuition of the Treasury girls serves them well in the counterfeit business, and Gen. Spinner, who has had twelve years' experience in the work, says they are worth ten times as much as the men for such business. A man always has a reason for a counterfeit," says the General; "forty, may-be, but he is wrong half the time. A woman never has a reason. She says 'tis counterfeit because it is counterfeit, and she's always right—though she couldn't tell how she found out if she were to be hung for it.

—A soldier of a cavalry regiment was brought up for stealing his comrade's liquor ration. He was an Irishman, and his defence was unique: "I'd be sorry indade, surr, to be called a thief! I put the liquor in the same bottle, and mine was at the bottom; and sure, I was obliged to drink his to get out me own!"

—Nature-printed apples have been selling for large prices in New York. Before the apples are ripe, various names, cut out of paper, are pasted on them, and by the time they are ready for plucking, the sun will have printed the name in distinct letters.

"I am the Last of Six!"

One rainy forenoon something less than a year ago, a pale cadaverous youth walked into the store C. N. CHITTENTON, No. 7 Sixth Avenue, and in weak, husky tones, interrupted frequently by a dry, hacking cough, stated that he wanted a couple of bottles of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR. "I am the last of six," he said, "the others all died of consumption, and I am going fast. I will try this new remedy, but I have no hope." He did try it, and to some purpose. He took, in all, twelve bottles, and is to-day in perfect health—lungs sound, cough gone, not a sign of pulmonary disease remaining.

JOSEPH H. FOSTER.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE."

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to deserve and to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and chosen literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN OAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1873.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its preeminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America. HOME AND SOCIETY, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an Illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the early volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PREPAID, with one year's subscription, for $29; the same, charges NOT paid, $26. The eight vols., in extra library style, marble sides and marble edges, and a subscription, for $35; or if sent, charges NOT paid, $20. The Postage on all New Subscriptions will be Prepaid by us. The Subscription Price of Scribner's Monthly is $4 a year. Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, $7.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent been co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual outcome of their taste and of their honor and courage. I do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among other attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit.

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACKANDPUPIT, THE LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of in crest, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Practical Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors, will give young people of all ages, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Boys' and Girls' Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $3.00 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4 00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of news independent in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, controlling for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 120,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription, postage prepaid, 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

For Coughs,

Croup,

Diphtheria,

Asthma, etc.,

USE

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature, and a collection of pictures, the finest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

☞PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend".

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the wants of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.

One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union,

SIX DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

(No charge for postage.)

Specimen copies of THE ALDINE, fifty cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser without responsibility to the publishers, except in case where the agent can show a card, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1875.

CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN EVER.

POSTAGE FREE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

During the year 1874 the position of THE TRIBUNE as the "leading American newspaper" has come to be generally recognized. Its literary fame, while assailing it as fiercely as of old on political or other grounds, never now question its preeminence as a newspaper. It is confessedly the foremost in the country. It has won the position, and it means to hold it by the employment of the best ability, by the most unwearied, conscientious attention, and by the most lavish expenditure of money to procure what every money will buy, in its readers' service. Its expenditures in this way during the past year were over the Millionaire Half of Dollars. For the results of this outlay it asks from each single subscriber the WEEKLY, (Two Dollars) from each subscriber in a club of thirty or more, One Dollar; and it pays the postage itself.

The events of 1874 have vindicated THE TRIBUNE'S political course, as well as its newspaper superiority. Maintaining, with all its old fervor, those republican principles of equality and justice with which, under its illustrious founder, it was for thirty years identified, it nevertheless warned the country that the party in power had, in a long course of prosperity, grown reckless and corrupt. The people were slow to believe, and some, for a time, resented the warning. At last it was seen that THE TRIBUNE, as usual, was merely a few years in advance of its time. The people have come up to it. They have not decided to put the old anti-war democracy in power, nor even to abandon the republican organization. They have simply given warning. They have come, with THE TRIBUNE, to hold more party dice as of infinitely less consequence than the attainment of pure government on sound principles. They stand by their old standards, and will defend the constitutional guarantees to the liberty of the citizen, and the sacredness of the Nation's faith with its creditors. But, like THE TRIBUNE, they have lost faith in the hot partisans who insist on strict obedience to the dictates of the caucus, and who value party, not for its principles but chiefly for its offices. They recognize that the new conditions of the country bring with them new needs and new duties; that parties cannot live forever on their past, no matter how popular, and that the men to be trusted with the Government should be men who have shown an understanding of the popular wants, rather than men who have understood how to pack caucuses and manage conventions. It has thus come about that in nearly every instance this year the political recommendations of THE TRIBUNE have received the seal of popular approval.

THE TRIBUNE can never be a neutral in politics; but it maintains its independence of any partisan dictation. It believes that the newest organ of politicians can never be a good newspaper or deserve the popular trust. It aims to judge every act of whatever party solely on its individual merits; commends the President where it thinks him right as heartily as it condemns him where it thinks him wrong; holds fast to its long-avowed principles, and values any party only as a means for obtaining their triumph; waits on no caucus for its opinions; suffers no partisan need to color its news or warp its utterance; and maintains, in the interest of its readers, the liberty of candid and impartial criticism of their rulers. It endeavors to combine the utmost frankness and independence with judicial fairness; keeps its columns free from all low abuse and personal wrangling, has no quarrels with other papers, and never replies to or even notices their personal attacks—reserving all the space usually wasted in this way, for matter its readers want.

From those who believe such a journal a desirable visitor in their families, THE TRIBUNE still has a continuance of the popular favor it has so conspicuously enjoyed in the past, and never more conspicuously than during the vicissitudes of the year 1874. It has reduced its rates thirty cents on each weekly (to prepay its postage, 30 cents, and waiving its old charge for sending addresses to club subscribers, 10 cents) and it asks those who think it worth to receive it, to kindly efforts to increase its circulation.

THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE has been for the space of a generation the farmer's favorite paper. It contains a complete condensation of the news of the week, a selection of literary and miscellaneous reading, and a full page of the best editorials from the Daily. It contains every number a great deal of original agricultural matter than is furnished by any distinctively agricultural paper. This is prepared expressly for its columns by the best agricultural writers and practical farmers in the United States; while among the distinguished regular contributors to the Agricultural Department are numbered such men as Prof. Asa Gray of Harvard University, the Hon. George Geddes, Onondaga County, N. Y., Prof. C. V. Riley, St. Louis, Josiah Hooper, L. D. Arnold and others. As a contributor from every part of the country, it will be found equally valuable in New England, in the South, on the Pacific slope, or in the Mississippi Valley. Great attention is paid to all subjects connected with the Farm, the Garden, and the Household, and some of the original articles every week are illustrated with wood-cuts. The market quotations of farm produce, cattle, provisions, breadstuffs, dry-goods, and all kinds of merchandise, are exceedingly full and scrupulously accurate. The utmost care is bestowed upon the typographical arrangement of the paper, and the print is always clear and legible, and generally larger than that of any other New York paper.

Historical Discourses by Rev. James De Normandie.

NO. IX.

HISTORY OF THE SOUTH PARISH.

The long ministry of Moodey ended in 1697, and after several attempts to settle a clergyman, on the 3d of May, 1699, Nathaniel Rogers was ordained the 3d minister of Portsmouth. He was born at Ipswich, Feb. 25, 1669-70, and graduated at Harvard in 1687. There are few names among the clergymen of Massachusetts more eminent than that of Rogers, and the same family which gave the minister at Portsmouth furnished to Ipswich pastors of the same name for a period of over a century. John Rogers, who was chosen to succeed Mr. Oakes as president of Harvard, and was installed in 1683, is described as a man of such sweet disposition that "the title of deliciæ humani generis might have been given him, and his real piety, set off with the accomplishments of a gentleman, was like a gem set in gold."

I had once written "John Rogers, the Puritan martyr of the Reformation, burnt at Smithfield in 1555"; but a more careful investigation seems to give no authority to such a statement, which has been widely made. Of this Rogers, president of Harvard College, our clergyman was the youngest son. Rev. Nathaniel Rogers was a man of real elegance in his person and deportment, of a most agreeable manner of preaching, and of eminent piety. He was a strict discipline of the Geneva school, a term used to designate the hearty supporters of Calvinism whose centre of influence and learning was in the Swiss metropolis.

The disturbing matters which filled the pastorate of Moodey seem to have produced little irritation during the ministry of Rogers; and, as is often the case, those on either side, who could find no harmony in the lifetime of a person foremost in creating, sustaining or bearing the reproaches of the difficulties and animosities, after his death, are glad to be at peace for a while. Rev. Dr. Stiles says of Rogers, "He was a most excellent minister, and his ministry, as well as that holy man of God, his predecessor, was eminently owned and blessed by the Great Head of the Church." His work was quiet, faithful and successful; but although repeatedly urged to publish some of his sermons, he always refused, and we have nothing by which to judge of the character of his writings; and the influence of his ministry, which in all respects appears the best, was unhappily greatly lessened by a serious disturbance in regard to building a new church, which for a long time embittered the whole neighborhood, and even extended throughout the province.

Mr. Rogers married Mrs. Sarah Purkiss, a niece of Rev. Ebenezer Pemberton of Boston, and her mother came to make her home with Rev. Mr. Rogers in Portsmouth. They resided in the parsonage, into which the first chapel, then standing near where the present Universalist Church is, had been converted. In October, 1704, this parsonage was burned, an infant child of Mr. Rogers and a negro servant perished in the flames, and his wife's mother was so severely burned that she lived but a short time. After being the minister of Portsmouth for fifteen years, preaching in the Old South, Mr. Rogers was directed by a vote of the church members to officiate in the new meeting house which had just been completed on the northeastern corner of the glebe land, the site of the present North Church. Here he remained preaching with acceptance and success for nine years, until his death on the 3d of October, 1723, making a total pastorate of twenty-four years and five months. He was buried at the Point of Graves, but the slate which was let into his monument, and on which his epitaph was written, has long since disappeared. The inscription was in Latin, with a Hebrew motto at its close, and was of marked classical purity and taste; and fortunately, before its destruction, was copied by one of his successors, Dr. Stiles, and so has come down to us. Without being fulsome, it briefly and beautifully portrays a faithful and distinguished pastor, well named in the church records "the good Mr. Rogers:"

Hic sepelitur reverendus Nathanael Rogers, A. M.
Jesu Christi minister fidelis:
prosapia studiis evangeliis devotus ortundus:
ingenio, eruditione, integritate, moribusque suavissimis
valde ornatus:
benevolentiæ, fidei, pietatis,
exemplar illustre:

concionator praeclarus
ecclesiæ pastor vigilantissimus:

In Jesu Sinum effavit animam

M. DCC XX III.

It is somewhat remarkable that, with a clergyman so strictly of the Genevan school as was Mr. Rogers, his church should under his pastorate adopt what was termed the half records, under date of April 21, 1707, we find the following:

"At a church meeting legally convened, it was voted that persons having a competent knowledge and making a serious profession of ye Christian religion, and being of a conversation void of scandal, upon ye owning of ye covenant and subjecting themselves to ye govern't of X in this church, shall be admitted to baptism and have ye like privilege for the children." It would seem that to be well informed of Christian truth, and to seriously profess and obey its requirements, to be of a walk and conversation free from all reproach, to confess the creed and to be entirely subject to the Head of the Church, would be sufficient to admit one to the questionable salvation by the form of baptism; but such was the severity of the Geneva school, that all this was only half way. A man might be of an upright walk beyond question, a glory and example of goodness to all the world, and yet, being without the formal test of election, redemption and faith, all his goodness was unavailing, and even might make against him.

Nevertheless, that half-way covenant was for a time quite popular in New England, and was in use in the New Parish in Portsmouth until it was discontinued by the Puritans. As might be supposed, among the strict followers of the Geneva school it could work only mischief and deadness of the spiritual life, for it is a tacit admission of the failure of that system through its excessive rigidity, and whatever religious tenets one holds to, he must hold to wholly and not partially, to render them effectual. It might be likened in some degree to the old biblical distinction of the proselytes of the gate in contrast with the proselytes of righteousness—the former being, in the eyes of strict Jews, only half converts, not required to observe the whole law, but only to abstain from certain heathen practices.

We come now to consider the gathering and history of a new parish. This matter has never had the careful investigation, or been set forth in the simple historical accuracy it deserves. I find that it is quite as simple, and far more readily understood, than most events in the past with which the historian has to deal. There were, as you will remember, some objections at the time to building the Old South Church beyond the fork of the roads going to Newcastle and the cemetery, and the matter was settled only by the appointment of a committee by the General Court, which finally located it there. All the time there had been a small party wanting it farther up Pleasant street. Since the building of that first Old South, more than fifty years had passed away; from the building of the first chapel, near the Universalist church now nearly seventy-five. The population, which in 1667 I am inclined to think was not far from 500, had increased to at least 1200 in 1693; and yet they were all included in one parish, and their only place of worship was the Old South Church, beyond the mill bridge. From some old records, I find that of this number, by the same calculation, Great Island had about two hundred, when a separate parish was established there in 1693. There must still have been in the old parish, wide as its limits yet were, allowing for the same rate of increase—although there is every reason to suppose it was much more rapid—at least twelve hundred inhabitants, whose only house for worship was the Old South, and all the settlement had been growing away from the church, and toward the Bank, as this part of the town where we now are was generally called.

The old church was not only in constant need of repairs, but was entirely too small to accommodate the large and rapidly growing parish. We find in the town records the following: "At a General Town Meeting held at Portsmouth, this 24th day of September, 1711, voted, that the new meeting house be built in the town. Voted that the new meeting house be built on the corner of the minister's field, on ye place formerly appointed by ye committee, and that it be ye stated meeting house of ye town. Voters for ye meeting-house are sixty-four, against it forty-five. A committee was chosen at the same meeting to carry on ye affaire of building ye House, and the selectmen were empowered to raise money by way of a town rate for the said house. This "corner of the Minister's field," referred to in the vote, was the corner of the glebe land we have already described, and the site of the present North Church.

When this vote was taken there was no thought of any division, only of building a new church for the whole parish; but the parishioners at the South End were not willing to have it built so far to the north. It is said they were willing it should be built on the spot where later the house of Mr. Joseph Haven stood, on on a rise of ground near it, but the parishioners at the North End were not willing to go so far south. Instead of compromise, the matter grew only more complicated and excited; and as the new church went up, the dissensions grew wider and fiercer. The people of Greenland, who were anxious to be set apart and have a parish of their own, all came to the aid of the North End, as the tradition was, that in return, as soon as the new church was built, those for whom they voted would vote for their separation.

While, however, a majority of the whole parish—meaning the whole town—was thus in favor of the new church, and the minister, Mr Rogers, was on that side, there is every reason to suppose that the majority was gained out of those who by the increase of population could not be accommodated at the Old South. The Church, meaning thereby the communicants, had at that day the chief authority in ecclesiastical matters, and after the new meeting house was finished, we find under date of Jan. 7, 1744, the church voted that Nathaniel Rogers, minister of this church, should come to the new meeting house erected at the Bank, on the next Sabbath "seven-night, and preach there, as formerly at ye old meeting house, and perform all other offices which appertain to his functions." Unfortunately the record does not give the number for or against.

We do not know how many church members there were at this time, the men only voting; but the number was probably between twenty and thirty, as there were twenty male members at the time of Mr. Rogers's ordination,—yet at the beginning of the present century, the tradition was, as given by Alden, that while a majority attending meeting voted for Mr. Rogers to go to the new meeting house, an actual majority of the church members were in favor of retaining him at the old. Hence it came that the feeling grew only the more violent, because the parishioners at the South End claimed that unfair measures had been taken to gain the vote, and so they determined to remain at the Old South. In this—and it is a fact of great importance, and which has never been set forth—they were advised and sustained by an ecclesiastical council, and the counsel of no less distinguished a clergyman than Dr. Mather of Boston, whose advice and assistance the parishioners at the South End sought and followed. Mr. Rogers became much disgusted with the conduct of the ministers because they took the side of the people of the old church. Dr. Mather, on the other hand, blamed Mr. Rogers, and wondered how so good a man could discover so much ill humor—but all ecclesiastical history shows that very good men can. The result of the council was, as the recent one in New York, and as in general, somewhat unsatisfactory to all sides; and, says one of the early historians, "The societies separated, and did not walk in love till that generation dropped off the stage."

But the ecclesiastical council did not settle matters; it never does; and before long the subject comes before the council held at Portsmouth. At a general town meeting held 9th September, 1713, the redoubtable John Pickering, who was warm in the cause of the South End, was chosen moderator. After passing two votes disorders arose, and the justices dissolved the meeting; but those who remained, with Pickering at their head, put a number of things to vote, which were carried; such as, that the Old South Meeting house shall continue town-meeting house forever, and when too much decayed to be repaired, that a new one shall be erected in its place; that the glebe land (this was the serious cause of the trouble,) formerly given by the town for the use of the ministry, shall wholly remain for the benefit of the minister who shall officiate in said house; that a committee shall wait upon Mr. Rogers to see if it is his pleasure to continue preaching at the old meeting house during his abode in the town; if not, that the said committee shall provide an able minister for the said place of worship, and agree with him for his salary, which agreement so made shall be ratified and fulfilled by the town.

News and Notes.

Judge Hiram R. Roberts still leads in the race for the democratic nomination for Governor. In republican circles it is evident that Hon. Benj. F. Prescott of Epping is to be the principal contestant with Hon. Chas. H. Bell for the nomination, the friends of McCutchins generally preferring a farmer. The nomination of either will be satisfactory to the party and bring out a heavy vote.

The fight for the abolition of capital punishment is to be renewed in the Maine legislature this winter.

At the second election for Mayor of Newburyport, held Tuesday, Hon. B. F. Atkinson, republican, was chosen, receiving 699 votes to 653 for Eliphalet Griffin, democrat. The expenses of the city for 1874 were $146,505; for 1873, 180,081; decrease $13,576. The city debt is $300,000.

Miss Mary Comn of Nantucket was fatally burned a few evenings since by the breaking of a kerosene lamp which she was holding in her hand.

A party of patrolmen who were guarding arism on the part of negroes, took a colored woman and hanged her three times to extort a confession as to a suspected plot. She has recovered from her injuries.

An agreement has been entered into between this government and Canada by which mail matter from one country to the other is to be forwarded and delivered free, upon prepayment of postage at the established domestic rates of the country of origin. It is the desire of the departments of both countries that a similar arrangement be made, as soon as practicable, with respect to the money-order system.

William A. Potter of New York has been appointed and accepted the position of supervising architect of the Treasury department.

Mr. William R. Barker, the champion checker player of America, has sent his challenge to Mr. Wylie, offering to play him a match of fifty games for $200, to take place in Boston on or before the first day of May. Mr. William R. Barker and his brother, C. F. Barker, are to play in the tournament at the Centennial at Philadelphia, in 1876.

General Sheridan does not go to New Orleans in obedience to any direct orders, but in compliance with the personal request of the President, who desires to have some one at that point in whom he has implicit confidence to furnish him with truthful information, and of such rank that in case of an emergency he can act without special orders from Washington. General Sheridan was intending to go to Cuba in a few weeks, and this trip South is only anticipating the time, for after a short stay in New Orleans he will sail for Cuba. His immediate work in Louisiana is to preserve the peace, and he will not remove any officer or take any part in military affairs there, unless absolutely necessary to accomplish that object.

Mr. William A. Hovey, who has for some time occupied a position on the editorial staff of the Commercial Bulletin, will become managing editor of the Transcript, January 9, 1875, filling the place left vacant by the death of Daniel N. Haskell.

The sum of $50,000 in fines was imposed and collected for the violation of the prohibitory law in Maine during the year. There have been 276 convictions in the supreme court, of rumsellers, and 41 commitments to jail,—a larger number than in any similar period previous. This is partially due to the sheriff enforcement act, set in operation two years ago. Crime has decreased the number of convicts in the State prison, being 25 per cent. less than ten years since.

There is something that looks like the millennium for travellers in the report that the Boston and Maine Railroad Company is to dispense with all fruit, nut and novel traffic on their passenger cars, and that nothing but daily papers and prominent weekly and monthly journals are to be offered for sale on their trains.

At Columbus, Ga., Chief of Police Murphy, while attempting to arrest some drunken desperados from Cusetta, Ala., was killed by two men, Milford and Ben Bagley. Milford Bagley, one of the desperados who resisted the police, was mortally wounded, and died on Sunday morning. The friends of the assailants having threatened to break open the jail and rescue the surviving murderer, Ben Bagley, the outraged citizens determined to deal summarily with him, but the sheriff called on the military for assistance, which was furnished, the military remaining on duty all Sunday night, thus preserving the peace. Marshal Murphy was buried on Sunday afternoon, 6000 people attending the funeral.

Two men, accompanied by the son of Professor Peck, went into the residence of the latter, at New York, Sunday, while the family were at church, and the men took away a chest full of silver ware, together with bonds, mortgages, money and jewelry, amounting in value to $40,000. The servant girl who witnessed the men carrying away the chest went to the church and alarmed the Professor and family. The boy was subsequently taken before the police captain, and his father has not preferred any complaint against him. The youth is nineteen years old, and has of late been a companion of gamblers. His accomplices have not yet been arrested.

A London despatch says the remainder of the passengers and crew of the burned ship Cospatrick, four cabin and 424 steerage passengers, had emigrated under government regulations for Australia, and were for the most part agricultural laborers who left in consequence of the recent strikes. Many were married and had their families with them.

It is a noteworthy fact that this fall and winter scarcely any of the banks west of Ohio have asked for accommodations of their New York correspondents. This unusual experience is probably to be accounted for mainly by the fact that the West has grown rich, and therefore has more capital of her own, but partly, also, by the fact that one effect of the panic was to change a great many country bank accounts from New York banks to Western ones.

Further details of the Cospatrick disaster have been received. When the vessel was discovered to be on fire, eighty persons, mostly women, rushed into one of the boats, which was capsized, and all in her were drowned. Soon afterward all the masts fell, killing many of the passengers. An explosion subsequently occurred in the stern of the vessel, completing the destruction. The total number of lives lost by the destruction of the vessel is now estimated

He Finally Went.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Yesterday afternoon an old man appeared before the Detroit and Lansing Railroad ticket window, at the Central Depot, and asked:

"What you charge for a ticket to Lansing?"

"Two-sixty, sir," replied the agent, wetting his thumb and reaching out for the money.

"Two dollar und zixty cents!" exclaimed the stranger, pulling his head out of the window.

"Yes, sir, that is the regular fare."

"Then I sthays here by Detroit forty years!" said the man, getting red in the face. "I haf never seen me sush'n swindle as dat."

"Two-sixty is the regular fare, and you will have to pay it if you go," replied the agent.

"I shust gef you two dollar und no more," said the stranger.

"No; can't do it."

"Vell, den I sthays mit Detroit till I dies," growled the old man, and he went away and walked around the depot. He expected to be called back as he left the window, as a man is often called back to "take it along" when he has been chaffing with a clothing dealer. Such an event did not occur, and, after a few minutes, the old man returned and called out:

"Vell, I gef you two dollars and ten cents."

"No, can't do it," replied the agent.

"Vell, den I don't go, so help me grashus! I have lived in Detroit three years, und shall bay bolice tax, sewer tax, und want to grow up mit dis town und I shall not be swindlet."

He walked off again, looking back to see if the agent would not call him, and, after a stroll around, he returned to the window, threw down some money, and said;

"Vell, dake two dollar and twenty cents and gif me'n dickette."

"My dear sir, can't you understand that we have a schedule of prices here, and that I must go by it?" replied the agent.

"Vell, den, I sthays mit Detroit von dousand yare!" exclaimed the stranger, madder than ever. "I bays bolice taxes und sewer taxes, und I shall see about this by the Sheaf of Bolice."

He walked off again, and as he saw the locomotive backing up to couple on to the train, he went back to the window and said:

"Gif me'n dickette for two dollar and thirty cents and I rides on de platform!"

"Can't do it," said the agent.

"Vell, den, py golly, I spikes to you what I doses! Here is dem two dollar and sixty cents, and I goes to Lansing and never comes back. No, sir, I shall never come back, or I shall come mid de blank road. I bays taxes by dem bolice, and by dem zewers, und I shall show you dat I shall haf nodhings more to do mit dis town!"

He went on the train.

—When it was proposed in the city council of Philadelphia to give King Kalakaua a reception, the motion was referred to the finance committee "amid shouts of laughter." King David passed through the city without stopping, and now the centennialists begin to think that the Sandwich Island department in 1876 will not amount to much.

8 below zero at 4 o'clock this morning.

There will be vesper services this evening at the Unitarian church, commencing at 7.30.

The new ship "Chocorua" will be launched from the yard of Mr. William F. Ferbald next Monday at nine o'clock A. M. The vessel is of about 1150 tons and is owned by C. H. Mendum and others, of this city. Capt. Charles D. Matthews will command her.

A Greenland friend has threatened to furnish us daily with predictions as to the state of the weather hereabouts, boasting that he can calculated "Old Probabilities" out of his boots. We await the first installment.

Schooner Emily S. which recently went ashore at York "Nubble," has been abandoned to the underwriters. It was thought repairs would cost more than the schooner is worth.

Mr. William Plaisted will change his route and time of running his team to-morrow.

A deed of Smutty Nose Island, at the Shoals, dated 1836, conveying the Island to the British government for their use forever, has been discovered, and persons interested are asking whether the U. S. government succeeded to the successorship under the treaty of 1783.

The republican ward committee of ward six are requested to meet at the residence of Mr. J. Horace Kent, 33 Daniel street, next Saturday evening at eight o'clock.

The Wallace Troupe.

The Wallace Sisters had a good house, on the 29th, and gave general satisfaction. Jennie showed some excellent acting at times, but forgets that an audience doesn't always want to be shouted at. The cultivation of a lower tone of stage conversation would add ten-fold to the effect. Mr. Princhard did the reporter capitally; Minnie performed the part of printer's "devil" pleasingly; Maud showed more than the necessary sang froid in the part of "Spotty;" and Coleman did the bypocrite "Maggs" to perfection, dressing the part well; but the chap who deserved the most credit was the moustached individual who assumed the part of "Cleopatra." There is music in him, and such capacity for fun should be allowed full scope. We should like to see him again—as a sort of frontispiece, as it were. The band was a fine one.

Newcastle.

Christmas Eve, the Congregational society held a Christmas festival in the town hall. At half-past seven the exercises began. They were as follows: Voluntaries by Miss Annie Tarlton, and Master Judson Trefethen; song, entitled "Merry Christmas," by the school; prayer, and remarks by E. G. Stone; solo and chorus entitled "Mother's With the Angels Now," by Myra Trefethen, Lizzie Garland, and Vella Urch; duet, "Oh Sing Those Songs," by Myra Batson, and Vella Urch; recitation, by Elmer Upton; song, "Ernestine," by Master Josie Amazeen, Carr Palmer and Willie Preble; solo and chorus, "Daisy Olynn," by Lizzie Garland, Vella Urch and Byron Yeaton; poem by Rev. E. G. Stone, "Annie and Willie's Prayer;" "Christmas Song," by the Misses Rand and Master Elmer Palmer; "A Musical Soliloquy," "We are Nymphs of the Ocean Spray," by Annie Tarlton, and Vella Urch; recitation by Miss Fanny Davidson. The selections were very appropriate for the occasion, and the performers did themselves great credit; particulary Miss Vella Urch, whose rich contralto added much to the effect.

After these exercises presents both abundant and valuable were distributed. Rev. E. G. Stone received an elegant album. Mr. J. P. Cooper was the happy recipient of an illuminated text, a gift from his class as a token of their esteem. Mr. L. Garland was surprised by the presentation of a beautiful picture, from his many friends. At ten "Santa Claus" retired and the company repaired to the tables where hot coffee and other substantial refreshments were served.

W. S.

York.

The Christmas tree at the Christian church in connection with the Sabbath school concert postponed from last Sabbath was a perfect success. The whole affair was started at the instance of Elder H. Short, who, although a new man here, has already won the esteem, affection and pure good will, I think, of every member of the church, society, and the people generally. A donation party assembled at the residence of Rev. Mr. Freeman at Scotland (upper York) last evening and had a pleasant evening—leaving behind them substantial tokens of regard and good will for their pastor.

The "Corner" is in the order of improvement while the village may be said to be retrograding. A new Post Office has been established here under the name of "York Corner," Saml. W. Jenkins, Esq., Postmaster.

A druggist's department has been added to the stock of goods at Geo. F. Plaisted's.

The death of one of our most worthy citizens,—Capt. Charles O. Clark, the Town Clerk became vacant—and the selectmen—by authority vested in them by act of the Legislature of 1874, have appointed Hon. Nathl. G. Marshall to fill the office until another shall be chosen in his stead. Prior to the act beforementioned, a vacancy in that office from any cause must be filled by the calling of a special election for that purpose. Mr. Marshall, like his predecessor, is a first rate penman and having before held the position is eminently qualified, and will leave a record that no man need Better Than Going South.

"Go South! Go South!" is the parrot cry of the friends of the consumptive. It is well meant, but silly. Few of those who are suffering from lung and throat complaints can go South, or would be benefitted if they did go. HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR is worth more than millions of cubic feet of southern air as a remedy for every species of pulmonary complaint. It will cure any cough, any cold, any bronchial complaint and effectually arrest the tendency to consumption.

PIKE'S TOOTH-ACHE DROPS—Cure in one minute.

The Mind Dependent on the Body.

Hypochondria is a far more common malady than is generally supposed. It has its degrees, it is true, progressing from mental depression, or the "blues" to mental hallucination; but they are all forms of the same malady. It is a significant fact that this mental ailment is invariably accompanied by dyspepsia and nervousness, and the fact that it readily yields to the alterative action of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which are peculiarly adapted to the eradication of indigestion and nervous debility, proves that it originates in those complaints. It will thus be seen how dependent the mind is upon the body for the preservation of a cheerful equilibrium, and also how readily the causes of mental gloom may be removed. There is no surer or pleasanter way of shaking off a fit of depression brought on by indigestion, than by swallowing a dose or two of this agreeable medicine.

COOKING and PARLOR STOVES

To be found in any establishment in the State, among which may be found the WYOMING RANGE, which we believe to be superior to anything in the shape of a cooking arrangement yet invented,—having six boiler holes, a large oven, warming closet, dump grate, shelf, sifter and ash pan,—combining all the conveniences found in others and some advantages to be found only in this; it is a quick and ready baker, splendid looking and beautifully ornamented, and in all its appointments is far ahead of anything of the kind in the market; and another important item is, we can sell it at a Very Reasonable Rate and warrant it to do all we say. Call and see it, and be satisfied that this is THE BEST COOKING STOVE IN THE WORLD.

We have for sale the HUB RANGE, sold by those who use it to have no superior.

Also the GRANGER RANGE, a nicely-working stove which we sell at a reasonable price.

For the usual style of Cooking Stoves we have the ELECTRIC COOK improved, and the NEW MAGNET, which cannot be beaten,—and we are bound to sell them at such bargains as will ensure a ready sale.

Parlor Stoves

Of the most approved kinds, such as the Eldorado, of which hundreds have been sold in this vicinity and which everybody likes,—keeps fire the whole season and is very economical. Also the Gen. Grant, Union Gas Burner, etc., etc.

SOAPSTONE STOVES in great variety: Oven Parlor and Air-Tight Stoves of every style, and to be sold as cheap as the cheapest.

We have a few Cook Stoves, new and in perfect order, which were on hand when we bought the co[illegible] which we are bound to close out at any price.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY,

"THE GREAT NATIONAL MAGAZINE."

Enters upon a new year (its ninth volume) with the November number, with broader plans and larger enterprise than ever before, and with the ambition it has maintained from the first, to demonstrate itself to be the brightest, the strongest, the most beautiful, and in every way the BEST POPULAR MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD. During the year it will present such marvels of illustrative engraving as no popular magazine has ever been able to publish. Its writers will be, as they have been, the choice and cho-ens literary men and women of America. Among the attractive features of the year will be a NEW SERIAL NOVEL,

"THE STORY OF SEVEN BAKS,"

by J. G. HOLLAND. A series of papers from various pens on

"AMERICAN LIFE AND SCENERY,"

including descriptive papers on American cities, will open in January with a narrative of WESTERN DISCOVERY AND ADVENTURE, by MAJOR POWELL, whose descent of the Colorado is one of the most famous exploits of Western travel. This series will rival "THE GREAT SOUTH" papers in the magnificence of its illustrations, whilst possessing greater variety and wider interest. Also another illustrated series:

"A FARMER'S VACATION IN EUROPE,"

Six articles recounting the experience of a well-known American farmer and engineer (COLONEL WARING, of Ogden Farm, Newport, R. I.) during a tour through some of the less frequented parts of Western Europe, in the Autumn of 1874.

A series of papers of great interest on

FRENCH LITERATURE AND PARISIAN LIFE

By ALBERT RHODES, with illustrations by French Artists, will appear during the year.

"THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND,"

Or, the "MODERN ROBINSON CRUSOE," JULES VERNE'S latest story, will be continued, with its illustrations. A story, by SAXE HOLM,

"MY TOURMALINE,"

began in November, and will run for three or four months. There will also be other Novelettes and Shorter Stories by leading American and English Story Writers. The Magazine will continue to hold its preeminence in this regard. The Essays, Reviews and Editorial Papers will, as heretofore, employ the ablest pens in both Europe and America, and will keep the Editor's Table, which has grown in favor and in excellence from the first, will be made more attractive, useful, and valuable in its influence on the social life and culture of the American people. THE ETCHINGS will be still further improved, and there will be greater variety in this department.

Scribner's Monthly, by the verdict of both the English and the American press is "THE BEST OF ALL THE MONTHLIES."

The Eight Bound Volumes of Scribner constitute an illustrated Library of more than 6,000 octavo pages. They contain more than a Dozen Splendid Serial Stories, nearly One Hundred Shorter Stories, more than a Thousand Separate Articles, Essays, Poems, Editorials and Reviews, embellished with nearly TWO THOUSAND ILLUSTRATIONS. We have reprinted at great expense the earlier volumes, and now offer a limited number at reduced rates in connection with subscriptions. No other opportunity will probably ever be given to get complete sets of this unrivaled Monthly, the expense of reprinting in small editions being so great as to be prohibitory.

OUR SPECIAL OFFERS.

We offer the eight vols., bound in cloth, sent to any address in the United States, CHARGES PREPAID, with one year's subscription, for $36; the set, charges NOT paid, $16. ST. NICHOLAS FOR 1874.

A Book for Boys and Girls.

Of this book CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER writes:

"In the bound volume of ST. NICHOLAS, with its glory of red and gold, we have a permanent addition to the literature of the young. Never before has so much literary and artistic talent co-operated in the service of children. It is a continual educator of their taste and of their morals. Parents who do not see how it can be made any better, and if the children do not like it I think it is time to begin to change the kind of children in this country."

St. Nicholas for 1875.

The prospectus of the second volume shows that there is to be no falling off, but an increase in its literary and pictorial attractions. Among the attractive features are TWO SPLENDID SERIAL STORIES,

"THE YOUNG SURVEYOR,"

by J. T. Trowbridge, author of the Jack Hazard Stories, etc.

"Eight Cousins."

by Louisa M. Alcott, author of "Little Women," etc. The peculiar features of ST. NICHOLAS, which have conduced so largely to its popularity, will be kept up with spirit.

Short and easy stories in FRENCH, GERMAN and LATIN for translation will appear occasionally, while JACK-IN-THE-PULPIT, the LETTER-BOX, and the RIDDLE BOX will continue to be full of fun, and the department for very young readers will be enlarged.

Bayard Taylor and other distinguished travellers will give Stories of Foreign Countries.

Mr. Ridding will continue his series of delightful and instructive Papers on Natural Subjects.

New writers, in addition to our present large corps of contributors will give young people of all tastes, Poems, Jingles, Stories, Sketches, and Papers on History, Biography, Travel, Adventure, Natural History, Out-door and In-door Sport, Science, Art, Handicraft, Kindergarten Games, Literature, Popular Science, with a hearty sprinkling of fun throughout the volume.

Price, $300 a year, but up to Jan. 1st, we will send the Twelve Numbers for the year just closed (Vol. I.) for only $2.00. The same, elegantly bound in red and gold, will be sent, charges paid, for $4.00.

One year's subscription and twelve back numbers, $5.00. One year's subscription and Volume One, bound as above, sent, charges paid, for $6.00.

THE SUN.

DAILY AND WEEKLY FOR 1875.

The approach of the Presidential election gives unusual importance to the events and developments of 1875. We shall endeavor to describe them fully, faithfully and fearlessly.

THE WEEKLY SUN has now attained a circulation of over seventy thousand copies. Its readers are found in every State and Territory, and its quality is well known to the public. We shall not only endeavor to keep it fully up to the old standard, but to improve and add to its variety and power.

THE WEEKLY SUN will continue to be a thorough newspaper. All the news of the day will be found in it, condensed when unimportant, at full length when of moment, and always, we trust, treated in a clear, interesting and instructive manner.

It is our aim to make the WEEKLY SUN the best family newspaper in the world. It will be full of entertaining and appropriate reading of every sort, but will print nothing to offend the most scrupulous and delicate taste. It will always contain the most interesting stories and romances of the day, carefully selected and legibly printed.

The Agricultural Department is a prominent feature in the WEEKLY SUN, and its articles will always be found fresh and useful to the farmer.

The number of men interested in politics is increasing, and the WEEKLY SUN is their paper especially. It belongs to no party, and obeys no dictation, contending for principle, and for the election of the best men. It exposes the corruption that disgraces the country and threatens the overthrow of republican institutions. It has no fear of knaves, and seeks no favors from their supporters.

The markets of every kind and the fashions are regularly reported in its columns.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN is one dollar a year for a sheet of eight pages, and fifty-six columns. As this barely pays the expenses of paper and printing, we are not able to make any discount or allow any premium to friends who may make special efforts to extend its circulation. Under the new law, which requires payment of postage in advance, one dollar a year, with twenty cents the cost of prepaid postage added, is the rate of subscription. It is not necessary to get up a club in order to have the WEEKLY SUN at this rate. Anyone who sends one dollar and twenty cents will get the paper, postpaid, for a year.

We have no traveling agents.

THE WEEKLY SUN.—Eight pages, fifty-six columns. Only $1.20 a year, postage prepaid. No discounts from this rate.

THE DAILY SUN.—A large four-page newspaper of twenty-eight columns. Daily circulation over 130,000. All the news for 2 cents. Subscription price, by carrier, $5 cents a month, or $6.50 a year. To clubs of 10 or over, a discount of 20 per cent.

Pulmocine Cordial.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875—EIGHTH YEAR.

THE ALDINE,

—THE—

Art Journal of America,

ISSUED MONTHLY.

"A magnificent conception, magnificently carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great native artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE, while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rivals of a similar class, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume cannot duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow or exclusive sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it does not confine itself entirely to the reproduction of our native talent. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Accordingly, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

"Man's Unselfish Friend",

Will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells us that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the wards of each series as made, are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.
